Game For Boy Scouts.

The game of "spot your staves" is played in the same way as an ordinary paper chase, except that the hares are provided with a number of small circular gummed labels, such as are used by shopkeepers for marking the prices on goods.

Every time the trail is dropped not more than two labels should be dropped with it. As soon as the trail is picked up by a hound he blows his whistle. The other hounds immediately proceed to the spot and search for the two labels. When found they should be stuck on to the finder's staff, and at the end of the chase the scout with the most labels wins.

This tends to keep up the interest of the smaller scouts, who otherwise would soon be inclined to lag behind.—Scout.

Conundrums.

Why is a list of musical composers like a saucepan? Because it is incomplete without a Handel.

Why is the letter A like 12 o'clock? Because it comes in the middle of day.

When is a newspaper like a delicate child? When it appears weekly.

In what key should a man propose to his girl? Be mine ah. (B minor).

Why does a conductor punch a hole in your transfer? To let you pass through.

If all the big waters were dried up what would Neptune say? I really haven't an ocean (a notion).

Weather Vanes.

Our town is full of weather vanes
  That glitter in the sun;
I've watched them often windy days
  As round and round they've spun.
There's one small eagle; there's a horse;
  I've counted seven cows,
And ships with golden sails all set,
  And little shining prows.
Sometimes they hardly move a bit,
  All pointing to the west,
Or else the east or north or south,
  Just where the wind thinks best.
I 'magine when I wake at night
  And hear a creaking vane,
Perhaps it wants to rest and so
  It's trying to complain.
Some day, when there's a splendid sun
  And wind to blow and blow,
I'd like to climb the highest hill
  And see our town below.

A WILD WEST GIRL ABROAD

By DELA BREWERTON

Helen Gorton was a ranch girl. She was born on her father's ranch and lived on it till she was fourteen years of age, then was sent east to school. She was no great student, not because it was hard for her to learn, but because she was pining for the wild life of the west.

At eighteen she returned to her home and resumed her former habits. She was an excellent shot and rider and could stand any amount of exposure. By a campfire under a tree she slept more comfortably than in a bed.

Helen was obstinate. When she was twenty and announced to her father that she was going to Europe to visit those countries of which she had heard so much he knew that it would be useless to attempt to stop her.

When Helen departed she was escorted to a railroad station some twenty miles distant from her home by a dozen or more cowboys, each one of whom would have attacked a regiment of wildcats to win a smile from her. When the train moved off they were drawn up in line beside the track on horseback and fired a salute from their revolvers, which she returned from one she carried slung to her waist under the skirt of her dress.

Helen first saw the old world in the Pillars of Hercules, two mountains, one on either side of the strait of Gibraltar, and landed not many miles from the base of Vesuvius. When a month had passed she had not yet left Naples. She made acquaintances rapidly, but so unconventional were her ways in that land of conventionality for women that members of her own sex, even though they understood her and looked upon her as being a thoroughly good girl, did not dare countenance her.

This troubled her. Why it was that innumerable men were markedly attentive to her and few women seemed to care to be intimate with her she could not understand. One elderly American lady who realized her innocence endeavored to caution her by telling her that in a land full of criminals it was not safe to go about alone. Helen did not know what fear was and, misunderstanding the purport of the caution, continued to go about without a chaperon.

But one day her eyes were opened very suddenly and very wide. While visiting Pompeii with a party she overheard an Italian prince make disparaging remarks about "that American girl," it being plain that he referred to her. She was not only wounded in spirit, but indignant, the former feeling giving place to the latter. She had once confronted a grizzly bear, which, for reasons best known to itself, retreated on sight, but had been brought down by a ball from her rifle. She did not regard Prince Leonardo di Giuda as formidable as the grizzly, and she was not sufficiently versed in foreign ways to know that it was not considered a lady's part to protect her good name by a man's methods.

Helen concealed the fact that she had overheard the slurring remark and finished her visit to Pompeii without any one knowing that she was hot with indignation. On the way back to Naples she asked one of the gentlemen of the party, an Italian, what he would do to a man who had spoken contemptuously of a woman he loved and respected. He replied that he would call the man out under the code duello.

The next morning Di Giuda received a note written in a feminine hand and signed "H. G.," asking him to meet her in a certain retired spot that she named on the outskirts of Naples that night at 11 o'clock. Without the signed initials Di Giuda would have looked upon the note as a trap to enable some one to rob him. He was not sure the note was genuine; but, with his opinion of Helen Gorton, he thought it very probable it was. He decided to grant the interview.

At the hour named, well armed to guard against treachery, he drove up in a carriage to the appointed place and, alighting, walked into a field dimly lighted. No one was near, and, realizing the character of many of the lower grade of people of Naples, he kept his hand on his revolver. Suddenly a figure stepped out from behind a bush and, throwing back a cloak, revealed a woman.

"Signorina Gorton?" exclaimed De Giuda.

"I am."

"I assure you I feel highly honored at your request to meet you. What can I do for you?"

"Sign this paper."

She handed him a paper and produced a light from under her cloak by which he read it. It was an acknowledgment that he was beneath contempt to have attacked a woman's reputation without cause.

"I will not sign that," he said.

"Very well," replied Helen, stepping from him some ten paces; "you may draw. I will not shoot you down like a dog."

The man attempted to argue, but a bullet grazing his cheek admonished him that the case was serious. He would gain nothing by fighting a woman. He chose the lesser of two evils—he signed.

What use Helen made of the paper is not known, but there was a sudden revulsion in her favor. She was thereafter accepted by her own sex and courted by men. When she returned to America she married a ranchman.

The following history of a STRAIGHT LIFE POLICY with profits reserved for 20 years is interesting:

Pol. No. 27619. Amount: $1000. Premium $20.95. Age. 30

Total premiums paid from 1st February, 1890, to February, 1910 (20 years) $419.00

The premiums were then permanently reduced by the accumulated profits to $10.20 per year; this he paid for the past five years .. 51.00

Total cost in 25 years 470.00

Now his profits for the past five years reduce the premium to $2.00 per year.

Had this man taken a Non-Participating Straight Life he would have paid during the same period 475.00

and would still have to pay $19.00 per year as long as he lives, while his participating policy has not only cost him less in the aggregate, but his future premium is only $2.00 per year, subject to further reductions, as compared with $19.00 per year on the Non-Participating plan.

Love and the Pay Patient

A Sacrifice and a Big Success

By L. E. EBERLE

He signed his name Robert W. Edwards, M. D., and had paid several greatly valued dollars to have it put on a neat brass plate. But really he was Dr. Bob, though he never heard himself called thus till after the very end of the story.

It was Miss Eleanor Blake who called him Dr. Bob. She was careful to let none but her own ears hear the words. When she spoke to him or of him she was most punctilious and respectful.

Miss Eleanor Blake was Dr. Bob's office nurse. Their attitudes toward one another were impeccably professional, but by a strange coincidence Dr. Bob also dropped the formal "Miss Blake" when conversing to his own inner consciousness concerning her. She became "Nellie" on these occasions, which were numerous.

Miss Nurse Blake was well born. She had perceptions. It went to her wholesome heart to see with what smiling poise Dr. Bob waited—and waited. He did not adopt bravado. He never grew embarrassed or apologetic, nor did he flinch in meeting her eyes day after day in the empty rooms.

So she loved him, quite hopelessly, she assured herself, for his quiet, professional manner never broke through once.

Then came the first call! Eleanor answered the telephone and kept all the elation that was bumping up and down in her heart out of her quiet, businesslike voice as she reported to Dr. Bob. She was only sorry that the patient had not come to the office so that she might have the glory of ushering him in.

Dr. Edwards hurried to the address she gave him. He said, "I don't think I shall be long, Miss Blake," and she said, "Very well, Dr. Edwards."

The address did not indicate a very good part of the city. He could not expect a rich call from that quarter. But it was a beginning—a beginning.

It took Dr. Bob some time to reach the address given him, for it led him by devious ways to an old office building, up many flights of rickety stairs and to a dark room at the end of a hall. There was no response when he knocked, but a frowsy boy from the next office appeared.

"You Doct' Edwards?" he asked. Dr. Bob admitted that he was.

"He told me t' give you this here," said the boy and handed him a folded paper, then disappeared. Dr. Edwards opened the paper. The words "Fooled again" and a slangy sentence or two greeted his eyes. He went downstairs, wondering which of the fellows at the clinic had devised the subtle joke.

Dr. Bob returned quietly to his office. Eleanor, as she saw him return so soon, with his face more quietly composed than ever, conjectured that he had found his patient beyond human help. She was sorry on his account.

She tried to work off her vague feeling of sympathy, for she did not know what, by going into the operating room and cleaning again the often cleaned but never used instruments. She stayed at her work till after hours, till suddenly the consciousness that she was alone and lonely came over her.

She finished her task quickly, then quietly opened the door into Dr. Bob's office.

Dr. Bob was sitting at his desk, his arms across it and his head on his arms. There was a stillness about him, a look of having been motionless forever, that brought Eleanor to his side with one terrified dart. She seized his hands, and he looked up at her. His stillness was pain, not—what she had feared.

That foolish joke had brought down crushingly on his head all the burden of all that waiting and hoping, and the sight of it took away every conscious thought in Eleanor save that the man she loved was suffering.

She took his hands in hers, whispering in a mechanical way: "Let me help. Let me help. Let me help." But she was scarcely aware of it.

Dr. Bob looked at her with light in his eyes. He laid his hands on her shoulders and gazed down at her with a face wise and loving.

"When the first patient comes," he said.

Eleanor decided against the new summer suit. She was saving very strenuously, for she had a purpose in view.

One day she counted her money. Then she put on her hat and went to call on a cousin. The cousin had married poor, had a swarm of children and was chronically ill. When Eleanor came away the cousin said she'd go to the doctor the next day and swore between kisses, hugs and tearful maunderings that she'd never, never tell who had sent her.

The patient—the first patient—was to arrive the next day. The weather was the hot, soggy kind that enervates a spring feverish world in May. The saving that Eleanor had done had meant much overwork and late hours. She was physically at her limpest and nervously at her most uneven. She was haggard with anxiety and was made a coward by each footstep sounding near the door.

The hour came for Rhoda, but no Rhoda came with the hour. Eleanor watched eagerly from the window. And then she saw Rhoda at last.

Rhoda was stealing swiftly along the opposite side of the street, in her hand a big box containing the chief treasure from the window of a big milliner's store, the purse that had contained Eleanor's savings clutched as tightly in her hand as if it still had in it the money that had been tempted from her.

Eleanor obeyed a blind impulse. With one reckless rush she left the office door and plunged into the stream of passing vehicles and across the street.

A moment later she was lying white on the pavement, blood trickling from her shoulder, and a crowd gathering about her and the panic stricken chauffeur whose machine had run her down. Then Dr. Bob was bending over her and raising her tenderly, lovingly, in loving, strong arms.

When she came to again she was lying on a couch in an operating room that was very familiar to her, with implements about her that she had cleaned herself day after day for the patients that never came.

She lay still and white till Dr. Edwards began to wonder at her slow recovery. He did not know what wondrous dreams had suddenly turned to ice that weighted and froze and broke her. But he did know that the pulse was gaining no strength, the cheeks were bloodless and the eyes listless and dull, and he did know that he would like to fling aside his remedies and try how kisses would redden the pale lips.

Then miraculously there was a wave of crimson over her face, her lips parted with the very breath of inspiration, her eyes burned victoriously, and Eleanor turned to him. She stretched up her arms to him irresistibly.

"Your first patient! Your first patient! You have one now! Your promise, your promise!"

"But," said Dr. Bob when he was capable of recollecting anything, "it was to be my first pay patient."

Before he could prevent Eleanor lifted herself, bandaged shoulder and all, from the operating couch and stood before him more like Diana triumphant than the pale creature who had lain there. She was counting the money in the purse at her girdle, but as she counted her face fell and despair again overcame her. Then—inspiration!

"With my professional percentage deducted!" she exclaimed and fell to counting again. But even now—must she lose? Then—inspiration again! "Will you take stamps?" she asked, laughing, embarrassed, holding out in a wondrously mixed handful the amount of the fee to Dr. Bob, helpless between love and laughter.

"Nellie, Nellie!" said Dr. Bob.

Maggie in her excitement popped her head in without knocking.

"It's from Mrs. Martin's—the rich Mrs. Martin's," she said breathlessly, "and she wants you immediate, sir."

He Fought With Mosby.

General von Mamow, commanding the Ninth German army corps, in his younger years was a member of Mosby's guerrilla band. He came to this country in 1863, a young Prussian lieutenant of cavalry seeking adventure and enlisted under Mosby. He was shot through the lungs in 1864 and eventually returned home to resume his army career.

Mechanical Cotton Picker.

Should a mechanical cotton picker, recently invented, prove practical it will revolutionize the industry in this country. It is a huge contrivance, driven by one man, much as an automobile is operated, and claim is made that it will pick 95 per cent of the cotton without injury to the unripe bolls or the plants.

CENSORING CUPID.

The Girl Knew Exactly What to Do With the Letter.

The young woman in the fur toque frowned and shook her head.

"George thinks he's awfully cute," she said.

The other girl looked up.

"What has George done now?"

"He has sent me a censored proposal of marriage. What do you think of that? I suppose he has an idea that it won't be admitted as evidence against him. Want to see the thing?"

"Of course I do."

"There it is."

This is what the other girl saw:

"Dear Miss ——: My —— for you has been increasing so rapidly of late that —— cannot resist the opportunity of asking you to be —— wife. If you should marry —— tomorrow —— would be the happiest of men. Of course you understand that —— await impatiently for your reply. Do not keep —— in suspense. Yours, sincerely, ——. (Name deleted)."

The other girl handed back the letter.

"That's the worst thing I ever saw," she said. "Whatcha going to do about it?"

The first girl laughed.

"Fill in the blanks and accept him, of course."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Points for Mothers

Care of the Children's Feet.

Before you put on a child's stockings in the morning pass the hand over the bottom of his foot to brush off any particles of dirt or foreign matter that may have adhered to each moist little member in the scamper across the floor after the bath.

You will be surprised to see how often you will find something that would have been a source of irritation if it had been allowed to remain. Before you put on the shoes shake them well to be sure that they contain nothing that will irritate the feet.

Look carefully at the feet at night to see if any red or inflamed spot testifies to a badly fitting shoe or a too large wrinkled stocking. Wet and stretch the shoe if it seems to press upon some particular spot.

Watch for ingrowing toe nails and insert a bit of cotton under the corner of the nail at the first indication of trouble.

Teach the children as they grow older to take the same precautions, and they may avoid at least some of the minor ills of life. We all know how much discomfort to the square inch we can get from an undue pressure on the foot.

Let us remember that when a healthy child is fretful there is pain or discomfort somewhere and it is "up to us" to find and remedy it.

Self Reliance Important.

Occasionally one finds a parent who when a child asks for help in solving a problem will say, "Do it yourself." Often a child keeps working away at a problem which he cannot possibly solve because he has not been trained properly. To say to such a child "Do it yourself" is often to discourage him and to cause him to waste time.

There is a middle course between doing nothing for the learner and doing everything for him. This middle course is to cause him by appropriate questions to take the necessary steps to help himself. This is really what teaching means, whether it be in the home or in the school.

Telling is not teaching, and refusing to give any assistance is not teaching. But to guide and stimulate the learner so that he can work his own way through problems is teaching.

Reasonable Punishments.

Whatever reproach or privation we impose upon a child must be clearly connected with the offense. The child should always know just exactly why it is being punished. Moreover, the punishment should not be so long deferred that the child can lose the connection between its offense and the punishment.

Nothing that affects a child's health, such as interference with meals or with sleep, should be used as a punishment. Nor should useful work or study be discredited by being used as a means of punishment.

We must remember that punishment is like medicine. There is one punishment that fits all cases or all children. Each case must be studied by itself, and the punishment must be made to fit the offense and also the offender.

Plenty of Sleep.

Nine o'clock should be bed hour for all school children, with Friday and Saturday nights as the only possible exceptions. The hours from the conclusion of supper to retiring time should be sufficient for preparing lessons. Then, too, if the child comes in from play at 5 or half past there should be an hour before supper in which to study.

It is an excellent rule to forbid the reading of any story books outside the school course, except on Saturdays and Sundays. The child who is fond of reading is apt to become so engrossed in a book that he will neglect exercise and study for the completion of the book. But if a strict rule is made and enforced that no reading shall be done through the week except that which is necessary for lessons the child will find time for fresh air and sleep.

Children's Shoes.

When next you buy a pair of shoes for the children take a hatpin or the point of a pair of scissors and score the soles and heels diagonally in lines about half an inch apart. Then start at the toe again and cross these lines, and you will find the child will not slip so often. If for any reason your children do fall and bump their foreheads rub the place at once with salted butter and there will be very little discoloration.

Prolonging Dolly's Life.

To strengthen a doll's head first remove the head from the body, then fill it with plaster of paris mixed to a smooth paste with water. Stand it to one side with shoulders up until perfectly dry and then fasten it on to the body. A doll that goes to sleep cannot be treated in this way, and one that has an open mouth and teeth will require a strip of paper pasted on the inside before pouring in the paste.

HIS BADGE OF COURAGE.

Why the Soldier Was Rather Pleased With His Face Wound.

Writing of his experiences in the war zone in Europe a New York Sun correspondent says that one of the strange things he noted was the attitude of soldiers toward wounds. They are quite happy to have bad wounds about the face and head, much preferring disfiguring face wounds to lesser wounds in body or legs.

A train of wounded was on its way to southern France. When it halted at Boulogne those of the wounded who were able got out to walk up and down the platform. Among these was one whose face could hardly be called by that name. One eye was gone and the other was badly swollen until he could hardly see. Bandages covered all but discolored parts of his face.

"Your poor dear," sympathized an Englishwoman who approached him timidly. "You poor, poor boy!"

"Madame," replied the soldier with as much pride and clearness as the bandages would permit, "don't pity me. Pity my friends in the train there who got it where it won't show."

The Englishwoman couldn't understand.

"Why—why—why," she stammered, "I thought you wouldn't like to be disfigured."

"Disfigured!" the soldier replied. "I'm not disfigured. I'm decorated!"

Lonely Herschel Island.

Herschel island, in an inaccessible arctic region, comes into contact with the rest of the world only once a year. The schooner Ruby left Vancouver for that Hudson bay's station last July, carrying besides provisions and supplies newspapers and magazines covering a whole year. It is customary there to read these papers in turn, one every day, beginning with the earliest.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Nosebleed.

A physician gives the following instructions for checking nose bleed: Grasp the nostrils with the thumb and index finger. Apply the pressure as close to the bony part of the nose as possible. Drop the head gently forward. Breathe through the mouth. The pressure may reach the bleeding vessel. If not, the nose will fill with blood, which will clot in a few minutes. After the clot has had time to form (ten to fifteen minutes) gradually release the pressure. Leave the clot undisturbed for an hour or more.

Obliging Conductor.

The fussy lady had noticed that the rude man sitting beside her on the street car had expectorated on the floor. The fussy lady immediately signaled the conductor, and that official came in to see what was wanted.

"Do you allow spitting in this car?" demanded the fussy lady.

"Well, no," replied the conductor. "But you can come out on the platform if you want to, lady."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Why She Prized It.

At a whist party an unmarried lady won a consolation prize which proved to be a small dressed doll in male attire. Unwrapping the toy, the donor discovered that the head had been broken off.

"Never mind!" exclaimed the recipient, good naturedly. "I will prize it all the more on that account. It's the first man that ever lost his head over me in all my life."

PUT BLAME ON ENGLAND

Berlin Thinks She Will Purposely Sink Neutral Ships

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, Feb. 16. — An official statement issued today reads: "Insomuch as it is to the interest of Britain that conflicts arise between Germany and neutral powers it is thought in German shipping circles that English submarines, in order to bring about this end, may purposely sink one or more neutral ships.

"It is known also in shipping circles that Great Britain has laid large quantities of mines against German submarines."

BERLIN REPORT ON FIGHTING

Immense Losses in Russian Poland Are Denied

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Berlin, Feb. 16. — The German staff today gave out a report on progress of the war reading as follows: "In the western theatre of war, attacks of the enemy upon a trench taken by Germans from the English near St. Eloi were yesterday repulsed. Otherwise there have been no important development on the west. In the eastern theatre, fighting and pursuits on and beyond the east Prussian frontier are proceeding very favorably. In Poland north of the Vistula German troops have occupied Biltsk and Plock after a short engagement. About one thousand prisoners were taken.

South of the Vistula there have been no important developments. Foreign newspapers are publishing most absurd rumors concerning the immense German losses in the fighting to east of Bolimow, Russian Poland, which began in February. It can be said that German losses in these attacks were small in proportion to the successes attained.

APPEAL FOR COMFORTS FOR CANADIAN TROOPS

Comes With First Official Announcement of Their Arrival in France

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ottawa, Feb. 16.—The first official announcement that Canadian troops are in France, was made this morning and carries with it an appeal which will doubtless evoke prompt and ready response from all parts of Canada.

Sir Geo. Perley cables urgently for a large stock of field comforts for the use of Canadian troops. All kinds of warm clothing are needed and Sir George undertakes through the Canadian War Association to see that the requirements of Canadian troops shall be met as far as possible. He is in constant communication with commanding officers and in a position to know the nature of supplies required.

The Canadian War Association however cannot supply comforts unless it receives them.

BRITISH REPLY TO THE SUBMARINE OUTRAGES

First Lord of the Admiralty Says Every Ounce of Sea Pressure Will be Clamped on to Cut off Germany's Supply of Food — Navy Alone Can Decide Issue of War.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—Great Britain has finally decided to clamp on every ounce of sea pressure to choke off Germany's food supply in retaliation for German submarine policy. This announcement by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in the Commons yesterday was greeted with loud cheers.

The announcement of the Government's declaration with regard to Germany's food supplies came almost coincidentally with the receipt of two despatches from the United States, one saying that Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, had informed the Washington Government that Germany was willing to abandon her submarine policy, provided Great Britain ceased interfering with cargoes of foodstuffs, and the other saying that he again had advised neutral shipping to avoid these waters which Germany had declared would become a dangerous military area three days hence.

Mr. Churchill disclosed for the first time the total naval losses as the result of the war. These, he said, were upwards of 5,000 officers and men, a majority of them victims of submarines. Germany's naval losses were about the same.

Concerning submarines, Mr Churchill outlined what Great Britain purposed to do as a counter to the German policy. In view of what he styled "Piracy and murder," Mr. Churchill said it was incumbent on Britain for the first time to apply "the full force" of her naval power. A formal declaration to this effect, he added, would be made forthwith.

Dealing with the blockade plans, he said:

"We have not yet stopped the importation of food into Germany, but the time has come to reconsider the situation. The allied Governments will probably make a declaration of action, the effect of which will be to bring the full pressure of the British naval power on Germany.

"The pressure of the navy itself could decide the issue of this war."

"The task lying before us is both anxious and grave. We are now to be the object of warfare never before practiced by a civilized power. So far we have not attempted to stop the importation of food. We have not prevented neutral ships from trading directly with German ports. We have allowed German exports in neutral ships to pass unchallenged. But the time is near when the enjoyment of these immunities by a state which as a matter of deliberate policy has placed herself outside of international obligations must be reconsidered. A further declaration on the part of the allied Governments will be made, which will have the effect of applying for the first time the full force of naval pressure on the enemy.

"It must not be supposed that because the attack is extraordinarily good a reply cannot be made. Losses no doubt will be incurred but I believe no vital injury can be done. If merchant skippers act in the spirit of the captain of the Laertes, and observe certain precautions, losses will be confined within manageable limits, even at the outset, when the enemy naturally will make his maximum efforts. Our reply will perhaps be not ineffective.

"When war broke out the German army was not more ready for offensive operations than the British fleet was for the national defence. On mobilization we were able to man every ship in the navy and many old vessels in addition. Scores of armed merchantmen were also provided."

Every ship in the navy which was fit for service, as well as new ships, which were being built for foreign Governments and armed merchantmen, had been fully manned.

During the past three months, said Mr. Churchill, 7,981 British merchant vessels traversed the sea in safety.

Referring to Vice-Admiral Jellicoe's command of the sea with his fleet as "silent, unsleeping and as yet unchallenged." Mr. Churchill said that the Admiralty had moved men at home and abroad, including Belgian and French troops and the wounded to the number of 1,000,000, without an accident or the loss of a life.

FOURTEENTH LEGISLATURE

Speech From the Throne Refers to Death of Sir James Whitney

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Feb. 16.—The fourteenth legislature of Ontario was inaugurated this afternoon by Hon. J. S. Hendrie, Lieut.-Governor. The speech from the Throne devoted a good deal of attention to the loss sustained by the province in the death of Sir James Whitney and to the situation caused by the war and steps which had been taken to relieve it. The duty of increasing the food output of the province was touched upon.

Shrinkage of revenue and unexpected demands upon the treasury caused by war have resulted in a considerable deficit and the legislature will be occupied in considering means to restore the financial equilibrium. The speech was of very great length.

TO EXAMINE DAVIES GIRL

Sanity of Massey's Slayer Will be Tested

WHY SHE SHOT

TORONTO, Feb. 16. — "We find that Charles A. Massey came to his death on Feb. 8, 1915, as a result of a pistol shot which we, the jury, believe was fired by Carrie Davies, and that the aforesaid Carrie Davies did feloniously and with malice aforethought kill and slay the said Charles A. Massey."

The above was the verdict reached by Chief Coroner Johnson's jury at the morgue last night in the inquiry into the Walmer road tragedy on Feb. 8. Some evidence of the girl's condition and history was submitted, but Dr. Johnson told the jury that it was not for them to consider it. He afterwards said that the girl would be examined by an alienist as to her mental condition. "The Government will see fit to inquire into her mental condition," he declared, "and largely upon the findings of that investigation depends whether Carrie Davies will be tried for murder."

In the girl's statement, read by Inspector Kennedy, she said Massey had made improper advances to her.

The following is the statement made public by the inspector last evening:—

Q.—"What is your name?"

A.—"Carrie Davies."

Q.—"How old are you?"

A.—"Eighteen."

Q.—How long have you been in Canada?"

A.—Two years.

Q.—Where were you born?

A.—In England.

Q.—Where have you worked since coming to Canada?

A.—At Mrs. Massey's, 169 Walmer Road.

Q.—Have you been employed there ever since?

A.—Yes.

Q.—How many are there in the Massey family?

A.—Three—Mr. C. A. Massey, Mrs. Massey and one boy.

Q.—At what time did this shooting affair take place?"

A.—About twenty-five minutes past six.

Q.—Where did it take place?

EQUIPMENT IN LONG SERVICE

According to Evidence Given by H. O. Fisk Before Board of Arbitrators

That some hundreds of meters manufactured for the Peterborough Light and Power Company turned out complete failures and had to be scrapped constituted surprising evidence elicited from H. O. Fisk under examination yesterday afternoon at the Board of Arbitration proceedings. The trouble with the meters was that they were prone to incorrectly register and often were away out either registering too much or too little.

One whole afternoon was given over to a searching examination of Mr. H. O. Fisk, electrical expert, formerly with the Peterborough Light and Power Co. The examining counsel for the company was not finished with Mr. Fisk when adjournment was made and he was the first witness called when the board sat again at ten o'clock this morning. Mr. Fisk was questioned about prices of the poles, transformers, meters, arc lamps and what in his opinion was the cost of certain fixtures that belonged to the company during the time he was connected with it. Solicitor W. N. Tilley, K.C., was not inclined to hesitate at all in questioning Mr. Fisk. Little tilts between the examining counsels enlivened proceedings and also made the arguments drag. Mr. M. K. Cowan, K.C., questioned Mr. Fisk very closely concerning the company's poles and what was the average life of a pole. W. N. Tilley, K.C., objected to the latter question on the ground that it was expert testimony. Mr. Fisk said from ten to twenty-four years was the average usefulness of a pole. When the poles were taken down in 1914 Mr. Fisk found that four of seven were completely gone, or rotted entirely off about two feet below the surface. The other three were not fit to be put up again. The Great Northwest telegraph poles were taken down a couple of years ago. They were erected in 1890.

Arc Lights Nearly Done.

Regarding the arc lamps at present in use Mr. Fisk said they were in use when he came to Peterborough, and that was in 1866. There were one hundred and sixty, but they were pretty well worn out. They were not manufactured now, and when a new lamp was needed, they were obtained from second hand dealers. They had been bought from Thompson and Son, Montreal, at $4.20 apiece. When they went wrong it necessitated certain fittings being made at the Peterborough Lock works. They could be made on special order but were generally inferior. The carbons used in them seemed to be short lived.

Regarding the transformers some of them dated back to 1901. After 1903 type H transformers were bought from the Canadian General Electric Company.

The meters that were in use were installed in 1898 and were practically all in use now. They were Thompson meters but were now obsolete. Since 1897 some Peterborough meters had been installed. The Peterborough meters were not made now as they had proved a failure. The Peterborough meters were liable to register too much or too little. That was only one trouble. A good many of them were liable to stop altogether. There were 204 that had to be scrapped.

Examined by Mr. Tilley as to why he came to keep his account book since 1909, Mr. Fisk said he kept every book he ever owned. The poles were badly rotted. He didn't give Mr. Fife his opinion as to how long the poles would last when making the inventory with Mr. Fife. He might have expressed his opinion to Mr. Fife.

Considerable argument occurred between Mr. Fisk and Mr. Tilley in which the latter endeavored to have Mr. Fisk admit that he gone around with Mr. Fife and examined the poles purposely to express his opinion on the length of time they would last.

Poles Were Not Safe.

Mr. Fisk had to admit that a pole was not safe, if it had been erected since 1898. Poles would not last ten years longer with perfect assurance of safety.

Regarding the erecting of a pole which was given as costing $2.75 for everything—a pole at St. Paul's Church—Mr. Fisk said he thought it pretty near correct although he had not done the work himself. It was performed by Mr. Heattie, one of the foremen.

Mr. Fisk was questioned about how he figured actual cost of digging post holes. He said it was by the actual time consumed in doing it. One man could dig three or four post holes a day.

Mr. Tilley went on to question Mr. Fisk about the quality of poles bought by the company. Mr. Fisk explained how poor poles accumulated through poor ones being found amid those purchased.

Re-examination of Mr Fisk was commenced at ten o'clock this morning in the arbitration proceedings at the court house. He was questioned with regard to the amount of circuit wire on the Peterborough Light and Power company system. In 1889 there was 10,000 pounds of wire in existence. Between 1889 and 1898 there were 1650 pounds of arc circuit wire added. The total amount of all kinds of wire in existence at the end of 1898 was 26,490 pounds.

Mr. Fisk said a considerable amount of wire was bought in 1902.

Mr. Tilley questioned Mr. Fisk about the Murray street system and equipment. There were four arc machines there in 1881. There were four in actual operation now. They were all bought before the Murray Street power house was built. There was another machine there now of more recent make, bought in 1889 or 1890. Four were in use, but the fields on the fifth were defective. The others were in rather poor condition. The fifth was scrapped and practically out of business.

With regard to the switchboard installed there Mr. Fisk said the original one was of wood, but in 1900 a marble slab switchboard was installed. The fittings were the original ones used on the old wooden switchboard. The belting in the Murray Street was ancient dating back to 1888. In the London Street station there was a 45-watt Edison generator there bought in 1888. Mr. Fisk remembered the date because that was the year of the World's Fair at Chicago.

Examined by Mr. Tilley, the witness said he could not say what the cost of rebabbiting No. 5 arc machine would be. Possibly $25 would cover it.

Mr. Tilley reverted his examination back to arc lamps. Twenty-four arc lamps cost $4.20 each. In 1911 there were fifteen more lamps bought. Some arc lamps were listed at $40 each.

Mr. Tilley asked Mr. Fisk if he considered the company's price of transformers according to the inventory, was too high. He refused

PRISONERS EXCHANGED

Officers and Men Are Given Their Liberty

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 16. — Exchange of disabled German and British prisoners began today. Two incapacitated German officers and ninety-two soldiers sailed today from Folkestone for Holland. Simultaneously seven British officers and ninety-three soldiers blind or maimed, arrived in Holland, weary, but cheerful, the despatch says, at the prospect of returning to England.

REPORTS OF YEAR'S WORK

At Congregational Meeting of George St. Methodists

The larger portion of George St. Church congregation turned out last evening to the anniversary gathering, when reports from the church organizations were presented and an enjoyable musical entertainment provided. Rev. W. R. Young, D.D., of Toronto, made a very suitable address partly patriotic in tone. Refreshments were also supplied.

The pastor presided. Rev. J. N. Clarry brought greetings from St. James' Methodist Church and Rev. Mr. Wilson of Charlotte St. Church was also present.

The Epworth League report was read by Mr. C. S. Thompson, the president. Mrs. G. Carruthers presented the report of the Ladies' Aid Society and Mrs. James Kendry the reports from the W.M.S., the Fidelis Mission Band and the Pearl Mission Circle.

Felix Brownscombe read the church treasurer's report which showed receipts of $6,670.94, disbursements of $6,521.03, leaving a balance of $51.09. The total amount received for missions was $2,760.29.

The report of the Sunday School was given by Superintendent S. R. Armstrong. It showed a membership of 1004 and Grace Sunday School an attendance of 90 or an average attendance of 42 over last year. Mr. D. W. Dumble made a speech regarding larger Sunday School quarters and stating that there was great need for such.

It was also reported that a recently organized men's Bible Class had subscribed $200 towards a new Sunday School. The report of the choir was given by Mr. J. H. Renwick.

While in the city Rev. Mr. Young was the guest of Mr. Ben Shortly.

POSTPONING INEVITABLE HUMILIATION

What Are Germans Fighting For if They Are Short of Food

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 16. — The New York Times, commenting this morning on the Germans' proposals to drop submarine warfare if England desists from stopping food cargoes for Germany, says: "If the German people have not enough to eat or face that near and certain prospect, what are they fighting for? Certainly not for victory. If there is already a shortage of food, victory cannot be hoped for. To their ruling classes, the prolongation of the war means only the postponement of inevitable humiliation. To multitudes of German people it means death or lifelong sorrow."

A REVOLUTION IF ITALY DOES NOT TAKE PART IN WAR

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Feb. 16.—The prophesy that Italy would mobilize her army within a fortnight was made here today by Ricciotti Garibaldi, the Italian patriot. He said unless the Italian government decided to participate in the war there would be a revolution.

Greek Attache Insulted.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—Reuter's Telegram Co. has received the following despatch from its Athens correspondent:

"Difficulties having arisen in regard to the fulfillment of the Porte's promise of satisfaction to Greece for the insult to the naval attache of the Greek legation at Constantinople, M. Ranas, the Greek Minister, felt compelled to leave Constantinople Sunday, leaving the secretary of the legation in charge of the affairs of Greece."

Must Go To Prize Court.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—The cargo of foodstuffs intended for the German civil population, which was seized by Great Britain when the American liner Wilhelmina, anchored in Falmouth Harbor, will be disposed of by a prize court, it was announced in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon.

BILLS POSTED AND LETTERS SENT TO OTONABEE COUPLE

Were Ridiculed and Insulted by Unknown Writers

Lewis Shaw and Harry Redmond, of Otonabee, charged with publishing libellous statements, relating to Mr. and Mrs. Michael Fitzgerald, also of Otonabee, elected summary trial and pleaded not guilty, in police court today. County Crown Attorney Hatton prosecuted, and F. D. Kerr defended.

Archie Moore, County constable, who arrested the two men, said he warned Redmond that any statements made would be used against him. Redmond said he had nothing to fear and that "we got one of those circulars or letters yesterday. It was put in their box." He also got a telephone message from some lady, whom he knew to be Mrs. Fitzgerald and the lady told him she had more of those cards to put out. He said he saw Mrs. Fitzgerald and she accused him of sending them out. After talking with Mrs. Fitzgerald she was satisfied that he was not guilty and they left as good friends. Later, they went to Shaw's house and he asked Redmond how he came in from home to town that Saturday and asked him where he left his horse. He said he called and got Shaw; they drove in to town together and left their outfit at Hogan's hotel.

Mrs. Catherine Fitzgerald living on the Keene Road, about five miles from town, said she received mail in a box on rural mail route No. 8. Witness identified a letter, produced, as being one received through the mail box. Papers were also tacked on a board. These bills as produced in court were of cardboard, large calendar backs and others were of wall paper. "Vote for Mick Fitzgerald for Reeve" was the heading on several of these bills. Under these headings were statements, to which Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald took exception. Obscene drawings were also made. One board was placed in front of Mr. Thompson's place.

"This is a villainous thing," remarked the Crown Attorney as he gave one exhibit to his worship.

"Dance in spite of hell," read Magistrate Dumble, as he perused one of the bills. "This is the Calgary Eye Opener," was another passage.

Still another bill credited among other things, a sale of some goods to Hampden Burnham, M.P. There were to be "no preserves."

Witness said she had not called Redmond by telephone. He came to the house on Sunday and denied having posted the bills. He said somebody had phoned to him making him think that it was Mrs. Fitzgerald. Witness did not expect any such conduct from Redmond. Had any one told her he would do the like, she would hardly think so.

Michael Fitzgerald identified the exhibits. John Gillespie, Miss Baxter, and his brother gave him three of the bills. He did not know who wrote or posted them.

To Mr. Kerr, witness said some of the bills made him laugh and some made him mad. Some were very foolish. The prisoners were of respectable families and he was surprised that they should be implicated in the affaid.

The evidence proceeded till one o'clock, when adjournment was made. This afternoon Detective Newhall produced a statement, signed by both young men, in which they admitted having damaged property of Mr. Fitzgerald, having written the letters and the statements on the bills and having posted them up.

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1915

THE GLOBE TAKES A PARTIZAN POSITION.

THE GLOBE is trying to make political capital out of the financial plight in which Canada now finds herself. While advocating a party truce, and knowing full well that the present financial condition of Canada is not chargeable to the Conservative party, it hastens to seize this as a pretext for raising party strife. Is it in the interests of Canada, at this grave juncture, is it furthering the party truce, or consistent with the highest ideals of politics, for the Globe to present opinions to its readers based on a garbled statement of facts?

This newspaper tries to explain "why the smash came," on the basis of the total expenditure of the Borden Government. It condemns the expenditure for railway subsidies, when, as a matter of fact, the utter recklessness of the Laurier-Fielding Government tied the hands of their successors. Take the C. N. R., for example. This road is a crying shame to the Liberal party, for it has been made a melon for its promoters by receiving the approval of the Canadian Government as one of the last acts of Laurier before defeat turned him out of office. Mackenzie and Mann had entrenched themselves in public money and securities with Laurier's approval, so that the Conservatives had either to bring on a railway smash involving nearly every province in the Dominion, or follow out in some degree Lauriers' policy. That meant financial aid, but, thanks to the brilliant work of the Hon. Arthur Meighen, a reorganization of the system was effected in the public interest before further aid was granted. The building of the Grand Trunk Pacific was also a sink hole for public money that was invented by Laurier and his pals. Yet the Globe, in its partizan use of figures, says nothing of the reasons why such expenditure was necessary, for obvious reasons. The large increases in railway subsidies were made absolutely necessary by the reckless surrender of Laurier and Fielding to the railway interests of this country. Twenty-five millions so granted were necessitated by the extravagant railway policy of the Liberals.

As for the increase in the civil list and the general expenditure, the increasing needs of the country naturally demanded more expenditure and more assistants in the Government. On the whole, the Globe's column of figures and perversions is a very weak attempt to discredit the Borden Government.

If a fair explanation is desired, it will be found in the fact that much of Canada's prosperity was due to capital investment, or to her capacity to borrow a million dollars a day in the London market, and, when the war stopped this borrowing, it also cut at our prosperity. Not having so much money, we were forced to buy less, so that a falling revenue was the natural consequence. That is why increased taxation is necessary for current needs, exclusive of our war expenditure. The manner in which this situation has been met calls for praise rather than such partizan criticism as the Globe offers.

THE WAR AND THE TIMBER TRADE.

NO UNITED KINGDOM business has been more directly affected by the war than the timber trade, and the cessation or diminution of shipments of certain woods from the usual sources has caused many importers to look to Canada as an alternative source of supply, notably of railway sleepers, telegraph poles, pit wood, and structural lumber. The chief decrease in the United Kingdom, in comparison with the previous year, is due to diminished shipments from Russia, this shortage of about 500,000 standards representing nearly ninety per cent. of the total decline.

Although the business of last year was unequal, the dullness of the last half being succeeded by a sequence of interruptions and dislocations, surprises and uncertainties, unexampled in the previous experience of the trade, authorities consider that 1914 was a most favourable year for importers, because in spite of anxieties and disorganization, the steady upward movement of prices since the end of August has enabled them to secure a scale of profit which has rarely, if ever, been surpassed.

The main factor in the creation of this situation has been the phenomenal demand by the Government for timber of many kinds for purposes connected with the campaign, which has caused values of all kinds to rise to a level which in ordinary times would be regarded as hazardous.

No branch of Anglo-Canadian trade is more completely developed and exploited than the lumber business, and the situation created during the past few months has brought United Kingdom importers and Canadian manufacturers and shippers into even closer and more frequent touch than usual, disclosing possibilities of Canadian export trade, if only temporary, in lines for which a profitable outlet in the United Kingdom has not previously existed.

The timber trade is one among many others that is due to benefit by the great dislocation caused by Germany. Importers have since August 1st had to look to new sources of supply, and Canadian shippers and manufacturers who have been fortunate enough to supply some of these importers should see that they become well intrenched in the new markets, so that when the war is over they will still be able to compete in them.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE GERMANS had a map of the British Isles that showed accurately all railroads, rivers and canals, steamship and cable lines and fortified towns. It is noteworthy that, while Scarborough and Yarmouth were indicated as fortified towns, places which have suffered equally from bombardment, like Whitby, King's Lynn and Hartlepool, are shown without fortifications. The map also shows how carefully Germany prepared for war with Britain.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN says: "A great task has been forced upon our Empire, and Canada will do her part in seeing that it is properly and thoroughly performed."

Stretching Neutrality.

(Montreal Journal of Commerce.)

Ex-President Taft has been telling the Canadian Club of Toronto that the Monroe Doctrine would be stretched, if necessary, in order to prevent a German invasion of Canada. He stated that his country would not stand by and see Canada molested by the Germans. We appreciate the cordial support of Mr. Taft and believe that he means what he says, but we do not approve of the stretching of neutrality on the part of the United States, which permited them to stand by and see Belgium overrun by a gang of "roughnecks" from Germany.

I only had fifty cents so I couldn't get a three quarters taken

WEATHER FORECASTS.

Westerly to northerly winds, fair today and on Wednesday and becoming a little colder.

THE GHOST BREAKER.

The Ghost Breaker as seen in five acts at the Empire Theatre was a great favorite with the first day audiences. Mr. Warner in the title role portrays a rather unique character in splendid style, and, with the excellent support he receives, makes the piece interesting throughout. There are no dull spots in the Ghost Breaker.

CROWDED HALL FOR CONCERT

The Temple Band Provided Meritorious Program

The members of the Temple band, excelled themselves at the Temple last night when they gave the first concert under the direction of Bandmaster F. W. Beer. The Singing Brigade, under the leadership of bandsman F. W. Robinson, assisted. The hall was crowded.

Ald. G. Walter Green was a very popular chairman. With him on the platform was Fire Chief Howard. Ald. J. J. Duffus also was present.

R. C. Braund, the Sunday School superintendent, made a brief speech in which he explained that the proceeds of the concert would be given to the Young People's band for the purchase of new instruments and music.

Special mention should be made of the enjoyable selections by the male choir of eight voices, the saxophone and instrumental quartettes and the vocal solo by Miss Ivy Beer. The Singing Brigade as usual acquitted themselves well.

Bandsmen Moynes, H. Wells, James and Band Sergt. Brown were the saxophone quartette; Bandsmen F. Robinson, Calvert, S. Richardson and Bandmaster Beer, the instrumental quartette.

SECOND CONTINGENT TO LEAVE SOON?

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 16.—Col. Septimus Denison, commander of the 4th Infantry Brigade of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, is in the city for the purpose of inspecting the local troops of the second contingent to-day. Col. The men of the second contingent he considered very much superior to the rank and file of the first expeditionary force.

Committee Reporting on Unsuitable Boots Exonerates Department

OTTAWA, Feb. 16. — Parliament will appoint a special committee to investigate the charges that inferior boots were supplied to certain units in the Canadian overseas contingent. Following the suggestion of Sir Wilfrid Laurier last week, Premier Borden rose when the House met yesterday afternoon to state that he agreed that it was in the public interest, as well as due to various manufacturers who had supplied these articles to the Government, that the whole matter should be referred to a special committee of seven members to investigate and report their findings. Premier Borden asked Sir Wilfrid to name three of the seven members from the Liberal side of the House. The committee will probably be formally appointed by the House on resolution to-day.

The report of the investigation board appointed by the Minister of Militia to deal with the complaints regarding the boots was tabled by Gen. Hughes. While in a general way it exculpates the Department from all blame, it finds that there were serious faults in the manufacture of the boots, and that the specifications were, in many cases, not adhered to. It is admitted that the boots were not suitable for the abnormal weather conditions in England, but it is declared that considering the enormous and sudden demand, the boots were on the whole well made and of good quality.

The whole trouble, according to the board's report, seems to have been mainly due to the lack of time for adequate inspection and the necessity for using whatever materials were available at the time.

X-RAYS FIND RUBBER.

British Examiners Detect Contraband In Cotton Shipment.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—The X-ray examinations of cotton cargoes of outgoing British ships, which have been conducted by representatives of the British Government for several months, as a means of preventing shipment of contraband of war, revealed yesterday that bales of cotton waste consigned aboard the White Star liner Cretic, contained rubber. The Cretic is due to sail to-day for Mediterranean ports. The consignee was given by officials of the line as a firm in Genoa, Italy. The consignor, they said, was A. B. Newman of this city.

To Bless Submarines.

to answer the question considering it expert testimony. He stated that he had not discussed that matter at all.

Mr. Harry Beattie was called to the witness stand at 11.30.

He had been employed several years by the Peterborough Light and Power Co. Mr. Cowan humorously referred to Mr. Beattie as one of the assets of the company which the city had taken over. Mr. Cowan conducted a searching enquiry into the method adopted by Mr. Beattie in installing service connections. Mr. Beattie said the cost of installing service varied quite often. He had helped to cull out poles from the pole yard under the instructions of foreman Hillman. Thirty and thirty-five foot poles were rather carefully selected for erection on the city streets.

Examined by Mr. Tilley, witness said that in the last two years in making connections he had only to connect up as many houses were already wired. On January 2nd as he commenced to keep track of his time for installing services on the instructions of Mr. Fisk, who told him such records might be required later. Mr. Tilley was anxious to discover how Beattie's men were kept busy during the day after they had finished certain work. Mr. Beattie said he always kept his men busy although he admitted he kept no record of just how they had been employed.

Mr. Tilley wanted the work orders and time cards produced after the noon adjournment. Mr. Tilley wanted to know what was the shortest time required to erect a 45-foot pole. Mr. Beattie couldn't say. The pole put up at St. Paul's Church was used as an example. One man started to dig at seven o'clock. Witness went there at ten o'clock. The pole was erected and cross-arms on by 11.15. Four men helped to put up the pole, arriving on the scene about 10 o'clock. After dinner a man returned to do some wiring.

DAMAGE IN RAID.

Dutch Paper Says Immense Loss Was Caused By British Aviators.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 16.—The Handelsblad's Sluis correspondent, in a despatch concerning the raid last week of thirty-four British aviators over portions of northern Belgium, says that at Ostend the sheds of the sea railway station were badly damaged and the Hotel Terminus, near the station, was slightly damaged. The De Smet de Nayer bridge suffered heavily, and all communication with the sea station was broken.

At Blankenberghe, the correspondent says, the station and the railway were destroyed. At Zeebrugge, he adds, the central electric works and a factory were destroyed and the bridges there could not be worked, owing to a lack of electricity. A Zeppelin shed with all contents was destroyed, the correspondent adds.

Grape-Nuts
A FOOD

More Nourishment-- Weight for Weight

—in a package of Grape-Nuts than in a roast of beef.

Grape-Nuts is meat—the meat of wheat and barley—a rich, sweet, appetizing food, ready to eat direct from the package with cream or milk.

All the bone-making, blood-making, muscle-making values of choicest wheat combined with malted barley are afforded in this famous pure food.

Grape-Nuts being partially pre-digested by long baking, gives quickly a wonderful power to "do" in return for the small energy required to digest it. Better and more complete nourishment than Grape-Nuts and cream is difficult to find; and with the price of meat 'way up there's true economy, too.

This sturdy food is sold by Grocers everywhere, in wax-sealed packages. Thousands make it a part of their daily breakfast.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

COMMENT
As You Like it

For the past three years a committee of the Athletic Research Society has been studying not only the definition of an amateur, but all matters relating to the application of the amateur principle in athletics. They define an amateur as one who participates in competitive physical sports only for the pleasure and the physical, mental, moral and social benefits directly derived therefrom. The term athlete is used to designate one who participates in physical sport. This is to distinguish the athlete from one who engages in other sports and games in which the physical ability of the competitor is not the prime factor, as in checkers, yachting, etc.

The violations which make an amateur a professional are, first, teaching or coaching professional athletes for pay; second, competing under salary for a fee; third, competing for a cash prize or for a staked bet.

A professional shall be reinstated only in very unusual cases when in the judgment of the governing body the best interests of both the individual and amateurism can be furthered by such action. In no case shall reinstatement take effect within one year after violation, and a professional shall not be reinstated a second time.

In dealing with the matter of the application of the definition of amateur, Dr. Brown says:

"In ruling upon individual cases, allowance should be made for youthful and unintentional infractions. A petty violation hastily made by a careless youth should not bar him forever from the joy and training which he ought to have through further competition. As much harm may be done, even to athletics....to say nothing of the man....by too rigid legislation, as from overleniency. Some of the technical violations which disqualify an amateur, according to the committee's finding, are competing with or against professionals or disqualified athletes for a prize or in open competition. Permission may be granted by the governing body to allow amateurs to compete against professionals on special occasions. Under no circumstances will amateurs be allowed to play on the same team with professionals. Promoting or officiating at professional contests will be a violation, as will also promoting amateur contests for personal gain. Being a party to any attempt to induce an amateur to dishonorably violate his standing as an amateur, teaching or supervising for any amateur athletics or physical education in an institution, organization, club or playground is a violation which makes an amateur a non-competing amateur."

BERLIN PUT OUT BY WIARTON

Winners Take the Round by Six Goals

Berlin, Ont., Feb. 16.—Berlin, last year's intermediate champions and winners this season of one of the stiffest groups in the O.H.A., were put out of the semi-finals last night by Wiarton, when the visitors held the locals to a 1 to 1 score, thereby winning the round by six goals. The ice was very heavy, water being noticeable in several places, making playing difficult and overskating the puck was the order of the night. The locals checked hard and fast, but were unable to get more than one goal on account of the heavy ice.

BOWLING

Tonight the Engineers and Beginners hook up in what should be the biggest game of the season.

Of the $4,159 recently collected by Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught to provide oilskins and rubber boots for the men of the North Atlantic Squadron, $2,139 has been expended for that purpose. The balance will be sent to Admiral Hornby to be used to the best advantage.

A MARGIN OF FOUR GOALS FOR LINDSAY

Kingston Seven Could Not Overcome Big Lead

Kingston, Feb. 16.—On heavy ice that spoiled all attempts at combination, although the play was fast, K.C.I. defeated Lindsay in the junior O.H.A. match there last night by the score of 6 to 3. Lindsay wins the round by 10 to 6.

Line-up:—

Lindsay—Goal, O'Loughlin; defence, Flavelle and Saugh; rover, C. Carew; centre, McElroy; right wing, Sandercock; left wing, A. Carew.

Referee—B. S. McCreath, Toronto.

GOOD NIGHT BRAMPTON.

Orillia, Feb. 16.—Orillia intermediates took another stride towards the O.H.A. championship last night when they put Brampton away 11 to 0. Brampton has a nice gentlemanly team, who play the game, but they are not in Orillia's class. The game was clean throughout, only one man being sent to the fence, and that for a minor offence. The ice was very heavy and good combination was impossible. Play was almost exclusively in front of Brampton's goal. Orillia plays at Brampton Wednesday evening, and with an eleven goal lead it looks Orillia as winners of the round.

WRITES FROM THE FRONT

Miss Mary Coulden, who is with the "Milestones" theatrical company, to play at the Grand Opera House, Wednesday, February 24th, has received an interesting letter from the front. It comes from Corporal A. Keene, who is with the Army Service Corps, of the British expeditionary force. He says in part:

"We count ourselves lucky if we get a roof over us and boards to sleep on; we would not know what to think of a real bed. The first night over here we camped in the mud and there was small comfort of any kind either for officers or men. Picture me digging a small trench around the tent; this is to draw off the rain. All this, however, is child's play to what they have to put up with at the front, and I only remark on it because it happens to be new to me. Some of our chaps have started collections of souvenirs already—German, Belgian and French buttons, etc.

"Although it is a hard life for the soldiers, they seem to get along and it gives me pride to say that the English soldiers seem to withstand the hardships of camp life and the rigors of the existence at the front as well or even better than the troops of the Allies. It is needless for me to narrate the acts of heroism that are performed every day by British soldiers, they are too numerous to even remember but you may count on it that the English soldiers are in the fight and when the war is over the world and the Germans will know that the English were here."

D. L. McKinnon of Sudbury was fined $500 for having beaver pelts in his possession.

A.—At 169 Walmer Road, on the street.

Q.—What happened?

A.—I shot him; I guess he is dead now.

Q.—What did you shoot him for?

A.—I really shot him in self-defence.

Q.—Who did you shoot?

A.—Mr. Massey.

Q.—What do you mean by saying you shot him in self-defence?

A.—He took advantage of me yesterday, and I thought he was going to do the same today.

Q.—What did he say to you yesterday?

Told Her Sister.

A.—He caught me on Sunday afternoon and kissed me twice, and I ran upstairs, and then he called me in to make his bed, and as soon as I went into his room he said 'This is a nice bed,' and caught hold of me. I got away from him and ran upstairs and locked my door while I dressed. Then I went and told my sister.

Q.—Were you alone in the house?

A.—Yes.

Q.—What did your sister say?

A.—I cannot say what my sister said, but my brother-in-law told me I would have to be careful.

Q.—What time did you leave your sister's?

A.—About 10.30 p.m. Sunday and arrived at Massey's at 11.20.

Q.—What did Massey say to you?

A.—He was not in when I came home. Only the son was in.

Q.—How old is the son?

A.—Fourteen years, and a nice boy.

Q.—Does the boy go to school?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he ever molest you?

A.—No.

Q.—Did Massey speak to you next morning?

A.—He called downstairs to me to put his breakfast on the table.

Q.—Did he say anything when he came down?

A.—I did not see him till he went out, as I left the room.

Q.—Did you see him again until Monday?

A.—No. I saw him coming down the street, and the newsboy asked me if Mr. Massey was in. Then the newsboy said, "Is that him coming down the street?"

Q.—What happened then?

A.—I seemed to lose control of myself and ran upstairs and got the revolver, and as I came down to the foot of the stairs Mr. Massey opened the door and I fired a shot at him.

Q.—What happened then?

A.—I knew it did not hit him, as he ran out on the sidewalk, and I ran out on the verandah and fired at him again, and he fell.

Q.—Did he say anything?

A.—When I fired at him first he said, "Oh."

Q.—Did he say anything as he fell?

A.—No. I did not hear him say anything.

Q.—Where did you get the revolver?

A.—In the boy's bedroom.

Q.—Did he ever attempt to indecently assault you before?

A.—No.

Q.—How long had Mrs. Massey been away from home?

A.—A week last Sunday.

Q.—Have you any gentlemen friends in the city?

A.—Yes. A friend to whom I was engaged before he went to the war.

Q.—Where did you go after the shooting?

A.—Up to my room. When the police came I called to them to come up. I gave my revolver to the policeman.

Q.—Was the revolver loaded when you took it from the bedroom?

A.—No. I got some bullets out of the drawer in the boy's room and put five bullets in the revolver.

Q.—How many shots did you fire?

A.—Two only.

Q.—When did you load the revolver?

A.—Just as I came downstairs.

Peterborough's Great Dollar Day Event

Wednesday, Feb, 17th

Last year The Golden Lion was almost by acclamation said to be the popular "Dollar Day Store," and at that time we announced we were glad to participate in the first Dollar Day, because it gave us an opportunity to prove to you that you would pay less here. Of course, all stores had bargains at a dollar, but the values that Peterborough found at Fair's proved beyond all doubt there are values—and Golden Lion values. So Wednesday next Robert Fair & Co.'s store enters Peterborough's second Dollar Day with the determination to far eclipse last year's famous event. Come any time during the day. Don't miss it!

MARION'S LEAP FOR LIFE

One of the Thrilling Feats of the Famous "Swamp Fox"

General Marion was a native of South Carolina, and the theater of his military exploits was the coast region of that state. He was slender and not very tall, and he rode when in service an extremely swift footed and powerful horse. When in fair pursuit nothing could escape and when in flight nothing could overtake him. Once he was almost surrounded by a party of British dragoons and had to take refuge in a cornfield. The field, which lay several feet lower than the adjoining land, had formerly been part of the marsh. General Marion entered it at the upper side; the dragoons who were in chase of him leaped the fence also, and were only a short distance behind him. His only possible way of escape was to leap the fence at the lower side.

To drain the field of its superfluous water a trench had been cut round that part of the field four feet wide and four feet deep. The mud and clay removed in cutting the ditch made a bank on its inner side, and on the top of the bank was a fence. In all, the top of the fence was nearly eight feet above the level of the field, and the ditch, four feet wide, ran parallel with it on the farther side. The dragoons knew the nature of this obstacle, and believed that it was impossible for their enemy to pass it. Accordingly, they pushed forward with loud shouts of exultation, calling out to him to surrender or perish by the sword.

Marion, however, spurred his horse to the charge. The noble animal, as if conscious that his master's life was in danger, approached the barrier in his finest style and, with a bound that was almost supernatural, cleared the fence and ditch completely and recovered himself without loss of time on the other side. Marion instantly wheeled about, discharged his pistol at the astonished dragoons and then, turning his horse and bidding them good morning, departed.

If the height of the leap is authentic it must be the most remarkable performance ever made by a horse under saddle, for it is almost exactly the equal of the highest jump on record, made by the famous Heatherbloom, and that, of course, was made from the level and carefully prepared take off of a race track, which is a very different matter from the loose and heavy soil of a cornfield. The story may have grown a little in the mouths of General Marion's admiring men, but the incident was clearly enough one of the most remarkably narrow escapes ever made by that daring and resourceful soldier, who was famous for his cleverness in wriggling again and again out of the clutches of the enemy.—Youth's Companion.

William Pearce, a lumberman, was instantly killed by rolling logs in Wiltsey and McCrea's camp near North Temiskaming.

COMMISSIONER OF HIGHWAYS PLANNING TRUNK ROAD

Is at Work on a Scheme to Build a Road From Montreal to Windsor Which, With a Branch to Ottawa, Would Serve Most of the Larger Communities of Older Ontario

The Scottish Canadian for December cantains an interesting article regarding the proposals for an Ontario Trunk Road and a sketch of W. A. McLean, Ontario's Commissioner of Highways, who has the project in band. The article follows:

"Mr. W. A. McLean, C.E., O.L.S., whose connection with various movements having in view the improvement of main highways and county roads generally has been conspicuously fruitful for many years, is well-known in Toronto Scottish circles, being a member of St. Andrew's Society and of the Sons of Scotland Benevolent Association. He was born at Belmont, Ont., in 1871, his father being the Rev. Hugh McLean, and his mother, Margaret S. McNairn. He was educated at Ingersoll, Strathroy and Toronto, and having taken a distinguished professional course, became Assistant Engineer of St. Thomas in 1894. He entered the service of the Ontario Government in 1896 as Assistant Engineer of Highways, becoming chief of that branch in 1910, and was promoted to the important office he now holds, as Commissioner of Highways, in 1913. Professionally he ranks high, both as an author and as a practical engineer. A number of technical books of much excellence stands to his credit, and among works designed by him is the first long span (100 feet) concrete arch in Canada, built in 1907 at Massey, Ont. Articles from his pen are welcomed by the leading engineering magazines, and he fills the coveted position of president of the American Roadbuilders' Association, being the first Canadian to receive that honor.

W. A. M'LEAN, C.E., O.L.S.

"Recently, in his zeal to secure the benefit of a great trunk road for Ontario, he proposed that such a great public work could very well be undertaken as part of a triumphal monument to the Canadian arms in the present war, the victorious outcome of which the Allies are confident. Mr. McLean has worked out a plan whereby such a road could be constructed from one end of Ontario to the other along the front, on a feasible financial basis, and no doubt as the project is developed the public mind will become fully sized of its merits.

Of this project a contemporary says:

"'The Montreal-to-Windsor road formed an essential part of the highway improvement scheme formulated by the Highway Improvement Commission. If a trunk road is to be built linking up the highways throughout the province, it will naturally be this road. If a branch road to Ottawa were provided, this road would serve and join the great majority of the larger cities and towns of older Ontario, and it would cross or connect with practically all the highways in southern Ontario. Its construction, therefore, is a natural and essential part of any general highway improvement scheme for the province, and is ultimately bound to come. To see this and provide for it is only common sense and practical engineering.

"'In addition, road building is an admirable way to meet conditions of unemployment and the present or the coming year constitute a time when such conditions are serious. To promote road building in any direction at this time, therefore, is only common sense and good business judgment.

"'In round numbers the road would be 535 miles long. It was laid down in the report of the Highway Improvement Commission and has generally been accepted that cities should contribute something to the cost of the main road close to their borders. In the 535 miles there are about 135 miles of road which would be provided for in this way. This leaves 400 miles of road yet to be provided for. Mr. McLean has estimated the cost at eight thousand dollars a mile. This means $3,200,000.

"'This money might well be raised by contributions levied largely on motorists who exclusively make use of the main roads of the province. There are about thirty thousand licensed cars in the province. This probably means that there are at least 15,000 motorists who would co-operate in such a work. Suppose these men raised by subscription each an average of two hundred dollars. That seems a small amount for each to raise, but the aggregate would be three million and the cost of the road is pretty well provided for. It is largely a question of organization.

"'The appeal for contributions would also be made to the large merchants to whom the road would furnish splendid facilities for the delivery of their goods. In the same way it would appeal to the wholesaler and manufacturers. Many smaller individual subscribers from purely patriotic motives would help swell the contributions: Patriotic and historical societies would assist in the organization, as would Boards of Trade and similar associations. The townships through which the road passes might also be depended upon. And for such work, provincial in its character, but national in its significance, an appeal to the Dominion Government would be justified and would, it is said, be favorably received.'"

POTASH AND WOOD ASHES.

Valuable Products for Land Improvement Available From This Source.

With the supply of potash from the German mines shut off by war conditions, Canada should now give attention to the large quantity of this fertilizing agent which is allowed to go to waste through want of care and conservation of the annual production of wood ashes.

Throughout a large part of Canada the chief fuel at all seasons, but more especially in winter, is wood. In the eastern provinces, hardwoods are chiefly used. These woods, especially beech and maple, are rich in potash, varying from 5 to 13 per cent., according to conditions of dryness of the wood and care of the ashes. Other valuable ingredients of wood ashes are a small proportion of phosphoric acid and about fifty per cent. of carbonate of lime.

In the clearing of wood lots and in the burning of debris after taking out the fuel supply, large amounts of ashes are produced. These as a rule are left where the burning is done, and are consequently wasted.

Wood ashes should be carefully stored, in fire proof receptacles if possible; in any event away from any danger of fire, and should be kept dry to avoid leaching. In the spring they should be spread upon the land. They are especially valuable as a fertilizer and to encourage the growth of clover and the better grasses.

Wood ashes, by hastening the decay of organic matter in soils, render more readily available the nitrogen contained therein. In sandy soil, wood ashes supply the phosphoric acid and lime in which these soils are deficient, while, on clay lands, the lime content of the ashes tends to render available the potash salts already present in abundance. Potash as supplied to the land through the medium of wood ashes has a distinct advantage over the potash salts as imported from Germany, in that it is in a very soluble form, and hence is at once available for plant food.

The importance of wood ashes, as shown above, as a fertiliser can hardly be over-estimated. It is consequently of first interest to the agriculturists and lumber interests of Canada to conserve the supply wherever and by what process produced.

During the present winter large undertakings in land clearing and right-of-way clearing of railway lines will be in progress from the burning of the debris of which large amounts of ashes will accumulate. Some steps should be taken to provide that these ashes are not wasted, as apart from the difficulty of securing potash supplies, the market value of ashes at present is from $8 to $12 per ton, depending upon quality. — Conservation.

The Word "Divan."

The word "divan" means "council of state" in Arabic and Turkish. Both Milton and Pope use the word in the sense of council in general. From meaning council the word came to mean council chamber and from that the arrangement of cushions round the chamber. A divan in this sense is strictly a row of cushions ranged along the walls of a room, either on the floor or on a raised step or on a bench. Hence we speak of a sofa or couch as a divan and of a thickly cushioned chair as a divan chair.

Contentment.

Contentment is the pearl of great price. Few persons are satisfied with their lot. No matter if they have plenty of work and good wages, they envy some one else who is doing better. The boy with the toy cart envies the lad with the bicycle, and the latter looks with covetous eyes on every motorcar that passes by. So it goes everywhere. The poor envy the rich, and the rich envy each other, and under such conditions the preacher of a gospel of envy finds it easy to gather a congregation.

BREAKFAST IN BOHEMIA

Where They Didn't Use a Bell to Call the Caterer

In his published reminiscences of Henri Murger M. Felix Duquesnel tells an amusing story of a breakfast with the poet of the "Vie de Boheme."

Theodore Barriere, the dramatist, wished to adapt Murger's work to the stage. He had never met the poet, but he decided to visit him at his home and introduce himself. Murger lived on the sixth floor of a house in the Rue Gregoire-de-Tours. It was almost noon when Barriere appeared at his lodging, but Murger was still in bed.

"Pardon me, sir, for disturbing you," said Barriere. "I'm sorry to see that you are in bed. Are you indisposed?"

"No, not at all," said Murger. "I'm very well, indeed, and very glad to make your acquaintance."

"May I ask why you lie in bed on so fine a day as this?"

"I'll tell you," said Murger, laughing. "You know the story of Epaminondas, who stayed in bed while his clothes were being mended. That's my case. I have only one pair of trousers, and the porter has taken them to the tailor's next door for reenforcement, so I must wait for them in bed."

"Have you had your breakfast?"

"Yes, indeed—yesterday."

"Then we will eat together and talk the matter over."

Murger shook his head. "I haven't a sou," he said.

"Never mind. Be my guest." With these words Barriere took a five franc piece out of his pocket.

"By George, you're rich!" said Murger with admiration. "Let me see it; those things are strangers to me. Well, ring for breakfast."

Barriere looked round for the bell but could find none.

"We haven't such a thing," said Murger. "In this place you act according to tradition—take that brick and heave it downstairs. Pere Guerin knows the signal; he'll come right up."

Barriere did so, and the man appeared. Murger then got up and threw a havelock over his shoulders, and in half an hour the two writers were eating their breakfast of pork cutlets and cucumbers.

Farmers and Co-operation.

In an address at Minneapolis Sir Horace Plunkett said: "When I began preaching co-operation to our farmers in Ireland many years ago it was only after the fifty-first address to farmers' gatherings that the first co-operative organization was formed. Now we have 950 co-operative farmers' organizations, with several hundred thousand farmers, and they did a business the last year in excess of $17,000,000."

Food For Health and Beauty.

Beauty must always be attended by a good complexion, and to have this the digestive organs must work properly. Much damage is done to the digestion by overeating, by eating of highly seasoned food or by eating food that is hard to digest.

Among the many wholesome vegetables spinach ranks first, not alone for its palatableness, but because it contains many valuable medicinal ingredients. While spinach contains nine tenths water, the remaining tenth contains iron, niter and mineral salts. It has been said that one who partakes freely of spinach will have no liver trouble and that constipation will be unknown, also the complexion will be clear and the eyes bright. Beet tops, too, are quite as beneficial as spinach.

Oranges are healthful. Most persons do not eat enough of them to derive benefit. The proper time to eat oranges has been freely discussed, but the best way to decide this disputed point is to note carefully the effect of eating them at various periods of the day and govern oneself accordingly.

An orange poultice is valued in India and recommended for use in skin diseases. Some women give credit for their beautiful and clear complexion to drinking the juice from at least six oranges each day, and then at night sponging the face with orange juice.

Reducing the Neck.

Too much flesh on the neck is a great obstacle to beauty. It is almost as bad in appearance as a scrawny throat and is much more difficult to remedy. It is a far simpler thing to put flesh on a woman's throat than to take it off, for if the tissues are fed with a good grease, such as cocoa butter, the neck will soon begin to take on flesh.

On the other hand, only exercise of the most vigorous sort will reduce fat on the throat.

For a tendency to double chin and to tighten the muscles which have become loosened in a flabby neck try this simple but efficacious exercise: Throw the head back as far as it will go, drawing the muscles taut. Now turn the head slowly as far to the right as it will go, then as far to the left. Repeat to the number of ten times, increasing as you become accustomed to the strain.

Bathing the neck frequently with a piece of ice is excellent for keeping the flesh firm and for removing flabbiness.

Cleaning Pots and Pans.

Keep at hand a small quantity of coarse cornmeal or coarse wheat bran, and when cleaning greasy cooking utensils rub a handful in the pan, kettle or skillet. You will be surprised how clear of grease it will leave the utensil. Wash it then in good soapy water, scald and set to air before putting away. If one keeps chickens the meal thus used is excellent in their mash feed. If not, fold in a waste paper and burn. This way keeps the sink clean and saves much hard work.

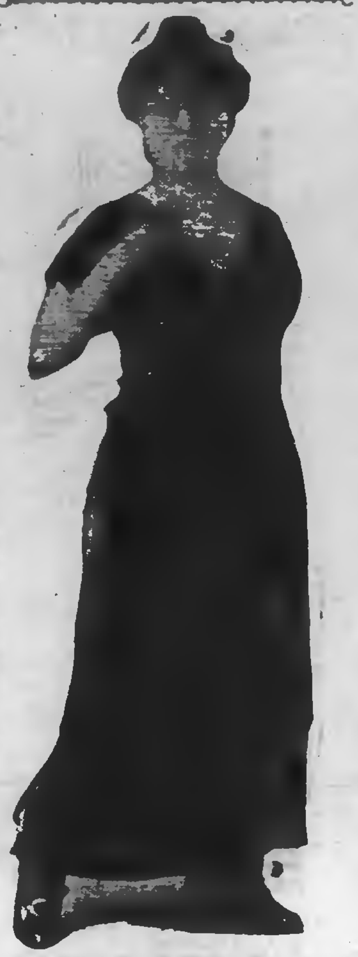
BLACK FOR EVENING.

Gowns For Festive Occasions Fashioned of This Somber Color.



BLACK EVENING GOWN.

Never has the black evening gown been so popular for both old and young. Fashion, owing to the influence of Paris, continues her allegiance to somber shades. The fascinating evening frock here pictured is of black satin. Over the satin fall three tunics of accordion plaited net. A novel feature of the frock is the wide girdle, simulating a basque. This girdle is of dull gold net set with jet ornaments. The simple little bodice is of black velvet, a material that brings out to perfection the delicate tints of the skin.

WHEN BUYING FURS.

Hints That May Help Solve the Problem of Many Shoppers.

Coats for morning, afternoon, evening and for motoring are made of fur, from seal to astrakhan. Suits of indescribable elegance are fashioned of broadtail and caracal. Fur adorns evening dresses in both narrow and wide bands.

* * *

Kolinsky is the new fur of the season for coats. It strongly resembles sable. It has the warm, soft coloring of Russian sable, but not the same quality of hair.

* * *

Fitch is the favorite trimming for fur. Skunk remains the choice of the conservative yet modishly gowned woman. Blue fox is very fashionable for bordering the high neck, sleeve edges and outlining the edges of wraps.

* * *

Very tiny barrel shaped muffs are an interesting novelty. They come in sets that include tippet, hat and muff.

* * *

Any one fur does not seem to take the lead in fashionable favor, as was the style formerly, and if there is a pelt that is left out of the fashionable scheme it must be accidental.

* * *

This season monkey fur, that lovely long haired, glossy pelt, has been added to the already long list of peltry.

No Relief From The Pain Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

CAMPBELLVILLE, ONT., MAY 5th, 1913.

"I cannot speak too highly of "Fruit-a-tives". For over thirty years, I have suffered from chronic Neuralgia and Constipation, experiencing untold agony. The Neuralgia settled in my lungs and I took bottles of medicine without relief. The doctor told me I would not get better but "Fruit-a-tives" proved that the doctor was wrong by giving me quick relief and finally and completely curing me.

"I would not have my present health if it were not for "Fruit-a-tives" and I am glad of this opportunity of giving you this letter about such a splendid remedy as "Fruit-a-tives".

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Nephritis.

For chronic kidney disease—nephritis—Dr. A. Kakowski prescribes a diet of pumpkin. In an article in a leading German medical magazine the famous Russian physician extols its virtues and calls it the ideal diuretic food. But it must be used in large quantities—three to six pounds a day. He has the pumpkin cut in small pieces, covered with water, boiled over a slow fire for two hours and served with butter, milk or cream. In one of his cases 252 pounds of pumpkin were eaten in eighty days without any ill effects. Long standing cases are cured within a very short time.

NO MORE LAVISH SPENDERS.

New York's Swell Dining Places Mourn Their Passing.

"Hotels and restaurants are expecting something more than usual from society this winter," said one hotel man, who is as well up on the restaurant situation as anybody in New York. "It is believed that fashionable people will do little entertaining in their homes. It will be cheaper and easier to invite their friends to a restaurant, where they may have dancing after the dinner.

"As a matter of fact, the day of the lavish spender is gone, so far as New York is concerned. We shall never see again the era that ended nine or ten years ago. Those were the days when men from Chicago or Pittsburgh vied with each other in the extravagance of their entertainments. It was nothing for a dinner to cost $25 a cover. Nowadays the average is about $4.50.

"The change in spending habits has forced the hotels to become cost accountants. The manager of every modern house is now able to know, when a mutton chop is placed on the table, just how much of each item the hotel's expenses that chop has to carry."—New York Times.

Ironing Day Hints.

Don't rest your hot irons on the ironing sheet.

The best iron stand is an asbestos wire mat, and the best smoother is an old telephone book or magazine. Tear off the sheets as they get soiled or scorched.

Make it a rule to finish up your ironing in one day. It wastes gas and fuel to have to reheat your irons the next day when you could easily have finished while the irons and stove were hot.

Moisture In Jardinieres.

Only plants that demand a great amount of moisture should be kept in jardinieres. Excessive moisture causes roots to decay, and many flowers soon die unless given plenty of air.

Points for Mothers

Teach Children Consideration.

Amiability in one of its branches means kindness not alone to each other, but to the animal and vegetable world. You will see a tiny child weeping over a broken flower, the tender little heart grieved that its pretty favorite is crushed. Why should we not foster the idea and teach him to respect the flowers so lavishly given us by a generous Creator? We can easily destroy; we are powerless to create. The child trained to curb a fancy for willful destruction will grow into a man wise enough to understand and appreciate the lessons taught by the world of nature.

Kindness to animals should be insisted on and a child made to understand that pussy suffers pain when small fingers are poked in her eyes and a fly is tortured when her wings are pulled off. Some people say and perhaps erroneously believe that boys are naturally cruel. This is quite wrong. Girls accept facts; boys look for proof. They are not content to know a watch "goes;" they try to discover why it goes.

As concerns animals, it is only a matter of training. If a boy from his earliest childhood has been taught to be kind to animals he will never take delight in teasing them. In these days, when vivisection is so largely discussed, it would be out of place to revert to the subject here, but it might be said that boys trained to be kind will when men countenance no unnecessary cruelty in the operations on animals requisite for medical or surgical purposes.

Buttermilk For Red Skin.

One thing said to be very good for the skin, if unpleasantly nipped by the cold, is buttermilk. Some may not like this, not all can use it, but when used it is dashed on plentifully, allowed to dry, then by and by washed off with warm water.

WOMEN FROM 45 to 55 TESTIFY

To the Merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during Change of Life.

Westbrook, Me. — "I was passing through the Change of Life and had pains in my back and side and was so weak I could hardly do my housework. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has done me a lot of good. I will recommend your medicine to my friends and give you permission to publish my testimonial." — Mrs. LAWRENCE MARTIN, 12 King St., Westbrook, Maine.

Manston, Wis. — "At the Change of Life I suffered with pains in my back and loins until I could not stand. I also had night-sweats so that the sheets would be wet. I tried other medicine but got no relief. After taking one bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began to improve and I continued its use for six months. The pains left me, the night-sweats and hot flashes grew less, and in one year I was a different woman. I know I have to thank you for my continued good health ever since." — Mrs. M. J. BROWNELL, Manston, Wis.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled in such cases.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

WITNESS TO THE DEED

By M. QUAD.

My mistress in Gainsboro road had lost a £5 note in the house, and the thief was the parlor maid. I knew it from her actions, and three months after I left the house she was caught in a similar offense and owned up to the first theft. However, the crime was laid on me, and because I made indignant and perhaps impudent protest I was flung out of the house at half an hour's notice and refused a character. I was idle for the next three months. The first thing demanded when I applied for a place was a character. As soon as it was learned that I had none it was useless to talk further. It was for this reason that I finally paid a fee to an intelligence office in Margate street and was at length sent for to take a place at general housework. It was an old man named Dyson who wanted me. He was willing to take me without a character because he would have to pay less wages and because, as he grimly asserted, there was nothing lying around loose in his house for me to steal. As we sat face to face I sized him up as mean and penurious, but I did not see any evil in him. He had an aged and infirm wife, he told me, and I would be the only servant.

It was not for me to pick and choose. I must have a place and hold it long enough to get a character again. I went with him miles and miles out on the Holborn road, and we at last arrived at the cheaply built and cheap looking cottage he occupied. It was a place devoid of almost all conveniences and had been selected for its cheap rent. I found the old wife deaf, almost blind and palsied, and it was apparent that she had no care whatever.

I soon had evidence that he was in love with a widow in the neighborhood, or at least he desired to be free so that he could marry her. My natural impulse on finding out how he felt toward his wife was to flee the house, but I have explained how I was situated.

In the course of a couple of weeks he declared that the cellar was full of rats and gave me money and commanded me to buy arsenic. He recommended me to go to a store miles away and to say that I wanted it for my complexion and to give my own name. I went to a drug store only two blocks away and gave his name, and when he discovered this he was highly indignant for a day, and I rather expected to be thrown out. However, in the course of three or four days he developed another plan. After coaching the old wife he left me alone with her for the first time, and she begged me to get her some laudanum for toothache and not to mention the matter to him. It was easy to tell that she had been coached what to say, and I refused to buy the drug. A few days later as I was preparing her a soup I had to leave the kitchen for a minute. When I returned the soup was giving out a strange odor, and being satisfied that her husband had poisoned it I, of course, threw it away. He scolded about my waste, but when I looked him squarely in the eyes he dropped his and had no more to say.

I had been with the Dysons five years when the climax came. The old woman was holding her own if not getting better, and the husband's impatience had a savage edge to it. Their bedroom was on the north side of the house. All along on that side was a deep excavation for a factory.

At 10 o'clock one night I lay wondering if he really meant to take her life and how he would finally accomplish it, when I heard a half suppressed scream from his room. I got softly out of bed and went to the farther door, and, looking through a crack, I saw that the window was up and that he stood before it with his wife in his arms. She was hanging on to him with fingers of steel and making a great struggle. I heard him breathing heavily and snarling and growling as he tore her fingers loose, but I did not know what he planned to do till of a sudden he staggered to the open window and flung her out. She screamed as she went to her death, and in my fright I echoed the scream. I remember the man rushing across the room at me, of his dashing open the door, of his striking me down, and then came darkness which lasted for weeks. He had struck me with a piece of iron and fractured my skull. He then carried my body downstairs and bore it a quarter of a mile away and flung it into another excavation. Before taking me from the house he put on my hat and cloak, and thus it appeared to those who found my unconscious body next morning that I had been coming home the night before and fallen into the pit. As to his wife, he gave the alarm and brought the police and made out that it was a case of suicide. While he was fast asleep, as he claimed, she had stolen to the window and leaped to her death.

His story went, and it was several months before there was any contradiction. I had a fractured skull, brain fever and pneumonia and for weeks and weeks lay as one dead. When I mended my memory was confused, and it was seven months before I told my story and put the police on the track. Long before that Dyson had married the widow and sailed for America, and though efforts were made to find him nothing came of them. Never did a man deserve the hangman's rope more, and yet if living today he is free and has no fear of the law.

The will of Capt. Henry L. Bruce, heir of Lord Aberdeen, who was shot in France while carrying a flag of truce, leaves $187,820, largely to his wife, who was Camille Clifford, an American actress.

THE CLAIMANT

By EUNICE BLAKE

On the estate of Lucien Marivaud, in France, lived a poor man named Soubise and his wife, Marie, the couple having a little son, Francois. M. Marivaud had extensive vineyards, from the product of which he manufactured wine. Soubise had charge of the grape growing, and Marivaud not only valued his services highly, but was very fond of him. Soubise's wife died, and he soon followed her, leaving little Francois without a home.

M. Marivaud had a son, Victor, about Francois' age. When the latter was left an orphan he was taken to the chateau and became a playmate of Victor. There was a brother of Victor, Louis, much younger than either of these two boys.

When Victor was eighteen he entered the military school and became an army officer. Upon graduating he was ordered to join his regiment in Tonkin. Francois was anxious to see service and, enlisting in the same regiment, went out with Victor, who agreed to interest himself in his promotion that he might become an officer.

A year later after a fight Lieutenant Marivaud was reported missing. This meant that he had fallen into the hands of the Chinese, in which case it was quite likely that he had been murdered. When nothing was heard from him for several years he was given up by his family, and when his brother, Louis, came of age he inherited the family patrimony, his father having died without a will. M. Marivaud had purposely omitted to make one because he never ceased to hope that his son would one day turn out to be among the living.

Ten years after the departure of Victor Marivaud, when there was no member of the family living, Louis, who had for some time possessed and managed the wine business, became engaged to Hortense Villaret, the daughter of a neighbor. Mlle. Villaret belonged to an aristocratic family, but the estate had been confiscated during one of the many changes in the sovereignty of France, and she was very poor. She and Louis were much in love with each other, and her father favored the match because Louis was wealthy and could enable Hortense to return to the style of living to which the family had formerly been accustomed.

All went happily for the lovers till a few weeks before the day set for the wedding. Then one day a man appeared at the chateau claiming to be Victor Marivaud. Louis was but twelve years old when his brother left home, and, granting that this man was Victor, he would not have remembered him. There was no other person at hand who had been familiar with Victor to identify him.

But the claimant was able to tell of many incidents that had happened on the estate, which went far to prove that he was what he claimed to be. He explained his long absence in this wise: During the fight in which he was reported missing he was knocked on the head by the butt of a musket in the hands of a Chinaman and stunned. When he came to himself he remembered nothing of the past, not even his name. The dead were lying about him; the wounded had been removed. He arose and walked till he came to a city, where he eventually entered the service of a French merchant. After passing through various vicissitudes he was taken suddenly ill and was removed to a hospital. After having been delirious on returning to his former condition he had exclaimed, "You rascally Chinaman, take that for yours!" But seeing a nurse before him instead of a Chinaman he appeared much surprised. He had returned to a normal state, remembering that he was Victor Marivaud.

His appearance was a terrible blow to the lovers, for, according to the French law of inheritance, Victor Marivaud was the owner of the estate, including the wine business. He told Louis so many things that had occurred during the latter's childhood that Louis became convinced that the stranger was his brother. Nevertheless it was not to be expected that he would be pleased to see a brother of whom he had no remembrance and who would dispossess him of his property. But the severest blow was that M. Villaret immediately withdrew his consent to his daughter's marriage unless it could be proved that the claimant was an impostor.

There was an old blind woman living on the place, who, on hearing of the claimant, desired that he be brought to her. She asked him a few questions, which seemed to trouble him, though he answered them correctly. Then the old woman directed that he be uncovered to the waist. This was done, and her hand was guided to his chest. She slid her hand around to his side under his right arm, and it rested on a small lump the size of a pea.

"This is Francois Soubise," she said. "I lived with his mother when he was a little boy and often dressed and undressed him. I know him by this lump."

That ended the pretense.

Louis Marivaud after this attempt to impose on him went to Tonkin and made a search for his brother, Victor. But, although he spent much time on the matter, he failed to obtain any information whatever. Victor never returned.

Handsome Canadian Sledge Dog Off on Long Trip.

FROM NORTH TO ANTARCTIC.

Member of One of the Teams That Will Accompany Sir Ernest Shackleton on His Expedition—Many Things of Interest to Little People.

The European war has not prevented the British transatlantic expedition from embarking for the south, notwithstanding the fact that some of its members belong, as Shackleton himself formerly did, to the British naval reserve. The Endurance, the ship of the Weddell sea party, left the Thames Aug. 1, carrying part of the expedition to Buenos Aires. The Aurora, which is to carry the Ross sea section of the expedition, is now at Hobart, Tasmania, and will sail for the antarctic about the beginning of December. When Sir Ernest Shackleton left England in September he took along a number of Canadian sledge dogs. They are very hardy and intelligent animals and will be used to draw the sledges of the party. Diga, the name of the dog pictured, is a handsome fellow. Perhaps he'll live to return again; perhaps he'll perish in the bleak antarctic.

SLEDGE DOG DIGA.

A Boy Scout Game.

The "voyage home" is the name of a game which the boy scouts like.

Several scouts start from given points with compasses, each point being labeled at starting "Shanghai" and bearing underneath it the name of the next "port" and its exact bearing.

By taking a sight along his compass the scout comes at last to a coin or a stone lying on the ground with a note underneath it stating the name of the port and the compass direction of the next port.

He signals to the umpire from each port as he reaches it the name of the place arrived at. If it is out of the regular geographical order he has to return to the last port and try again.

Generally he has to visit six or eight ports before he reaches "home." The fellow who gets there soonest, visiting all his ports in proper order on the way, wins.

The umpire has to be careful in making the course beforehand to take the bearings of the different ports very carefully and accurately. If he gives them the slightest degree wrong the competitor may wander yards away from the right spot.

Of course he can take any line of travel he likes, not necessarily from Shanghai, such as from Cairo to London or Edinburgh to St. Petersburg, Cape Town to Petersburg, and so on.

Riotous Abundance.

"You have plenty of fresh milk?" asked the lady who was looking for summer board.

"Any amount of it."

"And sweet, wholesome butter?"

"Tons and tons of it."

"And fresh country eggs?"

"Eggs? We have them to throw at the strolling actors."

There's a Fine

For selling butter not properly put up and correctly branded.

Government dairy regulations require that when DAIRY BUTTER is put up in blocks, squares or prints and wrapped in parchment paper, the paper shall be printed or branded with the words "Dairy Butter" in letters at least one-quarter inch square.

Imitation Parchment paper (which some sell) is no better than common tissue as soon as it becomes damp; and cheap inks stain the butter, making it unsaleable. We use only PURE PARCHMENT printed with SPECIAL INDELIBLE INK.

EVIDENCE AS TO VALUE OF ASSETS

R. T. Jeffery Tells Board of Arbitrators How He Arrived at Valuations

"Like Horse Standing in Stall Eating His Head Off"

Most of the time of the board of arbitrators this morning was consumed in hearing how R. T. Jeffrey arrived at his valuation of the copper wire, meters, and other fixtures on the Peterborough Light and Power system.

With regard to the street lights he said there was no way the incandescent lights which burned all day, could be turned off separately as there was no way of doing it without cutting off the residential lighting. They were 32 c.p. lamps and of a type now out of date and inefficient. For the amount of energy consumed by them, a very small amount of illumination was obtained. The reflectors were inefficient. To obtain good ilumination all that would be necessary would be to install new lamps.

Arc lamps of a modern type, were in use in Detroit, but having arc lamps hung up at street corners was now an obsolete system. The arc lamps on this system were of the old open type, direct current, carbon kind. They were not manufactured any more. He knew of no city that was installing an arc lamp system such as was used in Peterborough.

In going over this system of arc lamps he allowed 95 per cent. for depreciation. He placed the replacement value of the system at a little over $7,000. The insulation on the wire was practically all off and had been off for some years. The lamps could not be allowed a price at which he could purchase an equivalent lamp, of a newer type, which could operate on the same circuit.

The lamps were of no use now except for scrap and for their usefulness until they could be replaced.

Q.—Does it pay to operate them all?

A.—No, it does not.

Mr. Cowan—"In other words it is like a horse standing in a stable eating its head off."

Q.—What is the depreciation on wire?

A.—Five per cent.

In arriving at the age of the transformer purchased for the local system, he allowed 20 years as a useful age. Mr. Jeffrey said the company were wrong on the age of transformers.

Passing on to meters Mr. Jeffrey said he had made no examination of the meters on this system, except those in stock and they were made by the Peterborough Meter Company. He had wide experience in meters, and had made special tests with Westinghouse meters. He had often been required to test the Peterborough Meter Company's products. Although practically all the tested meters were estimated to have an average useful life of fifteen years, yet they had found the Peterborough meters to be good for an average life of seven to eight years. He figured that they were an inferior quality.

Mr. Jeffrey gave his opinion that Type C, Canadian Westinghouse meters were the best made and in lots of one hundred could be obtained by any city in Ontario for a net price of $7.75. The American Westinghouse meters were away down to $4.00 unit price in lots of one hundred.

Expert evidence giving three widely varying amounts as different valuations placed upon the plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Company was submitted yesterday afternoon to the Board of Arbitrators. Mr. R. T. Jeffrey, who was called in to appraise the value of the system previous to the city acquiring it gave $36,630 as the actual scrap value of the plant. The present value allowing for depreciation from replacement value was $75,891.14, the replacement value being put at $136,226.15.

Mr. Jeffrey's Evidence.

R. T. Jeffrey, engineer for the Hydro Electric Commission, after informing the board of his electrical experience, to establish his qualifications as an electrical authority went on to tell how he arrived at a valuation of the plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Company. In going over the city he found two sets of poles, one belonging to the Otonabee Power Company, and the other to Peterborough Light and Power Co. He took an inventory of everything and found the inventory of the eterborough Light and Power Company substantially correct when compared with his, in fact it varied so slightly that he accepted their finding. He made his valuation on the basis of what it was worth if it had to be taken down.

Mr. Jeffrey explained how he arrived at the value of the plant. He figured it would be of no value to take the poles right out of the ground and from an economic point of view it would be better to cut off

J. W. FITZGERALD GAVE ADDRESS

To Annual Meeting of Land Surveyors

Toronto, Feb. 17.—The twenty-third annual meeting of the Association of Ontario Land Surveyors opened yesterday in the Engineers' Club. Members from all over the province were in attendance. The convention is the largest in the history of the institution.

President J. W. Fitzgerald, of Peterborough, in his opening address expressed appreciation at the excellent showing made by the association during the past year. In giving an outline of the work accomplished he emphasized the necessity of the appointment of a special committee to compile the various survey cases which may come into the courts during the coming year, and urged that this step be taken at the meeting. He also expressed regret at the death of three members, Dean Galbraith, of University of Toronto, Thos. C. Keefer, of Ottawa, and A. W. Ponton, of Edmonton.

In concluding, President Fitzgerald touched briefly on the great European crisis. "We have to thank God,' he said, "that we are living in a free and glorious country as part and parcel of the greatest Empire the world has ever seen, and which with the help of its valiant sons will retain its supremacy."

GOOD BUSINESS ON DOLLAR DAY

All Stores Will Remain Open This Evening

Dollar Day with all the pleasures of bargain hunting is in full swing and the merchants generally speaking are quite elated at the amount of business transacted. There was an early morning rush in many of the stores and goods were wrapped up and dispatched to hundreds of homes throughout the city. But those who were on hand early this morning did not get all the good things as the supply was large and varied. Neither did the shoppers this afternoon clear the counters, so that intending purchasers tonight will find many articles in all lines of goods that will be good buying.

A Review reporter conversed with a number of the merchants and mostly all were pleased with the amount of extra business being done. They did not say that the sales would eclipse those of last year as it was very evident that for some unexplained reason, the farmers did not come to the city as they did last Dollar Day.

Great Improvement by the Canadians

Belleville, Feb. 17. — Letters were received from Captain O'Flynn Wednesday morning, dated Feb. 2, from Bustard Camp. The captain says that all of the Belleville boys are well and in splendid condition. Owing to the return to the double company system, he is with the Belleville boys, and again expresses great pleasure that his friend, Lieut. Ponton, and he are together. The senior subalterns besides Capt. O'Flynn are R. D. Ponton, Belleville; C. H. Ackerman, Peterborough, and Gordon McLennan, of Ottawa. The boys were looking forward to an inspection by the King, which has since taken place, but the captain said they would all miss Lord Roberts, who was present at the inspection by the King when it was last made. Lord Roberts was greatly respected by all, and the Canadians were particularly proud when they learned he was their chief, and would miss the grand old mans' face at the inspection. The Canadians have made great improvement in the last month, and reports show that the King was very much pleased with the inspection. The captain sends his best wishes to his Belleville friends, sending special messages to a number. The boys are now at the front, as shown by the cables, and it is with hearts full of anxiety and with prayers for their welfare that their friends are waiting at home.

WORK RESUMED.

Otonabee Young Men Convicted on Defamatory Libel Charge

BAIL GRANTED

Late yesterday afternoon at the conclusion of lengthy evidence and argument, Magistrate Dumble returned a conviction against Louis Shaw and Harry Redmond, of Otonabee, charged with defamatory libel, and reserved judgment for one week.

Bail of $500 for each prisoner in sureties of $250 each was consented to by the court. The bonds were furnished by Shaw's brother and Redmond's father.

Although Mr. Kerr, counsel for the accused, protested vigorously against the statement, alleging a confession on the part of the two young men, being accepted as evidence, His Worship accepted the statement.

It will remain with the Crown Attorney to say whether the other charges will be pressed.

RADIAL LINES BOB UP AGAIN

Meeting to be Held in Toronto Next Week

In a brief session last night, the City Council passed a resolution, authorizing the payment of $84,200 to the Board of Education, in the usual monthly instalments. The amount is the appropriation for the year.

On the suggestion of Ald. Stratton, the Charity Board will be paid $2000 on account. The appropriation asked by the Charity Board will be discussed before full payment is made. The board has an overdraft.

The Council adjourned and met in committee, when the Mayor read correspondence dealing with radial railways. A big meeting will be held in Toronto, Wednesday, February 24, and Sir Adam Beck will be one of the speakers. The matter of representation at the meeting by Peterborough was left with the Mayor.

The Canadian Suffrage Association asked for a resolution favoring votes for women. A deputation will wait on the Ontario Government on Wednesday, February 24. The communication was received—which means shelved.

Council accepted an invitation of the Canadian Club to their meeting, Friday evening, when Dr. Falconer will speak.

Ald. Edgar's Resolution Providing a Saving of $2400 Gets But Scant Support

ALD. WEIR WOULD HIT 'EM ALL

To all appearances, there will be no cuts in the salaries of city officials.

Ald. Edgar's efforts to allow the officials to have a poor year as well as the merchants and taxpayers in general, have so far been in vain. A resolution which he introduced last night was declared "too drastic," "too radical," and altogether Ald. Edgar received but little support. Ald. Saunders, who seconded the resolution, did not say a word during the meeting. Ald. Geo. Evans also maintained a golden silence.

Had several of the city officials been present, they might have protested against the numerous bouquets, handed out right and left by the city fathers, on the claim that they were unworthy of such fervent praise.

The Resolution

Moved by Ald. John Edgar, seconded by Ald. Jas. Saunders, that the following recommendations be adopted.

1. That the engineering department consist of the following:
   One engineer,
   One assistant,
   One bookkeeper and stenographer.

2. That a male assistant be appointed in the clerk's office at a salary of $600 per year, and that Miss Jackson be transferred from the city clerk's office to the engineer's office at present salary.

3. That as soon as the outfall sewer work is completed, one street commissioner only shall be employed, from the 1st of December to the 1st of April.

4. That the salary of Commissioner Evans be placed as it was before the last increase, namely, $1000.

5. That the city treasurer receive an additional salary of $1000 per year and that the taxes be collected in his office.

6. That the assessor's salary for 1915 be the same as for 1914.

7. That the Police Commissioners be asked not to raise the appropriation for 1915 over that of 1914, and if possible lower it.

8. That the salary of the Fire Chief be lowered $100 per year, and the firemen's salaries be reduced as follows:
   1st year men, $30 per year.
   2nd year men, $40 per year.
   3rd year men, $50 per year.

9. That as soon as the money market and business conditions resume their normal state, the salary of the Fire Chief, firemen, assessor and street commissioner be placed as at present.

10. That the above recommendation take effect April 1st, 1915.

The following statement shows the net saving to the city by the above recommendations, if adopted:

One Engineer	$1000.00
Mr. Quartermaine	750.00
Com. Evans	100.00
Tax collector	300.00
Assessor	100.00
Fire Chief	100.00
Firemen—
6 at $50	300.00
5 at $40	200.00
5 at $30	150.00
	$3000.00
Male assistant to city clerk	$ 600.00
	$2400.00

This resolution would do away away with the services of T. Q. Quartermaine, either T. A. S. Hay or G. F. Hilliard, assistant engineers, W. J. Green, tax collector. The taxes would be collected by the present city treasurer.

What Council Adopted.

The recommendation from the last Council meeting, made up of clauses from the report of the finance committee, was adopted, as follows:

(a) That it be left to the City Engineer and the Board of Works to decide whether a street inspector is required the year round.

(b) That the matter of the salaries in connection with the City Engineers' department be left with the Board of Works.

(c) That the salaries of the following officials be left as they are at present: City Treasurer, Street Commissioner, Tax Collector, Assessor, Engineer of the Sewage Pumping Station, Relief Officer, Medical Officer of Health and City Physician, Plumbing Inspector, Sanitary Inspector, Caretaker of City Buildings, the City Solicitor, the County Judge as Police Commissioner, Caretaker of the town clock, and the Firemen.

(d) That the Board of Commissioners of Police be requested to keep the expenses of the police department as low as possible this year.

Several of the aldermen were in favour of the department chairmen dealing with the salary question, as they knew or were supposed to know the facts as to the qualifications, usefulness and worth of the men engaged.

Cut Them All.

Ald. Weir had a suggestion that he thought was a better one than Ald. Edgar's resolution. He would make a cut of ten per cent. on salaries over $1000 and a cut of five per cent. on salaries under $1000. Speaking of Mr. Fitzgerald, he believed that official was good value for the money spent. The city would lose by dispensing with his services

Ald. Duffus opined the resolution was too radical to be conducive to the best interests of the city. He spoke in warm praise of the fire department, its efficiency and economical management. He certainly would not tamper with this department.

Regarding the clause affecting the engineering department, Ald. Edgar said Mr. Parsons would endorse it.

Ald. Johnston made himself clear as to his stand regarding one man in the engineer's department (Mr. Hay). He was a strong supporter of that official and would vote accordingly as long as he was in the Council. Ald. Johnston claimed it would be injudicious to meddle.

Ald. McIntyre again expressed the opinion that the engineering department was costing too much, something like $6000, and furthermore he wanted the city engineer to have a diploma.

Ald. Green defended this department in no uncertain terms, particularly the city engineer. He said some of the best men in the country did not have a diploma.

Ald. McIntyre charged Mr. Parsons with having erred in connection with the sewer on Dickson street, by which the city lost $1000.

This brought a denial from Ald. Green.

Ald. Stratton felt the resolution was a little too drastic.

Ald. Dobbin favored the department chairmen dealing with the salary question.

Once again the Mayor covered the ground which he had frequently trodden in Council. He supported the city engineer and was satisfied that all things considered, there was no present need for a change.

On Ald. Edgar's resolution the aldermen voted as follows:

For — Ald. Edgar, Saunders, Weir and McIntyre.

Against — Ald. Stratton, Duffus, Green, Evans, Johnston and Dobbin.

BIG AIRSHIP IN TROUBLE

Had Apparently Been Damaged by Gun-fire

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 17. — A big airship, believed of the Parsevale type, apparently damaged by gun fire, flew over Amsterdam this morning, says a despatch to Reuter's. The airship was flying at a height of about 600 feet, and its crew was unable to keep the vessel in a horizontal position. Assuming a vertical position, the aircraft drifted in the direction of the Zuyder Zee, carrying with it telegraph wires with which a dangling rope had become entangled. The air vessel was later sighted minus its gondola.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, FEB. 17, 1915

WHY WILSON'S MEXICAN POLICY HAS FAILED.

MR. TAFT, speaking in Toronto with regard to Mexico, said he was anxiously concerned, and could only hope that the leader of one army would so triumph over the other that order would be restored. President Wilson said recently that he had been deceived by certain men in whose knowledge of Mexico and motives he had placed confidence. Another point is that Spain has asked various powers to intervene in the affairs of Mexico to restore order there, possibly because General Carranza expelled the Spanish ambassador.

Putting these three points together, it appears that President Wilson has "bungled" the Mexican question simply because he backed the wrong horse. Villa has not proved to be master in his own country, so that now, the United States is merely looking for the strong arm politician who can rule them.

Mexico is no place yet for representative institutions. The only kind of government that will succeed there or that is practical, is that of a dictatorship. A people that are so ready to rush into hostile camps at the beck and call of some ruthless opportunist, are fit only for a government of force. Mexico might be a fruitful place for Germany to apply her ideas of the superman in government. Certainly the Wilson policy has failed, and failed because it is based on high principles of government that do not exist in Mexico. Moreover, the people there are accustomed to authority. Even their revolutions are not so much protests against authority, but rather attempts to obtain authority. The longer the trouble endures in Mexico, the clearer becomes the need for a strong executive—it may be in a single person, who is backed by force sufficient to maintain his authority.

HON. ARTHUR MEIGHEN IN MONTREAL.

A VERY STIRRING APPEAL is the way in which Montreal newspapers speak of the address of the Hon. Arthur Meighen, Solicitor-General, delivered to the Women's Canadian Club of Montreal. In the course of his address, Mr. Meighen said:

> "But what of today? Just think what seven months have done. A very Vesuvius of horror has burst upon the world. We all know now the burning ambition that fired it. We know the philosophy that fed it. A thousand writers, a million voices and deeds that speak louder than words, tell us that Nietzscheism nationalized is the creed of Germany. Treitsche, Buelow and Bernhardi were the propagators, but far more the exponents of the nation's faith. They were not the wayward children, not the prodigals, but the favoured sons of the Teuton household. They were fiery, but beloved, Peter the Hermits of the Gospel of Might. Their creed fitted into the mould of the Prussian intellect. It had a meaning and a mission for the super-scientific mind of that race; it appealed to their overmastering virility, their pride, their organizing power. It appealed to, it inspired, it set aflame the spirit that was lighted first on the sword of Frederick the Great, and drew from him its precepts. Frederick the Great, rather than William the Second, is the type of the modern Prussian atheism and lassitude. We know the progeny of a union like that. Here it is in this war.
> "On land and on sea the shock of battle has found the children of our time to be the sons of Drake and Nelson, of Marlborough and Wellington. When the thrilling story of Mons is written, when its courage and its coolness, its amazing skill are lighted in history beside the colours of Cressy and Blenheim, it may be the judgment of posterity will yield the palm to this generation. But we are not alone in the glory. The guilt of our enemy has raised up our friends. The Wolfes and Montcalms are now side by side for liberty. And proud though we Britons are of our race, and the mighty men we cherish, we proclaim the hope that from the bosom of re-animated France will come, has come, the men that will teach the swaggering Hohenzollerns who the Bonaparte of this country really is."

Mr. Meighen pointed out the magnitude of the task facing the Allies. He recalled how the end of the war in October was predicted, then December, and now it is spring. In spite of the tightness of the blockade that Britain has succeeded in placing around Germany's sea coast and ports, that country has very probably the materials for a protracted struggle, although it confidently expected the war to be of short duration. While Germany's hopes in this respect have been badly frustrated, yet she is far from being beaten. Only by hard fighting can militarism be put down, but at the same time the reports that come from Germany of shortage in various lines, show that much suffering is already the lot of her people. There will likely be greater suffering before peace ends the struggle. The Solicitor-General was right in emphasizing the fact that Canada was participating in a gigantic undertaking, and, if we were resolute, the issue would not be in doubt.

GERMANY'S NEED OF COPPER.

A RECENT PRICE quoted for a ton of copper delivered in Germany was $776. The price in England at the same time was $291. Germany's need of copper for war purposes steadily increases. Cartridge cases for rifles and quick-firing guns are made of an alloy of copper and zinc, and the metals must be of a high degree of purity. Copper wire is indispensable for field telephones, and in the electrical industry generally nothing but copper will serve for many purposes, as, for instance, the windings of dynamos. Aluminum has been tried as a substitute, but the use of it would involve risks in the making of war material. Before the war Germany was consuming 250,000 tons of copper, and the home production was only about 25,000 tons.

These figures, which are given by the New York Sun, would apparently indicate that Germany was at the end of her rope so far as producing things in which copper was a constituent Such a conclusion is not correct, for these figures merely show that copper is at a premium in Germany, not that it is unobtainable. Copper, like food, is disposed of in that country at high prices, but there is probably enough of both in Germany to supply its military needs for a much longer time than we suppose, and the military need is the principal one just now.

BROCKVILLE HAD SOME JUSTIFICATION.

TORONTO NEWSPAPERS will do well to maintain a discreet silence and deport themselves with all civility over the German aeroplane "invasion" that emanated from Brockville. We remember that not so many moons ago, Toronto got into such a panic over a German-American invasion via Windsor, that it called out its Home Guard. Of course, when it realized how foolish it had been, it advanced the plausible excuse that it was merely "a test mobilization," and tried to make a victim of Major-General Hughes. Brockville, however, was more justified than Toronto for believing the situation perilous, because it could see something. Toronto only imagined things.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE BROCKVILLE aeroplane scare was even reported to the authorities at Exhibition Military Camp last night, but no call to arms was issued to the troops as a result of the message which came by telephone to the camp headquarters, in view of the bare details then available.—News item in a Toronto newspaper. This amazing sangfroid under the imminent peril of aeroplane bombs seems to have been "put on."

HON. THOMAS CHASE CASGRAIN, Postmaster-General of Canada, no sooner captured a political prize, when he went after another and has been successful. He was married yesterday in New York to Mrs. Masson, a widow, formerly a Miss Berthiaume, of Montreal.

The Gunman.

(Montreal Daily Mail.)

I have been in the West of your United States. There when a man sees another gripping for his hip pocket, he draws first. That is what Germany did.—Dr. Dernberg. Bernhardi Dernberg, leader of the German professional army sent, at the beginning of the war, to violate the neutrality of the United States, does well to seek in outlawry for a justification of Germany's war policy. Where men respect the law, he can find no justification for German lawlessness.

Dr. Dernberg is to be congratulated upon the aptness of his comparison. Comparing Germany to the gunman of the lawless West—which, by the way, is a small enough compliment to the United States—is really good. For the gunman respects no law in the atmosphere in which Dr. Dernberg places him. The gunman is a law unto himself. So is Germany.

Europe, as an "armed camp," was bad enough. But Dr. Dernberg goes rather too far when he implies that the law even in Europe was reputed so low as is to be found at a rough mining camp. Also, he puts Germany in a very bad light when he points out that the gunman's provocation was all she required in order to begin to shoot.

Germany as a blustering bully of a gunman strikes us as a pretty good description. If that is the best Dr. Dernberg can do he might better keep silent.

Beresford's Advice.

(Calgary Herald.)

Lord Charles Beresford's proposal, which he is to bring up in the British Parliament, to the effect that German raiders on undefended places should be publicly hanged as pirates, is all very well as an expression of opinion, but could not very well be put in practice.

In the first place, after all is said and done, the Germans who are shelling undefended towns and places are only carrying out the orders of their superiors at Berlin. It is not the actual bluejackets who fired the guns whose shells landed in Scarborough that should be hanged as pirates, but the heads of the naval and military machine who direct such tactics.

In the second place, such action on the part of Great Britain would only lead to reprisals by the Germans which would make the war still more frightful than it is. Bluff old sea dog as he is, Lord Charles Beresford can see no excuse for these German atrocities. Neither can anybody else; but the punishment he proposes, while it does fit the crime, would not result in any good.

Winter Warfare.

(New York Commercial.)

Nothing of value has been won by either side in the winter campaigns of war in Europe. Disease and exposure are taking a heavier toll of lives than are the bullets and shrapnel of the combatants. No material changes in the relative positions of the Allies and their Germanic foes has occurred since the end of September other than the waste of lives. Lord Kitchener said the war will not begin until next May, and it now looks as if he was right. Newspapers have not had to revise their war maps which shows that the war has become a stalemate. Mighty preparations for a campaign are being made by both sides and, even if there is no chance of an early peace, it is a pity that a truce for the winter could not have been arranged tacitly, if not formally.

Frederick the Great

On the 17th of August, 1786, died one of the most remarkable sovereigns Europe ever produced, Frederick II. of Prussia, called Frederick the Great. Thomas Carlyle thus describes him:

"The man is not of godlike physiognomy any more than of imposing stature or costume. Close shut mouth, with thin lips, prominent jaws and nose, receding brow by no means of Olympian height; head, however, is of long form and has superlative gray eyes in it. Not what is called a beautiful man, nor yet, by all appearances, what is called a happy.

"On the contrary, the face bears evidence of many sorrows, as they are termed; of much hard labor done in this world and seems to anticipate but more still coming. Quiet stoicism, capable enough of what joy there were, but not expecting any worth mention; great unconscious and some conscious pride tempered with a cheery mockery of humor—are written in that old face, which carries its chin well forward in spite of the slight stoop about the neck; snuffy nose rather flung into the air under its old cocked hat—like an old snuffy lion on the watch; and such a pair of eyes as no man or lion or lynx of that century bore elsewhere, according to all the testimony we have.

"This is the man who, among the common people who much loved and esteemed him, was Vater Fritz—Father Fred—a name of familiarity which had not bred contempt in that instance."

Exploding Dynamite Kills Two.

NORTH BAY, Feb. 17.—A bad accident occurred at the second crossing of the C.N.R. over the Sturgeon river, back of Sturgeon Falls, when Wm. Feaver, C.N.R. resident engineer, of North Bay, received fatal injuries, and Dominic Papatela, an Italian, was instantly killed. The Italian was thawing out thirty sticks of dynamite near an open fire when it exploded, blowing him into three pieces.

The city police and military have joined in scouring the city and district for the man. Forrester comes from England.

PANGGANGS OF MALAY

Ruled by a great enchantress and having no form of money, the Panggangs, a tribe in a mountainous jungle in the northern part of the Malay peninsula, is one of the queerest known to white men. The tribesmen are of a negroid type, whose social organization is that of a simple form of commonwealth and who are nomadic, wandering about from place to place in their dense jungles and forests.

Among them dwells a woman whose strange characteristics are strongly reminiscent of Haggard's famous "She." The woman is supposed to be a great enchantress. She is held in dread by the Panggangs. She lives alone in a bamboo hut, shaded by the leaves of the sacred ubang tree. Food is brought her daily by the oldest man or woman of the tribe.

The Panggangs are said to be a peaceable and honest people, and do not, among themselves, either fight or steal. They literally have no use for money for trading purposes, but if by chance they get money they bury it, so that they may use it in trading after death. After getting a supply of food they do no work whatever until the supply is ended. They eat any wild creature.

These people do not seem to have any religion, but they have a queer belief in the transmigration of souls. In their country tigers are numerous, and they believe that sometimes their relatives, when they die, become changed into tigers.—Argonaut.

The Bodleian Library.

In size and importance the Bodleian library at Oxford is the greatest university library in the world, and the greatest library not directly aided by the state. About seven rank above it in the world, but among English speaking peoples only the British museum. It contains 2,750,000 printed literary pieces in perhaps 860,000 volumes. There are also about 40,000 manuscripts, not counting separate charters and deeds, which number about 18,500. The staff consists of sixty-eight persons. The number of readers averages more than 250 a day. —London Standard.

Walk and Live Long

Some put walking on the shelf with many others of the "lost arts." No one ever walks now except the Boy Scouts.

Dr. R. E. Castelaw believes the body should never be tired after exercise. He says never walk to the point of exhaustion, and never walk more than two miles at one time. The man who goes for a twenty-mile walk for fun is not only looked upon as a mild sort of lunatic, but really is one.

Surely the busiest business man has time to walk two miles each day! It would only take thirty minutes, and then he might never require a family physician. Even a walk once a week helps a great deal. Try it next Saturday.

"Put on an old sweater and walk briskly, but not hurriedly," Dr. Castelaw says. "Stand erect and breathe through the nose. Air taken into the body through the mouth goes direct to the lungs while cold. Air taken in through the nose-passages is warmed by the time it reaches the lungs. Make the breaths long and deep.

"Oxygen is a deadly poison to some things—chief among which are the tuberculosis and meningitis germs. Breathe deeply and kill them. Walking exercises every muscle in the body, except, possibly, the muscles of the face. And if a man looks around at the beauties of Nature while he is walking, he will exercise those. Walk and you'll never have a cold, lung trouble, or tuberculosis.

"The people who walk the most live the longest."

Tale of a Cow.

A poor tiller of the soil had owned for a number of years a valuable cow. Of a sudden he began to find that the beast always stood in her stall with her tail toward the south, where the manger was, her head toward the north. He tried various means of making the cow stand the other way, her head to the south and her tail to the north, but no matter how many times he set her properly in her stall she always turned around. Finally there was nothing to do but rebuild the stall to suit the cow.

Somewhat later war came and the poor tiller of the soil had to join his regiment and go and fight for the fatherland. His wife and children, reduced to dire poverty, were forced to sell the cow to the butcher, who slaughtered her and sold her meat at famine prices to his fellow townsmen. At the same time, however, the mystery of the animal's unaccountable behavior was cleared up. In the body of the cow was found a small compass which the poor man, her owner, had lost some months before from his watch chain. Evidently it had fallen among the hay and been eaten.

THE LITTLE COD

And a Separation and a Reunion

By AGNES G. BROGAN

Philippa and Richard had been sweethearts for so long that no one could remember when the "little god" first claimed them for his own. When Richard was still a boy in high school it was Philippa who settled upon his future career as a lawyer, and, having no father to aid him in accomplishing this purpose, Richard set about making plans for its fulfillment.

Armed only with his high school diploma, he obtained a position as country schoolteacher in a town which possessed the advantage of nearness to his ladylove. And as time passed the boy managed, with the aid of a friendly old solicitor, to begin a course of night law study. If Richard worked hard for love's sake he was not alone in the sacrifice. Philippa, who was young and good to look upon, might have had happier cavaliers than the one whose head bowed over lawbooks. But she laughed her admirers aside, spending her own evenings drawing lifelike sketches of all the chubby babies in the neighborhood. And at last the faithful ones came into their reward—Richard had successfully passed his final examinations.

"You shall have desk room in my office, boy," the pleased old barrister promised. "Then we'll see what you are made of."

And at just this glorious time a wonderful thing happened to Philippa. With an inclosed check came word that a magazine had accepted one of her sketches. She had sent the drawing never daring to dream that the baby face, with its toothless smile, could win an editor's approval, yet here was the substantial proof. Richard was enthusiastic when she confided her triumph.

"Why, Phil," he said, "you may develop into a great artist. When we are married you shall have those art lessons."

But that long looked for goal seemed to fade farther into distance as Richard fought to gain a foothold in his profession. Strive as he might he could barely earn the necessaries of life. And as time passed he awoke painfully to the growing change in Philippa. Where heretofore she had eagerly discussed with him plans for their future she now talked alone of "art," while the little home which they had pictured together was to her no longer a coveted reality, but a possible faraway dream.

"You are selfish," her sister told her angrily, "not to see the suffering in Richard's face."

"Dick suffering!" Philippa exclaimed incredulously.

She joined the family group a few days later waving above her head a bulky document. "Listen to this!" she cried. "Aunt Philippa did remember me in her will, after all. She has left an annuity of $100 a month, to be paid me as long as I live."

Her mother leaned forward excitedly. "Oh, she said, "now you may take drawing lessons as you have always wished to do!"

Philippa smiled. "First of all," she said, "I intend to marry Dickie."

"He won't have your money," her sister warned her. "Dick will wish to support his own wife."

Philippa nodded understandingly. "I know," she agreed, "and that is why he must know nothing of this legacy until we are married."

When she came to her lover, freely offering to share his humble lot, Richard could scarcely believe his own good fortune. "You will have to give up much for my sake, dear love," he said.

"It will be for your sake," Philippa answered eloquently. Some things are rare and beautiful beyond the power of description. Such was the joy of Philippa and Richard. It was happiness to sit in the shaded lamplight of evening building air castles for a future as rose colored as its beginning. But Philippa's secret weighed heavily upon her conscience, and on one of these occasions she made full confession, her cheek pressed close against her husband's hair. He was silent for so long that she bent to look into his face, and its expression of sadness shocked her.

"Why, Dickie!" she exclaimed. "Do you care so much about the money?"

Richard gathered his wife in his arms. "Your husband is a selfish brute, dear," he said contritely, "and I am afraid you will not understand why this should hurt so much. It was a wonderful thing, you see, to believe that you had chosen life with me above everything else in the world—even that you were willing to sacrifice for my sake your beloved art." He laughed shortly. "Rather a shock to find that you agreed to marry me only—only, Philippa, when you were certain of gaining both."

The girl drew away from him. "You are unkind," she said. Thus began that "little rift within the lute which, slowly widening, silences all." And it did widen.

The art studies, under the best teacher to be found, had not exhausted last month's annuity; therefore Philippa decided to buy a piano. She had missed her own since leaving home, and Richard had loved to hear her sing in those days. So one never to be forgotten evening as his step sounded upon the stair she seated herself before the newly installed instrument, and as the door opened she sang a little song, the one he had liked so well. Now, Richard had left his office on that particular evening in a state of mind bordering on despair. The lawsuit in which he had labored so tirelessly, the great suit upon which he had counted so much, had been lost. There were many bills to be paid, and Richard wondered desperately as he hurried along how he was going to pay them. Then across his troubled turmoil of thought burst Philippa's merry song. As she turned on the stool to meet his look of pleased surprise her smile instantly faded.

"I—I bought the piano, Richard," she faltered, "intending to pay for it with my own money."

"Your money!" he burst out contemptuously. "Then in your opinion marriage does not make two people one."

Many cruel things Richard said, led on by his blind passion of disappointment, while Philippa stood seriously thinking. She recalled her years of patient waiting, her never failing encouragement, and her heart burned within her now at his injustice.

"You should not have married me," Richard ended bitterly, "if you wished to indulge your whims."

Then Philippa closed the piano. "You may have them send for it tomorrow," she said. When her husband had gone Philippa began in a methodical fashion to pack her trunk. When that was accomplished she sat down to pen a little note.

"Of all the wild things you have said this night," she wrote, "one is true. I should never have married you. I go now to remedy that mistake. As I wish to be entirely dependent in future upon my legacy I will send you from the city an address to which my annuity may be forwarded."

So Philippa took up her life in the old home with a brave assumption of cheerfulness. In order to hasten her now determined purpose she rented a small studio in the city to be in touch with the workers, and if the girl's eyes grew wistful as the postman continued to pass on his way her inner grief was not betrayed to a sympathizing family. Steadily, feverishly she worked, and at last a new anxiety presented itself. Without notification her annuity suddenly ceased payment. Dismayed, Philippa found that she had lost the address of the trust company and wrote to its lawyers demanding an explanation. The response to her letter came promptly.

"We are at a loss to understand your communication," the letter said in part, "as it was our unpleasant duty at the time to inform you of the absolute failure of said trust company, which failure occurred after the second payment of your annuity."

Philippa repeated the typewritten words, "which failure occurred after payment of your second annuity."

Then who had made the successive payments which had reached her through all the past years? Since the "parting of their ways" Richard had placed the forwarding of these checks in the hands of the old solicitor from whom he rented desk room. Presently Philippa jumped up. Her eyes were shining with a new and joyous hope.

Oh, if in spite of their blind misunderstanding, it might be that Richard still cared! A moment she smilingly considered, then wrote the solicitor's name.

"Will you," she briefly requested, "kindly forward my annuity as per usual? It has been long overdue."

Philippa's family wondered that evening at the secret source of her good spirits. When she was alone she read quickly the old lawyer's reply to her inquiry. Curtly he informed her "that the annuity would no doubt be attended to when her husband was again able to be about. At present Mr. Harmon was too ill to be troubled with business affairs."

Dickie ill! Philippa's light heartedness vanished as she slipped into her coat. She must go at once to hear news of him. Resolutely she kept her face from that other desk with its vacant chair as she entered the old solicitor's presence. He regarded her sternly as he bowed in greeting.

"I wish to ask a few questions," said Philippa directly. "Will you answer them?"

"I will," he replied.

"Tell me, then, who has been paying my annuity since the trust company failed long ago?"

"It may be a breach of confidence," the lawyer answered, "but it seems only right that you should know. Your husband has been sacrificing himself in order to secretly continue these payments that you might not be disappointed in your career. Laboring unceasingly without hope of happiness is a quick road to nervous prostration. That fact he realizes now."

Philippa buried her face in her hands. "I—I must go to him," she said. Her heart pounded painfully as she entered the little vestibule and climbed the well remembered stairs. Outside the closed door she waited timidly.

"Who is there?" called a dearly familiar voice, and Richard arose on his couch. For a moment his eyes searched hers with eager and infinite yearning. Then, with a tender cry, Philippa flew straight to his outstretched arms.

In a certain art gallery hangs a widely copied painting, the beautiful "Infant Cupid." Against its number in the catalogue is written, "Richard Harmon, painted by his mother." And when Philippa and her husband come, standing almost reverently before the canvas, the true "god of love" looks back at them both with his happy baby smile.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Convalescence.

Some persons find it hard to remember that every wise convalescence must be gradual. That is why a good nurse is almost as important during convalescence as during the real illness. We all have a healthy love of life, and we are never so conscious of life as we are when we have just escaped from the threat of death. It is natural that our joy should express itself in efforts to do something to show that we are alive. That is especially true after an attack of typhoid fever. Typhoid usually lasts several weeks, and by the time convalescene begins the patient is heartily tired of being an invalid and very likely to abuse his feeble, new born strength. A patient who is getting well of typhoid generally has a tremendous appetite, and unless he is careful to keep it within bounds he may have a relapse.

In convalescence from such disorders of the respiratory tract as pneumonia and bronchitis there is danger that the ever present germ of tuberculosis may gain a foothold, and after scarlet fever great care must be taken lest the kidneys become inflamed.

The way to avoid all these dangers is to make haste slowly. Unwillingness to remain a partial invalid for a few weeks has often caused lifelong invalidism. Therefore give up every kind of social excitement for a time, go to bed early and sleep late, take a nap every afternoon and follow absolutely your doctor's advice. That is the way to a safe and happy recovery.

MANNISH SUIT.

Fetching Tailored Creation Suitable For Coaching or Driving.

GABARDINE SUIT.

The model pictured here is carried out in tete de negre gabardine. There is a three-quarter length coachman's coat, finished with large bone buttons, and a straight skirt buttoned in the front its entire length. Such a gown may be donned for walking, but it is an ideal costume for driving or for coaching when the spring season makes it possible to enjoy this sport.

INDOOR PLANTS.

Dry Air May Be Artificially Moistened For Their Benefit.

One reason why many plants die in the house during the winter is because of steam heat. This is the driest of all kinds of heat, giving out absolutely no moisture, but quickly drying out all dampness in the air of a room. Even with the windows open the fresh supply of moist air coming in is not sufficient to combat the drying process of the steam heat.

To remedy this the plant owner must provide the moisture for the air. By laying wet cloths on the radiators the heat coming forth will be moist heat, which is not half so harmful either to plant or to person as the dry kind. These cloths will have to be remoistened often. It depends largely on the amount of heat in the radiator.

This will do much to keep the indoor plants alive through the winter. The rest depends on the watering. One woman says she has always managed to keep her Boston ferns for at least a year by placing the jar in a small pan of water. She does not give them any water from above, but leaves this little pan below so that the plant draws up water as it needs it.

Another way, which has been adopted by many plant owners with great success, is to put the whole plant in the bathtub twice a week, let the water run until it just covers the top of the jar and then let it out, leaving the plant to drain off before resoring to its stand. No other water is given it through the week, just these two baths.

ORANGE SEEDLINGS.

Must Be Grafted When About Two Years Old to Obtain Flowers.

Orange plants thrive in a mixture of rich loam and old manure, but care is necessary not to disturb them or to give them too much water when not in a growing state.

Oranges raised from seed will not flower for several years unless budded or grafted when about two years old. Plants propagated from cuttings can be stuck in sand with gentle bottom heat and will flower and fruit much sooner than any others, but scarcely ever attain a large size.

Florists would pot two inch orange plants in thumb pots. These dry out quickly, and the amateur grower will probably do better by potting two or three plants in a three inch pot, later repotting separately when the plants are larger. It will do to pot them separately then if desired in three inch pots.

Keep the foliage clean by frequent spraying or washing and watch for scale and lice.

Airing Ironed Garments.

The importance of a thorough airing of clothes after ironing cannot be overemphasized—not only on the score of health, but on those of appearance and economy. Clothes put away damp do not look smooth and well finished when taken out for use, and there is a danger of their becoming damaged by mildew.

Cheap Cushion Fillings.

Clippings from cloth garments make excellent fillings for cushions. They should be finely shredded.

WHY HE QUIT THE BUSINESS

Grim Story of the Man Who Used to be a Drug Clerk

"I got out of the drug business because something happened that nearly turned my hair gray," said the serious-faced man.

"I used to sleep in the store, and often I had to answer night calls. One night I was awakened from a deep sleep by somebody persistently ringing the door bell.

"I found a small boy at the door, and he handed me a prescription. I was so sleepy that I could hardly see, but I filled the prescription, the boy paid me and hastened away.

"When I went to replace the bottles I had taken from the shelves my eyes were open a little wider than in the opening stages of my wakefulness, and I was horrified to find that instead of taking down the bottle of tincture of orange I had used the next bottle, a deadly poison.

"I flew out of the street door and looked up and down the street. The boy had disappeared. I had never seen him before and did not know for whom the medicine was. I wanted to rush off to the doctor and find out who the patient was, but that I decided would be useless, as it would be too late to do any good.

"I entered the store and paced up and down the floor. My hair stood on end. I saw my victim in all the agony of aconite poisoning. I saw the pale face of death. I saw the family vowing vengeance.

"My heart thumped furiously as I heard hastening footsteps. I peered through the window and saw the boy who had brought the prescription. The bottle was gone. My only hope vanished. With a trembling hand I opened the door, prepared to hear the worst.

"The lad stood hesitating. Tears were in his eyes. I dared not speak.

"'P—please, mister,' he stammered, 'I ran so fast I fell and broke the bottle, and I ain't got any more money.'

"My heart leaped into my throat. I felt like giving a yell of joy as I leaped forward and pulled that boy into the store. I wanted to hug and kiss him. When I had mastered my emotion I gave him another bottle of medicine which I most cheerfully paid for out of my own pocket, and into the bargain I gave him the biggest handful of expensive candy he ever had."

A Clerical Error.

A salesman, traveling far from home and anxious about his home affairs, wished to write his wife so that she would answer immediately. He knew an appropriate Bible verse, but did not have a Bible handy to see if he had the right reference. However, trusting to his memory, he wrote:

Dear Wife—Proverbs xxv. 24.

He received no answer to this, and when he got home he asked his wife why she had not written to him. She got the Bible and showed the verse to him.

"Good heavens!" he said. "It ought to have been Proverbs xxv. 25."

In a Perfume Factory.

Musk is perhaps the most valuable and delightful of all perfumes, yet the refiner as he opens the musk pods must wear thick cloths over mouth and nostrils, so repulsive is the odor that the pods emit. Indeed, this odor, inhaled for any length of time, causes nosebleed. Civet, karaguiluc and ambergris have in small quantities a delicious perfume, but in large quantities they smell so abominable as to give the worker nausea. The hawthorn blossom is delicately sweet, and perfumers prize it highly, yet a roomful of hawthorn blossoms smells like a charnel house. This, too, is true of the tube-rose.

Fourteen Carat Love.

Into a jewelery store there came a shy, pretty young lady with her engagement ring, which had been bought there and which she would like to have changed.

The ring fitted her exactly, and she was greatly pleased with the noble sentiment of the inscription, "Whate'er betide let love abide," but she did not like its arrangement.

Examination showed that the stolid, unimaginative old engraver had carved in the sentence regardless of the ringmaker's little stamp of quality, and so it read, "Whate'er betide let 14-k. love abide."

Histrionic Requirements.

"There is no reason for mentioning your name," said the eminent player. "You are a press agent; not an actor."

"Believe me," replied Mr. Boostington, "a press agent has to be some actor to convince a star that he believes all the things he hammers out on the typewriter."—Washington Star.

Above will be found the picture of a modern gun of the kind that is being used in the present war. At a glance the gun and some old trees appear to be all there is in the picture, but by careful scrutiny some soldiers' faces will be found. There are 19 of them in all. Can you find them? It is no easy task, but by patience and perseverance can be accomplished.

You may win a cash prize by doing so. Many have done this as will be shown by the names and addresses published below. If you find the faces mark each one you find with an X, cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words "I have found all the faces and marked them." Write these nine words plainly and neatly, as in case of ties, both writing and neatness will be considered factors in this contest.

This may take up a little of your time, but as there are TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash and One Hundred premiums given away, it is worth your time to take a little trouble over this matter. Remember, all you have to do is to mark the faces, cut out the picture and write on a separate piece of paper the words, "I have found all the faces and marked them."

We do not ask You to Spend One Cent of Your Money in order to enter this Contest.

Send your answer at once; we will reply by Return Mail telling you whether your answer is correct or not, and we will send you a complete Prize List, together with the names and addresses of persons who have recently received over Two Thousand Dollars in Cash Prizes from us, and full particulars of a simple condition that must be fulfilled. (This condition does not involve the spending of any of your money.)

Winners of cash prizes in our late competitions will not be allowed to enter this Contest.

This competition will be judged by two well known business men of undoubted integrity, who have no connection with this company, whose decisions must be accepted as final.

Below will be found a partial list of the names and addresses of a few persons who have won some of our larger prizes in recent contests. Although these persons are entirely unknown to us, they are our references. An enquiry from any one of them will bring the information that our contests are carried out with the utmost fairness and integrity. Your opportunity to win a good round sum is equally as good as that of any one else, as all previous winners of cash prizes are debarred from entering this contest.

DIDN'T TAKE THE HOLE.

But That Was Probably Because the Court Said They Shouldn't.

An amusing instance of legal sharp practice is set forth in the annals of Westerly, R. I. It occurred a hundred years ago, when, it seems, lawyers were quite as adroit at quibbling as certain of their successors are today.

A farmer of broken fortunes hired for cultivation a piece of land, agreeing to pay for the use thereof with a certain proportion of the crop. He planted potatoes and had an unusual degree of success. Being without a storeroom, he obtained the consent of a neighboring landholder and deposited his share of the potatoes in what farmers call a potato hole—that is, an excavation in the earth in which the potatoes are placed and covered with earth and straw in the form of a pyramid.

Shortly afterward he had occasion to go to Connecticut, and one of his creditors seized the opportunity to attach the potato hole.

Upon this another creditor bestirred himself and consulted a lawyer as to what could be done to secure his claim. The attorney was equal to the occasion. He secured the issuing of a second writ, by which an attachment was levied upon the potatoes in the potato hole, the documents specifically setting forth that the potato hole should be left upon the land where it was found.

The warrant was promptly served, and when the first creditor appeared upon the scene he found the potato hole, but not the potatoes.—Case and Comment.

HOLY WAR HANGS FIRE BECAUSE ISLAM WON'T STAND FOR GERMAN CHRISTIANS AS ALLIES — WOULD KILL ALL UNBELIEVERS IN REAL HOLY WAR

LETTER FROM EGYPT TELLS OF DREADFUL SLAUGHTER FEARED IN ASIA MINOR --- TERROR OF A REAL HOLY WAR

Special Correspondence, by M. R. Merrill.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Jan. 16.—As I write this letter, the United States battleship Tennessee stands in the harbor unloading Jewish refugees from Jerusalem. A scared, sorry-looking lot of refugees—frightened and yet glad. They are glad that they have escaped with their lives from the land which is the holy of holies to them and their race. Every refugee is sure that Jerusalem and Palestine—yes, all Asia Minor — is doomed to a slaughter of the Christian and Jewish population, except, perhaps, the German officers who are directing the Turkish army and urging the fulfillment of the Holy War decree.

I have been down the Suez Canal, and I passed over to Cairo and from there up to this seaport of Egypt. At this season of other years I would have seen hundreds of tourists from the United States and thousands from Europe. I met a bare half-dozen Americans and four of them, like myself, were correspondents and photographers of American newspapers. A few Greeks, a few Italians and a score or so of adventurous Englishmen made up the rest of the civilian foreign contingent. Of course, there are thousands of English, Australian and New Zealand military officers and soldiers in Egypt, but they are here on professional business.

Egypt has seen no war yet. Then why the scarcity of travelers?

The nightmare of "Holy War" is abroad. The imagination of those who journey up and down the world is frightened at the threat of the "Jehad," that awful Mohammedan thing which, once started in earnest, would make the present war in Europe child's play in comparison. The "Jehad," the awful fanaticism of which drives Mohammedans to blood like fish to water! If Ali Baku, the meek-eyed acrobat in a New York vaudeville theatre, suddenly charges down Broadway, killing right and left till he himself it literally cut and shot to pieces, you in America may know that the holy war is really on.

Holy war, or "Jehad," consists in killing all infidels everywhere, or converting them to the Moslem faith instantly, at the point of the sword. Mohammed himself sanctioned "Jehad." He himself was the first holy warrior. Moreover the Koran, the Mohammedan bible, solemnly enjoins the holy war upon all true believers. Thus the Moslem's most sacred and deepest religious convictions urge him to the slaughter of the "unbeliever."

And the world of Islam has long cherished practical motives, as well as religious, for a holy war.

Their dream is a Moslem empire, ruled by a "true believer" extending from the Atlantic coast of Africa to the slopes of the Himalayas, comprising over 19 per cent. of the world's inhabitants; and their worshipped prophecy has been: "Let us await the great European war which is coming. Then will be time for us to strike."

Today the European war has flared up, yet, though young Turk gentlemen cry "holy war," there is no holy war. Not yet.

Why then, with so much religious frenzy and solemn political purpose behind it, has not this Moslem conflagration, which the kaiser tried to fan into flame, really begun?

Simply because he was trying to kill one bird with two stones—and the stones collided in mid-air! The kaiser's one purpose was to defeat the allies. His two stones were firstly, to use the Turkish troops against Russia and Egypt, and secondly to weaken the allies by arousing religious revolts in their colonies.

But this could not possibly be a "Jehad." A "Jehad" does not recognize one believer from another. All Christians are dogs and scums of the earth, the German as much as the Englishman. And by Allah, what is this? German officers commanding the prophet's (Turkish) troops Christian soldiers in the Turkish army in this, a "holy war!" Impossible! It must be some other cause than the cause of the "true religion which allows Christians to be generals over the faithful. The Musselman saw this and decided that it was not a holy war—that it was a war to help a race of Christians—the Germans.

So, however fearful the civilized world may be, there is no holy war yet. Not yet!

Another reason for the hitch in the holy war is that the true Mohammedan is suspicious of the Turk and hates him. Bloody conquest is the Turkish sultan's only title to the leadership of Islam. Sultan Selim the Grim, in the year 1517, conquered Mecca, the Mohammedans' holy city, and deprived the Arab caliphs of their ancient title as leaders of Islam.

The Arabs hate the Turks not only as usurpers, but racially. They accuse them of being stolid, slovenly, inefficient and ignorant. The Arabs are undeniably very much superior both in intelligence and physically, to the Turks. And they're 12,000,000 strong!

So they await a smash-up of the sultan's empire. And they demand that after the smash the European powers permit an Arab to become the new caliph. If their desires are listened to, the Mohammedan world will remain at peace for a time, at least.

WHAT A TRUE HOLY WAR WOULD MEAN.

Turkish troops would slay their German officers.

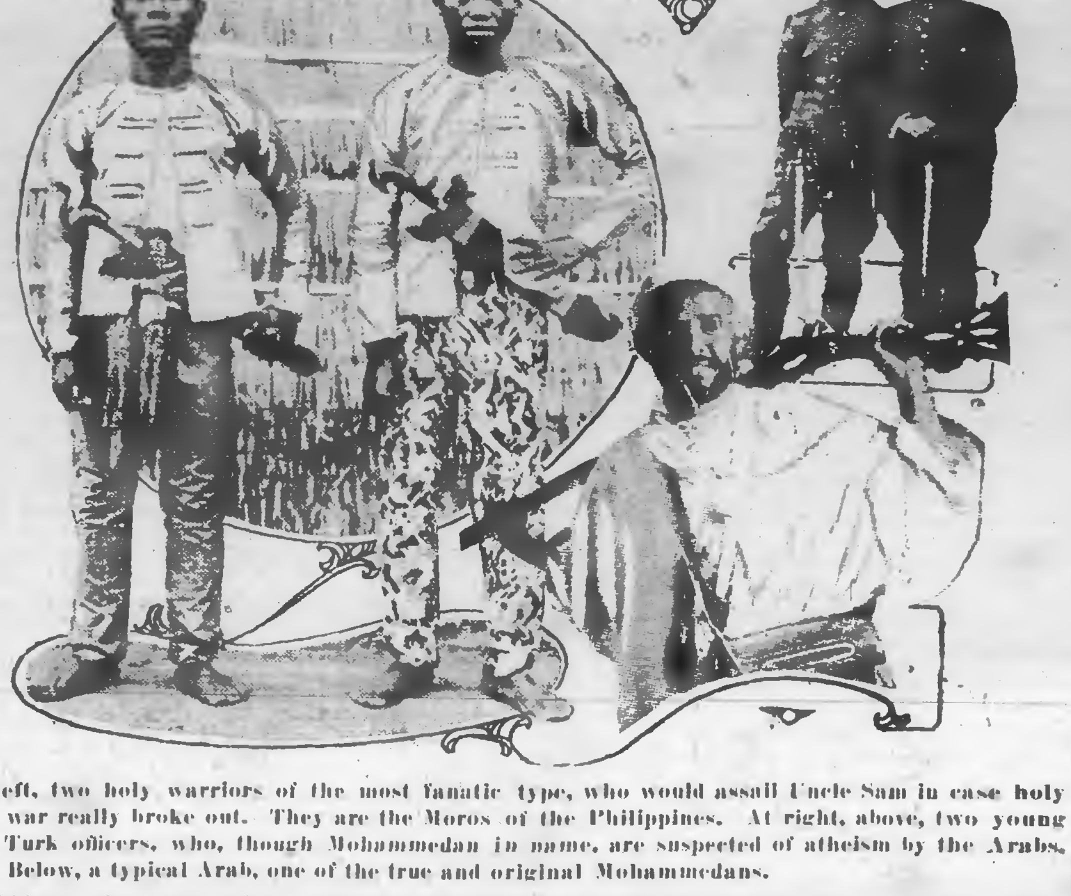
The 50,000 Mohammedans now fighting for France would turn their guns against their comrades.

Russia's 16,000,000 Mohammedan subjects would be in revolt.

Millions of Moslems of the dark continent would be trying to sweep the French, Spanish, Italian and English garrisons of Africa into the Mediterranean, while India would reek with Christian blood.

Holland would have a bloody revolt to meet in the Dutch East Indies.

The United States would have a deadly war in the southern Philippines.



At left, two holy warriors of the most fanatic type, who would assail Uncle Sam in case holy war really broke out. They are the Moros of the Philippines. At right, above, two young Turk officers, who, though Mohammedan in name, are suspected of atheism by the Arabs. Below, a typical Arab, one of the true and original Mohammedans.

HOLY WAR WOULD HIT UNCLE SAM! DEADLY MOROS WOULD RUN AMUCK

When the day comes, when Islam rises against Christianity in a real holy war, Moro warriors in the Philippine Islands will unearth their guns from many a secret arsenal, and massacre of Americans will follow.

The Moros are Mohammedans. But their fanatic courage and murderous out-Islams Islam. No Musselman is deadlier than the Moro.

It is one of their pleasant religious fancies to run amuck from time to time. A Moro about to run amuck bathes in a sacred spring, shaves off his eyebrows, clothes himself in white, and with solemn ceremony takes oath to die killing Christians. He is then known as a "juramentado."

He hides a barong (the Moro knife) in his clothes and hikes for the most crowded street of a Christian settlement. The career of a mad dog is innocuous compared to what follows.

The number of persons that a juramentado will slay before his high speed killing career through the streets is ended seems incredible. When at last he's brought to a stop by impaling himself on an American soldier's bayonet, he often jams the blade deeper into his breast in order to get nearer to the soldier. Then he slashes off the latter's act, as a last holy act.

Multiply this furious madman by the ten thousand, and you have an idea of the bloody problem which would face Uncle Sam in case a real holy war aroused the Mohammedans of the Philippines.

For the last four years the Moros have been nominally disarmed. But many a bundle of guns was hidden before the authorities hid them. When Gen. Malvar surrendered to the United States, with his force of some 2000 men, it oddly enough chanced that the men had only about 200 rifles, according to a veteran of the Philippine wars. Where were the other 1800 rifles? When the holy war breaks out, we'll know.

And those of the Moros who can't get rifles, will make their own knives for Christian killing. They really prefer the knife anyhow.

NAVAL GUN CREWS WARM WORK IN ACTION

How the Target or the Enemy is Located and the Way the Monster Guns Are Operated—The Scene in the Conning Tower and in the Turrets

The gray battleship seems strangely deserted and bare, for her decks are denuded of men, while all rails and other upstanding encumbrances have been laid flat on deck for big gun practice.

In the conning tower, with its twelve inch armor, stands the captain, his navigating officer, a midshipman or two and several other officers and men. The small circular erection, barely ten feet in diameter, seems very cramped for all it has to contain.

Above the conning tower is another armored erection, containing a range finder, and inside this is the gunnery lieutenant, with half a dozen more officers and men. He is surrounded by strange looking instruments, while the man at the range finder, with his eyes at its rubber eyepieces, is monotonously chanting out the distance of the approaching target.

Inside the turrets themselves the expectant men are grouped around their monster thirteen inch guns. The great projectiles and the cordite charges behind them have already been pushed home by the hydraulic rammers, and, since their weapons are thus fully loaded, the guns' crews are idle for the time being

But the gun layers—the men who aim and fire the guns—and the trainers—those who keep them pointing in the right direction—are anxiously keeping the sights on the target, and every now and then, as they move their small brass handles, there is a wheezing of hydraulic machinery, and the great breeches rise and fall ever so slightly, while the whole armored structure containing them revolves an inch or so at a time to keep the sights on.

A minute or two later, after an order has come through from the control position, the lieutenant in charge of the foremost turret suddenly raps out the order, "Bring both guns to the ready!"

The men standing by the breeches flick over their small levers. "Right gun ready! Left gun ready!" they report in rapid succession.

The range meanwhile is decreasing rapidly, and about ten seconds later there comes the strident rattling of an electric bell.

It is the signal to open fire. The gun layer holds his breath, sees the cross wires of his telescope cutting the latticework of the target and then presses an innocent looking brass thumb piece. As he does so there is a roar, and with a blaze of orange flame and a pall of brown smoke, a projectile weighing more than half a ton is sailing through the air on its way toward the target.

Outside the turret the concussion is terrible, but inside it is barely felt, and the only means the gun's crew have of knowing their weapon has gone off is by the rocking of the turret and the recoil of the gun. Back she slides, with the water whistling and gurgling through the hydraulic valves far below. She stops and then, as the running out springs exert their strength, is driven back to the firing position.

The men meanwhile are working like demons. Some one, by moving a small lever which actuates a hydraulic engine, has opened the breech. A cloud of acrid cordite smoke fills the turret, but another man, turning a tap, sends a jet of water spouting into the chamber to extinguish any still burning fragments.

Everything seems chaos, but every one knows what to do—he has done it time after time—and in less than thirty seconds we hear a sharp order, "Right gun, load!"

A man moves an upright lever, and an arrangement looking like a miniature lift climbs into view through the floor. It has come up from the shell room below laden with the new charge and projectile and stops dead in the rear of the gun.

Reposing in a tray is the shot itself. Another lever is worked, and a flexible chain hydraulic rammer, looking like a snake, darts out of its resting place and pushes the shot before it into the breech of the gun.

It is driven home with a dull thud. The rammer is withdrawn, another handle is pulled and two enormous brown cylinders of cordite fall into the tray just vacated by the projectile. They, too, are rammed home, and before we quite realize what has happened the rammer and lift have disappeared, the breech of the gun has been swung home and the great weapon is ready for firing.

In the fire control position the gunnery lieutenant has seen the first shot tear a jagged hole in the target and promptly whispers an order to a man at his side. The latter moves a small handle, and thirty seconds later there is another discharge.

In about ten minutes it is all over and the ship is approaching the target to see the result of her shooting.—London Answers.

POTASH IN AGRICULTURE.

For many years the Stassfurt mines in Germany have been practically the sole source of the potash compounds used for fertilizing purposes on this continent. Among the evil effects resulting from the present war therefore may be counted the cutting off from the markets of the world the supply of this material. Dr. Shutt, Dominion chemist, regards this circumstance as not so serious as some may consider. In order to place his views before the farmers of Canada, Dr. Shutt has issued Circular No. 7 of the Experimental Farms, "Potash in Agriculture." It takes up the subject under several heads and reaches the following conclusions:

"It is only our light, sandy and gravelly soils that are markedly deficient in potash, and this element is only specially called for by clover, potatoes, root and leafy crops generally. There is yet some potash in the market, though it will probably have to be purchased in the form of a complex fertilizer. We have several Canadian sources of potash available to the farmer — notably liquid manure, wood ashes and seaweed — materials rich in this useful constituent and which are more or less readily obtainable in many parts of the Dominion. And, lastly, there are the indirect potassic fertilizers, which, though not adding to the sum total of the soil's potash, may serve a useful purpose by liberating it in available forms, and thus in times such as the present may help to tide us over until potash compounds are once more upon the market."

This circular is available free at the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

FANNY CROSBY AND THE HYMNS SHE COMPOSED

Did not Begin Her Great Work Till Forty Years Old

Eight thousand hymns of Christian worship sung in Protestant churches throughout the world are the work of Fanny Crosby, who died last week. No one since the days of Charles Wesley or Isaac Watts has made anywhere near as large a contribution to the gospel book as did the blind writer whose death occurred recently.

Fanny Crosby's name was signed so regularly as author of one hymn after another that the hymn book makers of a quarter of a century ago were forced to give her some 200 different pen names to make it appear that some one besides the famous writer had contributed. Thousands—perhaps hundreds of thousands—who sang her songs, which were translated into every language, did not know that it was a blind woman's inspiration which they employed to express their Christian faith and hope in song.

"Saved by Grace," "Blessed Assurance," "Rescue the Perishing," and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," are typical of Fanny Crosby's most popular religious verses. Of the latter the writer has related an incident, showing the remarkable rapidity with which she employed her inspiration and her talents of versification.

W. H. Doane, who wrote the music for many of her verses, had called one morning at Miss Crosby's home in New York.

"I must take a train to Cincinnati in 40 minutes,' he said, 'and I have some music for which I want you to write a hymn.'

"He sat down at the piano and played his music.

"'I think I can write it, Mr. Doane,' I said.

"I hurried upstairs and sat down to write. For some time I was entirely oblivious of surroundings. When I came back to my full senses the hymn was written and was on paper before me. I learned that I had only taken 15 minutes. Triumphantly I carried it down to Mr. Doane. The music he played then and the words I had hurriedly written are the same as used today in singing 'Safe in the Arms of Jesus.'

"It was my most successful hymn, and I believe it was dictated by the spirit of the Lord, and that it was born for a mission."

Began Hymn Writing at Forty.

But Fanny Crosby did not begin hymn writing until she was over 40 years of age. Fifty years ago she was best known for her popular melodies, which were whistled all over the country, such as "Proud World, Good-by, I'm Going Home," "Hazel Dell," "The Honeysuckle Glen" and "Never Forget the Dear Ones."

Born in Southeast Putnam county, N.Y., March 24, 1820, daughter of John and Mercy Crosby, christened Frances Jane Crosby and married to Alexander Van Alstyne, a blind music teacher, who died many years ago, the blind writer lived to be nearly 95 years old. Her mother had lived to be 102 and her grandmother to be 106. She retained to the last all her faculties — excepting eyesight. She lost this during a fever in infancy, when a hot poultice was applied to her eyes, destroying the optic nerve.

At eight years the little girl displayed her first talent in versification by this philosophy of contentment:

Oh, what a happy soul I am:
Although I canont see;
I am resolved that in this world
Contented I will be

How many blessings I enjoy,
That other people don't;
To weep and sigh because I'm blind
I cannot and I won't.

The family went to Bridgefield, Conn., when she was nine years old, and remained there for about four years. In 1833, when she was 15, she was placed in the Institution for the Blind in New York, where she stayed for 23 years.

While still in the institution, during the summer of 1852, she wrote several songs for George F. Root. These included some which have since become widely known, among them "Honeysuckle Glen," "Hazel Dell," "Rosalie," the "Prairie Flower," "Proud World, Goodby. I'm Going Home," and "There's Music in the Air." The words of the cantatas, "Pilgrim Fathers" and "The Flower Queen," were also written by her at about this period. Previous to this time she had published two volumes of her poems: "The Blind Girl, and other Poems," in 1844, and "Montery and Other Poems," in 1849. A third volume, "A Wreath of Columbia's Flowers," followed during the year of her marriage.

While she was staying at the institution, she met a great many distinguished people. Presidents Tyler and Van Buren, Henry Clay, Gov. William H. Seward and Gen. Winfield Scott were among these.

Spoke in Senate.

She had the honor of being the only woman whose voice has been heard publicly in the Senate Chamber at Washington, as on one occasion she read a poem there.

On March 5, 1858, she was married to Alexander Van Alstyne, and left the institution. She began writing Sunday school hymns in 1864. Her first one, the opening lines of which are:

We are going, we are going
To a home beyond the sea, was written in the Ponton Hotel in Franklin Street, in February of that year. This hymn was published by William B. Bradbury, who published by far the greater part of her work.

For many years she had a very close connection with the Moody and Sankey revival work. In 1867 she wrote "More Like Jesus" for music by Dr. Doane, to be used at an anniversary at the Five Points Mission in New York, and their second was "Pass Me Not, O Gentle Saviour."

Most Famous Hymns.

The three hmyns which have been mentioned as Fanny Crosby's most noted trio are "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," "Jesus Keep Me Near the Cross" and "Jesus the Water of Life Will Give," but it is not easy to make such a selection.

At one time and another she has published a half dozen books of verse. "Hope On, Hope Ever," and "What the Old Year Saw" are two of her most popular poems. Miss Crosby was a member of Mary Silliman Chapter D. A. R., of Bridgeport, and wrote the State song of Connecticut for the Daughters. "The State We Honor."

AN HEROIC PILOT.

Cairo, Feb. 16.—A stirring little story of quiet heroism displayed during the battle against the Turkish invaders the other day has been told here. The hero of the incident is Pilot Carew, who was on board the Hardinge, one of the ships engaged on the canal helping repel the Ottoman attack. His ship came under the heaviest fire and Carew was severely wounded in the arm and legs. He would not, however, leave his post, although suffering terribly.

"Bring me a chair and prop me up," he said to one of the crew. "I will see you through."

The gallant pilot is now in hospital, where it was found necessary to amputate one leg. Happily he is making good progress, and his recovery is assured.

Greece May Break With Turkey.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The relations between Greece and Turkey apparently are becoming more strained. Although Turkey has offered reparation for the insult to the Greek military attache at Constantinople, it is reported that the Greek Minister has left the legation in charge of a secretary, being dissatisfied with Turkey's attitude. The Turkish Minister also has left Athens. This is believed in some quarters to be the first step in the rupture of diplomatic relations between Greece and Turkey.

FORTY AEROPLANES SWOOP DOWN ON BELGIAN BASES

ANOTHER BRITISH RAID

Middelkerke, Ostend, Gistelles and Zeebrugge Are Attacked by Aeroplanes and Seaplanes and Bombs Are Dropped With Good Results—Gun Positions, Submarine Bases and Aerodromes Attacked.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The air wing of the British navy yesterday made another massed attack on the German positions along the Belgian coast in an effort to destroy or damage the submarine base at Zeebrugge, the guns at Ostend and Middelkerke, and the aerodrome at Gistelles.

According to the official report, good results were obtained. Forty machines were utilized yesterday as compared with 34 in last week's attack.

The official statement concerning the air raid says:

"The air operations of the naval wing against the Bruges, Ostend and Zeebrugge districts were continued yesterday afternoon. Forty aeroplanes and seaplanes bombarded Ostend, Middelkerke, Gistelles and Zeebrugge.

"Bombs were dropped on the heavy batteries situated on the east and west sides of Ostend, on gun positions at Middelkerke, on transport wagons on the Ostend-Gistelles road, on the mole at Zeebrugge to widen the breach damaged in former attacks, on the locks at Zeebrugge, on barges outside Blankenberghe and on trawlers outside Zeebrugge.

"Eight French aeroplanes assisted the naval machines by making vigorous attacks on the Gistelles aerodrome, thus effectively preventing German aircraft from cutting off our machines. It is reported that good results were obtained.

"Instructions are always issued to confine attacks to points of military importance and every effort is made by the flying officers to avoid dropping bombs on any residential portions of towns."

While the British airmen were dropping their bombs on the gun positions, the supply trains and barges and the trawlers used in mine laying and mine sweeping operations, eight French airmen attacked the Gistelles aerodrome, thus preventing the German airmen from making any attempt to cut off the British machines.

The official report makes no report of the airmen engaged, so it is presumed that they all returned safely.

The day was bright and clear, conditions being more favorable than the last time for a raid.

STEAMER BLOWN UP.

British Vessel Falls Victim to Mines Off Cape Antifer.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—A despatch to Lloyds from Fecamp, France, says the British steamer Dulwich, Capt. Dudley, bound from Hull for Rouen, was blown up Monday evening twenty-five miles off Cape Antifer by two successive explosions.

The despatch says that seven men of the crew of the steamer arrived in Fecamp Monday night. They reported that none of the men on board the steamer had been injured, and that all of them could have made their escape in the lifeboats.

The Dulwich was a vessel of 3,289 tons and was owned by the Britain Steamship Co.

Commander of Blucher Dead.

EDINBURGH, Feb. 17.—Captain Erdmann, commander of the German cruiser Blucher, who was among those rescued during the battle between British and German squadrons in the North Sea, Jan. 25, died here last night from pneumonia. His illness was due to exposure suffered when the Blucher was sunk.

OTTAWA, Feb. 17.—Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, will open the Canadian Building at the Panama-Pacific Exposition on Feb. 25. He leaves for San Francisco today.

TRUCE IS FORGOTTEN

Opposition Leader Takes Fling at Hon. J. C Doherty's Pension

OTTAWA, Feb. 17.—The House spent the bulk of yesterday in committee of supply on the civil service estimates. In moving the House into supply, Sir Robert Borden explained briefly the recent Cabinet changes, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier's reply, in the course of which he criticized Hon. Judge Doherty's acceptance of a civil pension as an ex-judge occasioned a momentary breeze, which soon passed over.

Upon the motion of the Prime Minister, a special committee was appointed to examine into the charges respecting the boots furnished the first Canadian contingent. The committee, which will have power to send for persons, papers and records, consists of Sir J. A. M. Aikins and Messrs. McCurdy, Middlebro, Rainville, MacDonald, Lemieux and Nesbitt.

Sir Robert Borden, in moving the adjournment of the House over Ash Wednesday, asked that Government orders have precedence hereafter on Thursdays and Wednesdays. He cited the example of the British Government, which had taken every day for Government business.

It was agreed that Thursday and Friday of this week should be private members' day, and that beginning with next week the Government orders should have precedence upon every day except Monday. This practically defers the resumption of the budget until next Tuesday.

The House then went into committee of supply upon the estimates for civil government. The discussion of the salary list grew warm at times, the Opposition demanding economy in the future expenditures of the Department.

NOTED SCHOLAR DEAD.

Rev. Thomas Kelly Cheyne Was Authority On the Scriptures.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Rev. Thomas Kelly Cheyne, a noted authority on scriptural writings, died last night.

Thomas Kelly Cheyne, who was born in 1841, was for many years Oriel professor of interpretation of Scripture at Oxford. He was Canon of Rochester from 1885 to 1908. He was a grandson of Rev. T. H. Horne, author of the once popular theological text book on the "Introductions to the Polyscriptures." He was a member of the Old Testament Revision Company in 1884, and was the author of many theological works.

Albanians Defeated by Serbs.

PARIS, Feb. 17.—A Nish despatch to the Havas Agency says:

"The Albanian raiders have been routed and driven back across the Serbian frontier. More complete information shows that the Albanians were led into making the raid by Austrian priests and Mohammedan adversaries of Essad Pasha, the provisional President, by preaching a holy war. The movement is being directed by Turkish and German agents."

Railway Lines Nearly Ready.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 17.—(Via London.)—The completion of several lines of railroad radiating from Warsaw to points on the Austrian frontier of eastern and western Galicia, which is expected to be accomplished within a few weeks, is designed to give the Russian forces that mobility which apparently is necessary to cope with the kaleidoscopic changes that the German and Austrian armies make so successfully.

TWO MILES OF GERMAN TRENCHES ARE CAPTURED

London Daily News Despatch Reports Furious German Activity at Ypres Where British Troops Held Position Against German Wedge—German Offensive in East is Vigorously Pushed.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The official communication issued by the French War Office last night says that German trenches three kilometers in extent (nearly two miles) have been taken in Champagne, to the northwest of Perthes and north of Beausejour.

It is considered probable that a brigade of Canadians has already taken part in a battle, from the official announcement of the French General Staff that the British troops recaptured yesterday the two parts of the trench which they had lost between St. Eloi and the Ypres Canal the preceding day.

The Princess Patricias were on duty in the trenches near this point, but were withdrawn from the trenches for a rest Monday.

A despatch to The London Daily News from north France yesterday says:

"There is marked signs all along the line of fresh furious German activity. Naturally our own end is getting as usual the lion's share of the enemy's awakened gusts. There was a fierce massed attack on our position beyond Ypres Monday and in the wild, battered region where the long tree-lined La Basse roads runs straight and scarred toward Bethune. It is reported that in a heavy wedge the Germans, careless of the fearful sacrifice of life that the action necessitated, penetrated our line. They fought savagely and frantically. There was hand-to-hand fighting and deadly work with the bayonet under a hail of shell and infantry fire. Our men rallied with their usual brilliancy. There were heavy losses on both sides. The Germans absolutely flung themselves away. Though some prisoners were taken, the action was too hot for much activity in this direction, and there was very little quarter given or taken. The Germans boast that this is only the beginning of a long premeditated and prepared forward movement. They declare that by the end of the week the road to Calais will be open to them in spite of our new forces of field and horse artillery."

Military movements of the first importance are taking place along the eastern line. The German offensive, strongly supported by fresh troops is being pushed with great vigor both along the east Prussian frontier and in Poland, north of the lower Vistula. The Russians now have evacuated East Prussia, except for a small area near Lyck, where they are opposing the German advance, and also are apparently falling back in north Poland, for the Germans yesterday announced that they have occupied Plock and Bielsk, which the Russians recaptured from them a short time ago.

While the Germans claim that they have inflicted heavy losses on the retiring Russian armies, military men here, and the newspaper correspondents in Petrograd, refer to the Muscovite movement as a strategical retirement to the fortified line which lies along the Niemen river through Knovno, Grodno, and Lomza and thence southwest to the fortress of Novoe Georgiewsk.

Heavy fighting also continues in the Carpathians and Bukowina. In Bukowina, the Russians are falling back, but they continue to hold the Carpathian passes further west and are putting up a stubborn resistance to the Austro-German offensive in that region. Here the fighting is taking place in deep snow, and both sides are suffering severely.

The large number of troops that the Germans are using in the east, it is believed by military observers here, will prevent for some time any attempt by the Germans to break the deadlock in the west.

WILL BE NO COMPROMISE

German Proposal Rejected in It's Entirety

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Great Britain received yesterday through Walter Hines Page, the American Ambassador, Germany's offer to withdraw her threat of a submarine blockade against Great Britain if the British navy would permit the free movement of foodstuffs to the civil population of Germany.

The proposal was presented to the Cabinet at an extraordinary session by Foreign Secretary Sir Edward Grey yesterday.

According to reliable reports, the German proposal was rejected in its entirety.

Great Britain is already preparing to retaliate against Germany by placing under more stringent control ships destined to German ports, and a proclamation momentarily is expected declaring a blockade of the German coast, or, at any rate, the prohibition of foodstuffs destined for Germany. The Cabinet, with its naval and military advisers, considered the question yesterday, and it is understood the situation is awaiting the formal confirmation of the Privy Council, from which all proclamations emanate.

In the meantime British and neutral vessels are moving as freely as usual, with the exception of those belonging to a few Dutch lines, which have reduced their number of sailings.

Russia Continues Trading.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 17.—While the commercial block between England and Germany has been enforced rigorously, there appears to be no particularly strong feeling against trading between Germany and Russia. Business men from the two countries continue to deal with each other, and commercial travelers from Germany are said to have booked orders for Russia, after meeting their customers by appointment in Denmark or Sweden.

Sudbury Laundryman Attacked.

SUDBURY, Feb. 17.—As John Williams opened the door of the Sudbury Steam Laundry yesterday morning at six o'clock, he was struck on the head several times with an iron bar and seriously injured. His assailant has not yet been apprehended and no motive is known as nothing in the laundry was missing. Williams will likely recover.

No News of Liner.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 17.—Anxiety is felt concerning the Scandinavian Amerika liner Oscar II., which left New York Feb. 4, and was signalled 410 miles west of the coast of Scotland Friday. There has been no news of her since. She should have reached here yesterday.

Lemieux Would Send Letters Free.

OTTAWA, Feb. 17.—Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Postmaster-General in the Laurier administration, has given notice that he will move that all mail matter for the Canadian soldiers on active service be sent free of postage.

ITALY REFUSES TO JOIN UNION

Will not Join With Neutrals to Protest Blockade

ROME, Feb. 17.—Rome has refused to join the proposed league of neutral powers with the object of the common defence of neutral shipping against Germany's threatened blockade of British ports. This refusal is on the grounds that Italy is fully prepared to defend her own shipping unaided. Besides, she is determined to retain complete freedom of action. It is further suspected that the proposed league, which originated in Scandinavia, is not disinterested, since it is intended to assure the prolonged neutrality of European naval powers, and also possibly that of America. The Italian Government has formally notified Germany that Italy will not tolerate acts of war against Italian shipping, which the Government considers is unwarranted.

The prevailing impression here is that Germany's reply, which is imminent, will be conciliatory and complications are unlikely, but naturally the slightest incident is apt to lead to serious issues.

BURGLARS KIT IS UNEARTHED

Outfit Was Hidden Under Frame Structure

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Feb. 17.—Hidden under a frame structure on the property of the G.T.R. an employe yesterday unearthed a burglars' outfit, consisting of fuse, candles, dynamite and a bottle containing what is supposed to be nitro-glycerine.

The articles were wrapped in a handkerchief and had evidently been deposited there while a job was being spied out. The police are investigating the matter.

PRAISE FOR PATRICIAS.

Field Marshal French Says They Are a "Magnificent Set of Men."

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Field Marshal Sir John French, in a despatch issued last night, pays a remarkable tribute to the work and fighting qualities of the Princess Patricias.

The field marshal, speaking of general operations, says: "The troops composing the army in France have been subjected to as severe a trial as it is possible to impose upon any body of men. The desperate fighting described in my last despatch had hardly been brought to a conclusion when they were called upon to face rigors and hardships of a winter campaign. Frost and snow have alternated with periods of continuous rain.

"With regard to these inspections the fine appearance presented by the 27th and 28th divisions, composed principally of battalions which had come from India, is praised. Included in the former division was Princess Patricia's Royal Canadian Regiment.

"They are a magnificent set of men and have done excellent work in the trenches," concluded the report.

LEFT MANY MONUMENTS

Late Thomas C. Keefer, of Ottawa, Was an Eminent Engineer

The announcement of the death of Thomas C. Keefer, C.M.G., of Ottawa, caused deep regret throughout Canada in all parts of which he was well known.

The late Mr. Keefer was one of the best known civil engineers in the Dominion and his name is connected with many important public works.

Thomas Coltrim Keefer was born November, 1821, and was in his 94th year when he died. His grandfather was a United Empire Loyalist and took part with the royal troops in the war of 1776. He lost his life and his property was confiscated. Later his two sons settled in the Niagara peninsula where George, one of the sons, was granted 400 acres of land by the Government. He cleared the land and in conjunction with other United Empire Loyalists founded the village of Thorold, where he brought up a family of 10 sons and five daughters. The last survivor of this large family was the eminent engineer, Thomas C. Keefer, C.M.G., of Ottawa.

Thomas Keefer was educated at Upper Canada College and was a member of the first cricket club of that academy in 1836. He began his career as an engineer on the Erie Canal in the United States and later was employed on the Welland Canal, remaining on that work until 1845. He was then engaged to take the chief position in connection with the Ottawa river works, the object of which was to facilitate the immense lumber trade of that river and its tributaries. He carried on these works until 1894, designing important improvements which are in use at present. In 1849 he produced his Philosophy of Railways, a work which had a great influence on the policy of the Government in respect to the construction of railways in Canada. In the following year he won Lord Elgin's prize for the best essay on The Influence of the Canals of Canada on Her Agriculture, and subsequently published various essays and reports, among them one favoring the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway and another dealing with Canadian waterways from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic.

In 1850 he was employed by the Government in making a survey of the rapids of the St. Lawrence with a view to their improvement; also in examining the river below Quebec for a harbor of relief and in exploring routes with a view to the building of a canal or railway between the St. Lawrence and the upper St. John waters of Lake Temiscouata. He was afterwards engaged in preliminary surveys for the Grand Trunk Railway between Montreal and Toronto and in preparing plans for the famous Victoria bridge at Montreal, which was undertaken on his survey and report.

Later he was employed in constructing water works for the cities of Montreal, Hamilton and Ottawa. For some years he was the engineer of the Montreal Harbor Commission. He served as chairman of the Royal Commission on Ice floods. It was through his efforts that the railways of Canada adopted the standard gauge in place of the narrow. In 1857 he was Canadian commissioner for the first international exhibition in London and again for the exhibition of 1862 and 1878 he was executive commissioner of the Paris exhibition. He was elected an officer of the Legion of Honor and a Companion of St. Michael and St. George.

Mr. Keefer was elected vice-president of the Society of American Engineers in 1886 and 1887 and president in 1888. He was one of the founders of the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers in 1887 and was its first president. His engineering works have made his name familiar throughout Canada and his writings have stamped him as a man of remarkable foresight in public affairs.

The late Mr. Keefer was married in 1848 to Elizabeth, daughter of the late Hon. Thomas McKay, M.L.C. Of this union one son, Charles H. Keefer, of Ottawa, is the sole survivor. His first wife having died, the deceased married in 1873 Annie, widow of John McKinnon, of Ottawa. She died in 1906. Besides his son, C. H. Keefer, he leaves two grandsons, T. C. Keefer, Jr., and Allan Keefer, both well known in Ottawa. The late Mr. Keefer was an Anglican in religion.

DEMORALIZED THE ENEMY.

An Unexpected Charge That Resulted in Rout and Annihilation.

There have been many curious bits of strategy in warfare, but none more effective than the coup of the Terceirans when threatened by the Spaniards.

Early in the morning of the 25th day of July, 1581, the inhabitants of the village of St. Sebastian, Isle of Terceira, one of the Azores or western group, were alarmed at the sight of a squadron, consisting of seven large Spanish war galleons, anchored off the little bay at Salga, the operations for landing a hostile force being actually in progress.

Hastily summoning some companies of militia and collecting behind a neighboring knoll a large herd of semi-wild cattle from the neighboring pastures, the islanders quietly awaited the massing of the Spaniards on the beach.

When this had been accomplished, the Terceirans advanced close up to the foe, as if to the attack, when, suddenly opening out into two long columns and leaving a wide, open space between, the numerous cattle were sent thundering down the center, goaded on by picadors on horseback. So unusual and unexpected a charge threw the Spaniards into complete disorder, and, being at once set upon by the islanders, scarcely a man escaped to the ships, several guns which had been landed falling as spoil to the conquerors.—Exchange.

The Test of Art.

Where the weakness of the artistic life really lies is that it is often not taken up out of mere communicativeness and happy excitement, as a child tells a breathless tale, but as a device for attracting the notice and earning the applause of the world, and then it is on a par with all other self regarding activities. But if it is taken up with a desire to give rather than to receive as an irrepressible sharing of delight it becomes not a solemn and dignified affair, but just one of the most beautiful and uncalculating impulses in the world.—A. MR BOWSER INQUIRES

And Mrs. Bowser Promptly Replies

By M. QUAD

A block from his house, as he went home the other evening, Mr. Bowser stopped at his family drug store. He had been feeling unusually good all day, but all at once his right ear began to twitch.

Was it the forerunner of paralysis?

Was he going deaf?

Did St. Vitus' dance begin this way?

He thanked heaven that he was so close to first aid, and he entered the store and said to the druggist as carelessly as he could:

"Doc, I have got a queer twitching of the ear."

"Yes?"

"Is it a warning of anything serious?"

"It wouldn't be in the summer, but it may be now."

"What do you mean?"

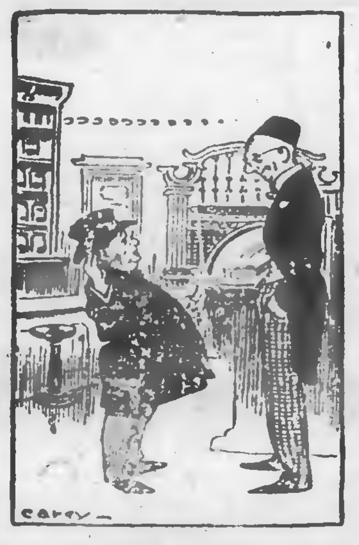
"Why, you want to eat a bull thistle to cure that twitching, and where are you going to get one now?"

Mr. Bowser backed out of the store with a very purple face, and as he stood on the corner for a minute he said to himself:

"He meant that I was a jackass, and Mrs. Bowser shall pay for this!"

Mrs. Bowser was in the hall to welcome him, but he hung up his hat and turned on her with:

"Woman, why don't you gather up all the sheets and blankets and coats and hats in the house and hang them on this hall tree and make a regular May pole of it?"



"I HAVE A QUEER TWITCHING OF THE EAR."

There was only one extra hat on the tree and that belonged to Mr. Bowser, and he had hung it there, but Mrs. Bowser was too politic to dispute him. She led the way to the dining room, and he scuffled along after her, every footstep showing that he was out of sorts and meant to raise a row. Before sitting down to the table he looked around, and his eye happened to notice a crack in the glass over one of the pictures. With a scowl he exclaimed:

"Been at work with the ax again, have you? Why didn't you smash the whole of 'em while you were about it?"

Mr. Bowser had cracked the glass himself a month before, but why say so and hear him deny it? He fell into his chair at the table with a growl, and as Mrs. Bowser had planned an extra good dinner, she hoped the worst had passed. It hadn't even begun, however.

"What have you got here—an old boot?" he demanded, as he started to carve the chicken and stopped with knife and fork held aloft.

"It's a young and tender chicken—one of the nicest I could buy," she humbly replied.

"Chicken, eh? Well, I never should have believed it!"

It was a dinner fit for any man to sit down to, but Mrs. Bowser realized that she would only make the matter worse by argument and therefore held her peace.

Mrs. Bowser had intended to ask him to take her to the theater that evening, but seeing how "off" he was, she gave it up, and, on returning to the sitting room sat down to a book, while he picked up his newspaper. Mr. Bowser didn't mean to give it up that way, however, and after glancing over the paper, he suddenly demanded:

"Mrs. Bowser, is this a house or a wigwam?"

"Why, what do you mean?"

"Just what I said. If it's a house then we need a housekeeper. If it's a wigwam, or a hole in the ground, or an Eskimo's hut, then you are running it bangup. Last night, Mrs. Bowser, last night, when I went to put on my nightshirt it was not to be found. I presume it had gone down to the cook to be used as a mop or, perhaps, you had flung it out of the window for the children to play horse with. An Eskimo or a digger Indian might put up with such things, but I can't get used to 'em. Can you spare the time to tell me where that nightshirt went to?"

"It was rolled up and placed under your pillow, and I found it there this morning," she replied.

He knew it as well as she did, as he saw it when he got up. The fact was he was in a hurry to get to bed and forgot to change, but he must hold some one to blame, and why not her?

"There is another thing that I wish to speak of, now that I happen to think of it. Most women pride themselves on the smallness and trimness of their feet. You seem to have no pride in that direction. If your feet have splattered all over the house I am not going to blame you, but if it's only the way you wear your shoes then I'll lend you a pair of mine to reduce the size."

"You see those shoes?" she queried as she pushed out her feet. "Well, they cost $2.50, and I have worn them for six months. During that time you have had three pairs of five dollar shoes, but you can't afford better for me. While other ladies won't look at shoes at less than $6, I must look for a price to fit a working girl. If you will kindly lend me a pair of your shoes I will be ever so much obliged."

That was another on Mr. Bowser, and he turned red and white and waited two or three minutes before saying:

"I was looking in the directory today to see if there was such a place in town as a sock asylum—a sort of home where men can go and get their socks darned. I have a dozen pairs, but all are out at the heels. Perhaps you know of some such asylum?"

Mrs. Bowser made no reply; but, going upstairs to his dresser, she brought down eight pairs of socks which were in perfect condition and laid them before him.

"Y-e-s," said Mr. Bowser, pretending not to see. "There is another thing I should like to mention. I gave you money only last week to buy coal, and I want to know"—

"I bought coal," she interrupted, "and it will last us three or four weeks yet."

"But what about the gas bill, Mrs. Bowser. We have the patent tips, warranted to save at least half the gas, and yet the bill for the last month was"—

"Was $2 less, Mr. Bowser. There it is, as you can see for yourself."

She had him on that, and he realized that he was getting the worst of it. He therefore rose up and said:

"Mrs. Bowser, I did intend to spend a pleasant evening at home; but, being, as you seem, bound and determined to spoil it, I will go out and pass three or four hours at the club. Just go to bed whenever you wish, and don't mind me. When a husband has no home, you know—when his wife isn't willing to make things pleasant for him—when—when"—

And he put on his overcoat and hat and went out and walked up and down and shivered and then loafed for half an hour in a drug store and then talked politics with the butcher until his toes were frostbitten, and as he finally started for home he congratulated himself that he had taught Mrs. Bowser a lesson she would not soon forget and upheld his authority as lord and master.

An Antediluvian Yarn.

Professor William Lyon Phelps of Yale at a recent banquet told a tale of the Englishman and his sense of humor. Professor Phelps and a friend, traveling in the west, had been discussing the time honored subject. Professor Phelps' friend pointed to an Englishman who sat near by. Whereupon he accosted the Englishman and told him a truly sidesplitting yarn. But the subject of their discussion never moved a muscle.

"Come," said the American, somewhat testily; "you'll laugh at that next summer."

The Englishman removed his monocle gently. "I think not," he said.

"Why not?"

"I laughed at that last summer."—Boston Traveler.

What do Your Cows Test

Supposing you know one of your cows has a test of 3.4 per cent. of fat for the first month she is milking, have you any certainty of what she will test the next two months or the last two? One cow in the herd may keep at that first test for three or four months running, another may give far richer milk the third month and the test may increase steadily; or again, with two cows both increasing in the test during lactation, one may increase far more rapidly than the other. Hence, at the end of the season one cow may have given considerably more fat than another which gave about the same weight of milk.

It will thus be seen that the question of sampling as well as weighing a cow's milk is of great importance. Neither is it sufficient to sample and test the mixed milk of the herd; individual quality is worth study. It should be plainly stated in addition that the times demand more attention being paid to testing, for the simple reason that the general average test seems to be steadily decreasing. As milk is valuable in proportion to its cream, or to its test of fat, it is important for the dairyman to know which are his high-testing cows. He may want a specially rich milk for his own table use; he may want an extra good price when selling a high-testing cow; he may want to raise heifers likely to test at least as high if not higher than their dams; so evidently it will pay him to know the test of each cow he owns. It is a simple matter to take samples on three days per month, and get a composite sample tested once a month. Ask the factory in your section to do the testing, speak to the dairy recorder about it, or write to the dairy division, Ottawa, for full information about getting your samples tested free.

Judge Barron, at Stratford, decided that John C. Hay had no right to claim Reeve J. A. Hacking's seat at Listowel, and the seat should be recontested.

The following history of a STRAIGHT LIFE POLICY with profits reserved for 20 years is interesting:

Pol. No. 27619. Amount: $1000. Premium $20.95. Age, 30

Total premiums paid from 1st February, 1890, to February, 1910 (20 years) $419.00

The premiums were then permanently reduced by the accumulated profits to $10.20 per year; this he paid for the past five years .. 51.00

Total cost in 25 years 470.00

Now his profits for the past five years reduce the premium to $2.00 per year.

Had this man taken a Non-Participating Straight Life he would have paid during the same period 475.00

and would still have to pay $19.00 per year as long as he lives, while his participating policy has not only cost him less in the aggregate, but his future premium is only $2.00 per year, subject to further reductions, as compared with $19.00 per year on the Non-Participating plan.

CLUB IN GUELPH THIS SEASON

O'Neill Will Sell the Erie Franchise for $2500

Guelph, Feb. 17.—It is practically an assured fact that Guelph will have a team in the Canadian League in 1915. Geo. H. O'Neil, owner of the Erie franchise, arrived in the city on the afternoon train yesterday and spent several hours in conference with the Guelph gentlemen who are interested in again putting Guelph on the baseball map.

Mr. O'Neil admits that he lost a lot of money at Erie last year, several reasons being given for his failure to make money, and he has enough of their game. He made a proposition to sell the Erie franchise back to Guelph for $2,500, being the same amount that he paid W. A. Mahoney for it last year.

The local fans are greatly interested in securing a place in the Canadian League again, and although the deal was not closed last night there is no doubt but it will be fixed up in a few days and the franchise transferred to Guelph.

It is understood that this will be the only chance in the Canadian League circuit this year, it being the intention to keep Toronto in the league.

Mr O'Neil stated that he had a number of first-class players to turn over to the Guelph purchasers with the franchise and it is altogether likely that Frank Gygli, who managed the Erie team the greater part of last season, will be secured to take charge of the Guelph team. He has offered such old Guelph favorites as Dorbeck, Schaefer, Behan, Wiltse, Bains and several other players to the new Guelph owners. Should this deal go through the league circuit will be complete and the work of getting out a schedule will be proceeded with at once.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

LEAD OF ONE GOAL FOR VICTORIAS

Record Crowd Witnessed First Game of O.H.A. Senior Finals

Toronto, Feb. 17.—Seven thousand three hundred and sixty-six (7,366), a new Arena record for attendance, saw Victorias and St. Michaels clash in the first senior O.H.A. final game the former getting the verdict by the close score of 2 to 1 in a game that neither team were able to bulge the nets until forty-five minutes had been played. It was the Vics who broke the deadlock, and then came back with another, giving them two goals of a lead. This was cut down by one when Rankin bulged the net on a five-foot offside.

Better and more sensational games have marked the senior finals than the one last night. Neither team was up to their usual standard, although they were hindered by the sugary condition of the ice, which made it hard for them to handle the puck. The latter seemed to drag over the surface in place of slide, and there was a constant overskating of the disc.

On the play during the three periods St. Michael's had a slight shade in the first, but the Vics more than evened it up in the second, and until the last two minutes, when St. Michael's put every man on the line, had a slight margin on the Saints. With fifty seconds to play, Heffernan was ruled off, and was followed by Harry Meeking, but St. Michael's failed to get the puck close enough to the Vics' goal for them to shoot.

A Very Clean Game.

It was an exceedingly clean game, thanks to the strictness of the officials. Several were given hard bumps on stiff checks, but only one had to retire. That was Rankin in the first two minutes of play, when he received a crack over the nose in a scrimmage. There were no deliberate attempts to rough it up.

The concensus of opinion is that St. Michael's lost their chance to open up a lead for the second game, as with the whole Vic forward line suffering from colds, it was expected that the Saints would score a victory. Then Jack Gooch, of the Vics, went into the game suffering from water on the knee. He had the latter tightly bound up, but at no stage showed any weakness. Whether the game will make it worse or not will not be known until today, but at any rate these were the facts in his case last night, and some of his friends did not expect that he would be able to finish the contest.

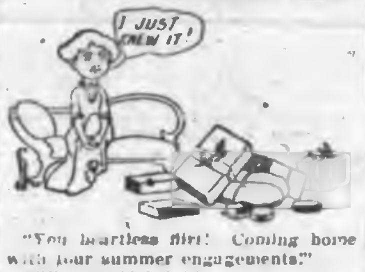
Thinking Ahead.



I JUST GOT IT!

"You heartless flirt! Coming home with four summer engagements!"

"What could I do?"

"When are you going to break the news to them?"

"Not till after Christmas."

Would She Enjoy It?

"Her husband is a conductor."

"Then she ought to be able to ride for nothing."

"I don't know how."

"Just get on the car. A married man never can see his wife when other girls are around."

Funds.

"What are you doing?"

"Raising hens."

"Getting anything out of it?"

"You bet!"

"What?"

"A big fund of experience."

THE stronger the affinity between the boy and the cigarette the less the boy's affinity for usefulness.

The kind of reputation that is hard to lose is the least desirable.

You can't tell how little a man knows by just looking at his wife.

A logical conclusion must be a frightful thing if we are to judge by the way most people avoid it.

Hard times are the result of a long and assiduous search for a soft snap.

Ways of Iceland.

There are no trades or guilds in Iceland, every man being compelled to depend upon his own skill for his supplies. The natives make their own shoes, shoe their own horses, and manufacture their saddles. A few artisans are found in the capital—for example, a bookbinder, a jeweler and others.

Meeting in Interests of Ball Club Tonight

The shareholders, subscribers and fans in general are reminded of the baseball meeting in the Bank of Montreal Chambers tonight at eight o'clock.

Baseball in this city largely depends on the interest displayed by those who want to see the franchise remain here, so a large and representative meeting is asked for.

HABITS

Our habits, the result of years
Of working in a rut,
Of reaching for the selfsame doors
To open and to shut,
Of being sad or being gay,
Devoting time to work or play
Or showing other men the way
Their morals should be cut.

We get up at the selfsame hour
The selfsame task to ply,
Have breakfast on the same old plan
As in the days gone by.
We light our meerschaum or cigar
And start posthaste to catch the car
Or with the patent sawbuck spar
Or to the office fly.

And thus it is our habits form
As strong as iron bands.
We cannot change them if we would
Or break them with our hands.
We cannot lose them, though we try.
They have us fettered hip and thigh,
Like landmarks, tall, serene and high,
Each time built habit stands.

We cannot crush them down unless
A fortune comes our way.
Then we can fold the old ones up
And for new habits pay.
Ways that were drab at once grow pink,
Cigars and things to eat and drink
Grow more expensive—in a wink
Old habits break like clay.

Business Head.

"He can qualify for the meanest man."

"What did he do?"

"Bought his wife a new hat for $2 and marked the price up to $20."

"But that only made her feel better."

"It wouldn't have been so bad if he had stopped at that. He held out $5 a week from household expenses for four weeks to make up for it."

Warned.

Miss Young—"I warn you against marrying that man, dear. I'm sure he will lead a double life." Miss Older—"Well, if I don't marry him, I'll have to lead a single one and that's worse."—Boston Transcript.

MEN OF CHARLOTTE STREET WERE GOOD ENTERTAINERS

Edibles of Their Own Making Won Favor of Many Guests

The weird, wonderful and astonishing sight witnessed last night in Charlotte Street Methodist Church of a body of apparently sane, thinking citizens serving supper to another body of sane-appearing and highly aristocratic-looking people, marked an epoch in the history of the church. More than that, it forever swept away the impression that men are helpless, inefficient and lost after they once summon the nerve to invade women's chosen field. Gone forever are the doubts and aprpehensions. Up to the time of going to press, not one casualty had been reported, and not a single physician had called up to say he was busier than usual, which all goes to prove that the masculine population of the church represented by the Men's Brotherhood are good cooks, capable waiters, and downright good fellows.

Last night's affair was one that was unusually well planned, and the unique feature about it that has got the people of that church by the ear is that the men did everything without women's aid. We make the assertion advisedly, as it was told the reporter who covered the assignment in good faith. "The men did it," was all the information he could gather, and so without hesitaiton and regardless of threatened actions for libel, we jot it down.

If the women have anything to say, it's bound to be heard as soon as they peruse this article. Another unique feature of the affair was the the discovery that none other than our friend Fire Chief W. A. Howard was an orator and speech-maker of the first water. Chief Howard was right there and he delivered the goods and made good, and what's more, he received sincere assurance that he was highly regarded and well thought of by the people of Charlotte Street Church. In fact, it might as well be stated here that the affair last night would never have been pulled off had it not been for Chief Howard and his committee of suggestions, consisting of, Mr. Wm. Galbraith and Mr Andrew Brown. The idea was conceived by Chief Howard, but was the cause of many an anxious moment for the committee who were appointed to carry it out.

It was planned to convey to Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of Charlotte Street Church, the hearty and sincere regard in which he is held by the congregation, and the scheme worked perfectly. After most of the fun was over, Chief Howard, upon whom the pleasure of conveying the expression of regard fell, did so without any effusion or without overdoing it one degree. He did it so nicely that the recipient, to whom it came as a bomb from above, was unable to reply, and his expressive "Thank you" showed his gratitude and how much he was affected.

The supper was served by a staff of willing men waiters, who glided in and out with truly feminine grace. Out in the kitchen a staff of burly men laboriously strove to wash dishes fast enough to supply the demand for clean ones. Men ladled out pots of tea and coffee. The clatter and bustle and the enthusiasm was deafening, but even in the chaos there was a well-defined system running through proceedings. There were no long waits. There was lots of eatables, and of the fragments there were several baskets gathered up, which will likely tickle the palates of some poor families or else the inmates of the Salvation Army home for the sons of rest, or the Protestant Home. After everyone was pleasantly satisfied, chairs were drawn back and an enjoyable program of songs, readings, recitations and instrumental numbers supplied, also selections on the victrola. Mr. J. Edward Fisher presided at the piano as accompanist.

The program was as follows:

Victrola selections.

Chairman's address.

Instrumental Selection — Mr. J. Fisher.

Solo—Mr. E. Naish.

Reading Mr. Kennett.

Instrumental—Mr. J. A. Robinson

Address—"Why We're Here" — Chief Howard. Responded to by Mr. Galbraith.

Instrumental—Mr. J. Fisher.

Solo—Mr. N. Staples.

Reading —Mr. R. J. Soden.

Solo—Mr. W. F. Skitch.

Quartette selection — Army Quartette.

The National Anthem.

Chairman—Rev. Mr. Wilson.

While the credit for the successful management of the supper and entermen rests with the various committees, who worked diligently and faithfully, the following names deserve special mention: Fire Chief Howard, Wm. Galbraith, Andrew Brown, D. D. C. Dawe, Wm. Holly, T. D. Wright, R. F. Downey, G. W. Johnston, M. Lyle, W. M. Wotton, John Best, Wm. Switzer, George W. Morrow, Robert Neill, Wm. Lewis, J. T. McCoy.

The finishing touch came near the last, when, to cap the generosity of the men, Chief Howard announced that the tables in use were all brand new and would be donated to the Ladies' Aid Society as well as the proceeds of the affair after all expenses were paid.

"God Save the King" brought a remarkably successful and enjoyable evening of pleasure to a close.

EVIDENCE AS TO VALUE OF ASSETS

five feet from every pole. He figured that they would be then worth half the value of good poles. All his calculations were based on a scrap valuation.

He allowed 6 cents per pound for scrap copper, which was a fair value for wire taken off the pole. For incandescent street lights he allowed 50 cents each off them. The arc lamps were old and obsolete and their only value was their scrap value. Some parts might be worth buying up.

The arc lamp hangers values were simply scrap values. Arc lamps were not now being used extensively for street lighting. He allowed six cents per pound for insulated wire as scrap, taking into consideration the cost of taking it down and cleaning it. For arc lamp wire he figured on six cents a pound, the same as in insulated wire.

In transformers he figured on them being second hand and allowed slightly over $3.00 for kilowatt capacity. They cost new about $10 a kilowatt. In arriving at value of meters on the system he fixed on them a basis of $4.00 f.o.b. to shipping point for 1000 meters, plus a larger amount for the larger meters which he figured would bring about $6000 altogether. There were 2134 meters altogether. The 45 k.w. generator was worth about $50 scrap value, which would be a good price. With regard to the generators he doubted whether one could get a sale for them. Possibly some municipality requiring second hand generators would buy them. The shafting and gearing in the Murray Street sation, if taken out of there would be difficult to market, in Mr. Jeffrey's opinion.

Under the head of miscellaneous equipment he found a switchboard inter wiring, etc., upon which he put a value of $200. There was no market for that kind of equipment now. He valued the portable instruments at their present value. Most of them could be used, although they would likely have to go second hand.

The auxiliary sub-station equipment was in fair condition being comparatively new equipment. The building could never be used for anything but a sub-station. He valued it all at $2,500.

Was Liberal in his Figures.

"I think that in arriving at my values I have been liberal in all my figures," said Mr. Jeffrey.

Mr. Jeffrey said he had made another valuation of the plant basing it on its present value. The basis upon which he figured the first valuation was on scrap, and not as a going concern.

Mr Jeffrey furnished the board with information concerning the pole section of a system. The average length of useful life for a pole was twenty years. Possibly it would last four years longer, but such a course was dangerous inasmuch as a strong windstorm would blow it down, causing interruption to the service and inconvenience to the consumer and the company. He obtained accurate information as to the time when the poles in the system were put in and from observation of the soil and the quality of the wood, he estimated that the average age of the poles in Peterborough was twenty. Mr. Jeffrey said he went over the whole system in Peterborough, counting every pole and every cross in it.

The following is a detailed statement of scrap value of the property expropriated. (Based on removal and sale piece meal).

"WAR SESSION" IN PROGRESS

Dr. Jamieson is Installed as Speaker

TORONTO, Feb. 17.—The Ontario Legislature is now under way. With an unusually large attendance gathered in the chamber and galleries and accompanied by formal ceremonies, Lieutenant-Governor Hendrie, from the throne, declared the opening of legislative business for 1915. Speaker David Jamieson was duly installed in his place on the nomination of Premier Hearst and the approval of Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C. Two formal bills were introduced to start the machinery for the year, and after on hour's sitting the House adjourned for the day.

There was a blaze of splendor about the opening of the fourteenth Legislature that will be long remembered. From the mounted escort of Royal Canadian Dragoons, the guard of honor from the 19th Battalion of the second overseas contingent and the officers of the Headquarters Staff in service khaki, there was everything to impress the observer that it was to be a "war session."

After a reference to the death of Sir James Whitney, the speech from the throne goes on to discuss the war and Canada's response to the call for aid.

"While the ultimate triumph of Great Britain and its allies is certain," says the speech, "we cannot fail to realize and deplore the enormous cost which is being paid to achieve that end. Already the effects of the war have proved to be very far-reaching. In addition to the financial stringency and the disturbance of industry, we have been confronted with unemployment in some industrial centres, which has given grave concern to our people.

"These conditions, as well as bur obligations to the Mother Country, have received the serious attention of my Ministers. At the outset of the war a substantial contribution in food was made to Great Britain on your behalf, and also a contribution in cash and food for the relief of the brave Belgian people. To relieve the sudden financial strain upon our people, a public assurance was given that an act giving further power to the courts with respect to money secured by mortgages and other similar matters in cases of special hardship arising out of the war. Assurances were also given municipal bodies that this House would give sanction and authority for the expenditure of money by such bodies for patriotic purposes and to relieve unemployment."

Every effort has been made, the speech continues, to provide public work which will afford employment for as many men as possible, and the Government has exerted itself to the utmost to stimulate the production of food.

"Unexpected demands upon the treasury, arising out of the war situation, accompanied as they have been by a shrinkage of revenue owing to the same cause, have resulted in a financial deficit during the past year. You will be asked to consider an emergency measure in this connection."

Reference is also made to the organization of the workmen's compensation board, the highways development, the experimental farms in the north, and the satisfactory year of the Hydro Electric Commission.

"Among the measures which will be submitted to you for your consideration," says the speech, "will be bills to supplement the revenues of the crown, to give further power to courts with respect to money secured by mortgage and other similar matters, to amend the liquor license law, respecting boiler inspection, to authorize the construction of the Toronto and Hamilton trunk road, and for other purposes."

Querying Mr. Edison.

"I wonder if Edison would answer a personal letter on a scientific subject?"

"He might on some matter of interest to the world. What's on your mind?"

"I would like to know if it does any good to jiggle the telephone hook up and down when the girl is slow in getting your number?"—Puck

GERMANY'S BIG GUNS

They Have Been the Big Surprise of the Present War.

Almost every important war has brought forward some new weapon of offense that has proved a deciding factor. Reports from both German and Belgium sources indicate that the surprise of the present war has been the tremendous siege guns which the Germans have put into the field.

These guns are a recent product of the Krupps and have a caliber of 42 centimeters (about 16 inches). They are reported to have an effective range of six miles. It was probably because of these tremendous weapons that the supposedly impregnable forts at Liege, Namur and Maubeuge fell so unexpectedly.

Located beyond the range of the smaller guns of the defenders, these new Krupps cast shells that pierced ten feet of solid concrete and exploded with a violence that destroyed whole forts. Guns of this size have heretofore been used only on great battleships and for coast defense.

The Germans have mounted them on carriages that are described as filling a street from curb to curb when they are transported through cities.—American Boy.

Locating Vacant Seats.

Box office diagrams have been devised to show at any moment just what seats in the theater are vacant, so that the ticket seller of a continuous performance moving picture or vaudeville theater can indicate to patrons where they will find vacant seats. The seating plan in the box office is illuminated from beneath by tiny lights, one for each seat in the house. When a seat is turned down the light for that seat, under the plan, goes out, and when a seat is turned up the light comes on again. A more elaborate arrangement would make it unnecessary in working a diagram of this kind to depend on the turning of the seat, for the weight of a person in it would control the switch. Of course wires run from each seat to the box office.

False Economy.

They tell a story about a country lad who went to a big city and tried for a job on the police force. He passed the physical tests hands down, but the written examinations gave him a little trouble. One of the questions was: "A man buys an article for $12.25 and sells it for $9.75. Does he gain or lose on the transaction?" After pondering over the question our rural friend finally answered in this way: "He gains on the cents, but loses on the dollars."

Didn't Want to Be Singular.

It was in the drawing room after dinner that they discussed an absent maiden friend's bad points with the usual grim and scathing glee. Having thoroughly dissected her personal appearance, they next paid attention to her mental shortcomings.

"She is a very singular girl," spake the one.

"Yes, indeed," responded her companion; "but, then, that is not her fault, for I never saw a girl so anxious to be plural."

The One Who Was Afraid.

"Didn't marry her, eh? I suppose you were afraid you could not support her in the style to which she had become accustomed?"

"Oh, no, I was not at all afraid of that."

"Then why didn't"—

"It was she that was afraid I could not."

CROSS EXAMINATION OF R. T. JEFFERY CONTINUES

Witness is Asked to State Amount of His Salary

Upon the opening of arbitration proceedings this morning, explanation was made by R. T. Jeffrey, of what he meant yesterday when he said he would not devulge how certain information obtained locally in regard to the plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, was obtained.

It appears that the party to whom he had reference was W. H. Muuro, manager of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, who at the time the inventory was taken went over it with him and enabled him to check off quantities of certain fixtures with the figures of the company. Mr. Jeffrey had understood from Mr. Munro that it was a personal favor, and was unaware that Mr. Muuro has previously obtained authority from the president and vice-president of his company. Mr. Jeffrey therefore based his refusal to divulge the source of his information through a sense of loyalty to Mr. Munro, but which as turned out it was unnecessary for him to do.

Mr. Tilly continued his examination of Mr. Jeffrey this morning. His queries were very direct particularly his demand that Mr. Jeffrey state the amount of his salary. The latter flatly refused informing Mr. Tilley that such was not material to the arbitration. His refusal somewhat nettled Mr. Tilley who asked the arbitrators to support his demand. Upon Mr. Jeffrey stating that the information could be obtained off the books of the commission Mr. Tilley did not insist upon an answer. Mr. Tilley went on to question him about the price of copper wire when he valued the copper wire at the time of making his valuation.

Q.—What is the uniform rate of depreciation on wire used by your company?

A.—I don't know.

Going back to the incandescent street lighting system at the request of the company's solicitor, Mr. Jeffrey said it constituted a very small saving on capital account to thus operate. If the power thus consumed could be reserved it could be sold.

Mr. Tilley asked witness to describe his system of buying. Mr. Jeffrey said he got his prices from the Northern Electric Company. They were not hydro prices, but special prices. He had not taken hydro prices for poles, but he had for crossarms. None of the prices he had put in were the prices the hydro got on contracts. He took the hydro prices for meters because they were the same as could be purchased in smaller quantities.

As yet only the most venturesome would think of forecasting the probable outcome of the arbitration proceedings which are going on daily. A bulky inventory, consisting of nearly two hundred typewritten pages, of the stock and fixtures and plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, had been gone over thoroughly up to last ight. The most interesting evidence that has so far been given occurred late yesterday afternoon when R. T. Jeffrey who has been a valuable witness throughout, was subjected by W. N. Tilley to a rather severe examination . Certain information relative to the poles and other matters of the Peterborough Light and Power system was taken by Mr. Jeffrey when he first made a valuation of the plant. These facts were put down in a little book, which book is now the property of the Hydro-Electric Commission, and which Mr. Tilley felt should be produced. Whether the Commission would consent to supplying this book was the point of argument, as it was stated by Mr. Jeffrey that it was private information and he could not divulge it without their consent. On his promise to wire the Commission and find out if they would agree to produce it, the matter was left in abeyance.

Afternoon Session.

In making his valuation on the generator and equipment in the Murray street sub-station, Mr. Jeffrey allowed 95 per cent. for depreciation, and the only value he placed upon it was its usefulness until a new system could be installed, said period of usefulness being limited to one year.

Mr. Jeffrey was questioned about the overhead expenses of the Hydro-Electric systems in other cities where he had supervised their installation. St. Catharines expenses amounted to approximately $87,000, Brantford $216,000.

Revenue in Two Months.

Mr. Jeffrey had never heard of the construction of an electric plant being let by contract.

To construct a plant in this city, Mr. Jeffrey said he estimated it would take from six to eight months. With regard to the time it would take before the plant would start to earn

WOULD COME FROM EL PASO TO JOIN MOUNTED RIFLES

Wealthy Ranch Owner Wants to Enlist With Canadians

Ottawa, Feb. 18.—A wealthy Texas ranch owner has written the 8th C.M.R., offering to come all the way from the neighborhood of El Paso if he is given assurance that he will be accepted as a trooper in the regiment.

The Texan states that he has had considerable war experience, having spent considerable time in Mexico, where he took part in a few of the many recent revolutionary engagements. He is anxious to see service in Europe and thought the easiest way would be to enlist with a Canadian regiment. He prefers the mounted to the infantry, being a skilful horseman.

It is likely that the man, whose name is Fernando Hermandos, will be informed that there is no room for him in the ranks of Lt.-Col. Munro's regiment. Recruiting for the mounted rifles closed some time ago, the full complement having been recruited.

A meeting of the officers of the regiment was held yesterday morning, when several matters of importance were up for discussion. The officers will move into their quarters tonight, these having been fully completed. No word has been received as to when the Peterborough and Toronto squadrons will arrive. A group photograph of the Peterborough squadron, received at barracks today, shows this unit to be composed of a fine lot of men.

GOOD NEWS FOR FAIR DIRECTORS

The Government Grant to Associations May not be Cut

Toronto, Feb. 18.—While no official announcement has been made, it is understood that the Ontario Government may yet reconsider its announced intention of cutting in half the Government grant to the Fall fairs' associations of the province.

The deputation that waited upon Hon. James Duff some time ago received not a great deal of encouragement owing to the scarcity of funds in the Provincial Treasury, but it is stated that since then the Government has been endeavoring to find a way of meeting the request of the farmers for the full grant or most of it. In this they will be supported by the rural members, a large number of whom will put up a strong fight for the payment of the full grant.

WAS ASSESSED $11.75

Frank Faux was disorderly in the King George Hotel Tuesday evening and in demonstrating the degree of his anger he damaged a chair. Dennis Corkery, proprietor of the King George, swore out an information against him, and P. C. Deannard met Faux on the street yesterday and towed him to the police station.

This morning Magistrate Dumble figured that the privilege of making such a demonstration was worth $11.75. Two dollars of the amount was a fine, three dollars and seventy-five cents costs, and six dollars compensation to Corkery for damage to the chair.

ADVANCES AT MANY POINTS

Bomb Thrower and Several Hundred Bombs Among Captures by Allies

ALL GAINS HAVE BEEN RETAINED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 18. — The official statement says: "A successful surprise movement which made us master of two lines of German trenches to the north of Arras, northwest of Rolincourt, inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. We captured a bomb thrower and several hundred bombs.

"In the valley of the Aisne and in the sector of Rheims there have been artillery engagements in which our batteries have had distinct advantage.

"In Champagne, in the region of Perthes, all territory conquered by us yesterday and the day before has been retained.

"Among numerous prisoners made by us on February 16 and 17, are officers and men of the Sixth and Eighth corps of the active army and of the Eighth, Tenth and Twelfth corps of the reserve army.

"In the Argonne, we have also maintained advances won in the forest of La Grurie, to the south of Fontaine-aux-Charmes. Furthermore, we have made some progress in the vicinity of Bourouilles, at Hill No. 263. Our success between the Argonne and the Meuse, reported in official communication of last night, have made us masters of a forest located to the south of the forest of Cheppy.

"We have furthermore made an advance of about four hundred yards to the north of Malancourt, and we have made almost as much at a point to the sout ohf the Forest-de-Forges. z

"All these gains have ben retained by us.

"From the Meuse to the Vosges there is nothing to report."

SUCCESSES FOR RUSSIANS.

LONDON, Feb. 18. A Russian official report says the Russians repelled an attack by the enemy in Galicia, capturing fourteen hundred men with ten officers. On another front several vigorous attacks by the Germans were repulsed with heavy losses, almost an entire battalion being bayonetted and some prisoners taken.

A REPORT ON PAVEMENTS

Board of Works Also Hear Representatives of Two Companies

The Board of Works last night heard representatives of the Roemac and Tarvia companies narrate the merits of their respective goods and also received a report on pavements, by the city engineer.

These two companies do not contract to do the work. It can be done by day labor. All they ask is that the first work be supervised by their men so as to protect themselves and ensure satisfactory results.

Chairman Ald. Green promised that their proposals would receive the consideration of the board.

City Engineer's Report.

The problem of securing a low priced, durable pavement for streets with light traffic is one which city officials and engineers all over the country are trying to solve. The types which I will describe comprise the latest efforts toward the solution of the problem. They are as follows:—

Concrete Pavement.

This is a class of pavement that has been experimented with for many years but has only been used extensively for the last five or six years. Its principal advantages are low price and the need of a very simple plant to lay it, so that it can easily be laid by day labor. Its disadvantages, in my opinion, are as follows:—

1. Doubt as to its length of life. In some cases concrete pavements have worn well under quite heavy traffic; in others, they have gone to pieces under light traffic in two or three years.
2. They are noisy.
3. They are hard on horses on account of their being unyielding.
4. They are dusty.
5. They reflect a large amount of heat.

The prices of concrete pavements vary greatly, running from 95c. to $1.90 per square yard, depending on prices of material and labor and the quality of the pavement and the care used in constructing it.

Concrete pavements are built in either one or two courses. In the one course pavement the concrete is of the same proportions and richness throughout. In the two course pavement the lower four or five inches are of a leaner mixture than the top two or three inches. In other words the construction is like that of a sidewalk.

We use gravel just as it comes from the pit for concrete, which is all right for rough work such as the base of a pavement, but would not do for a wearing surface. I would not, in any case, advise the use of gravel for a wearing surface on a street with any traffic. In my opinion the best concrete pavement we could lay would be one with a gravel concrete base and a wearing surface composed of a rich, dense mixture of trap rock, granite or lime stone with sand and Portland cement. This if laid on a fairly level street should be float finished and on grades should be marked off into squares.

$10,000 STOLEN FROM BANK CAGE

Thieves Made Escape Before Money Was Missed

New York, Feb. 18.—Reviving the old wire hook trick, two bank sneak thieves, during noon hour, scooped up a $10,000 package of bills from under the eyes of the paying teller of the Dime Savings Bank, DeKalb Avenue and Fleet Street, Brooklyn, and made their escape before the money was missed.

According to a clerk in the bank, three men entered shortly after noon, and while one of the trio engaged the teller in conversation, one of the others manipulated the hook.

Officials of the bank, the second largest in Brooklyn, refused absolutely to discuss the matter. However, operatives of the Burns Detective Agency have been put on the case, and it was admitted at the office that the bank was a client. They would not discuss the nature of the business being done.

The cage from which the money was stolen is an up-to-date steel structure, equipped with every appliance for forestalling the kind of theft that occurred.

It is thought by the detectives the men are members of a bank sneak thief gang who took a chance in New York.

NO FINAL DECISION AS TO DISPOSAL PLANT SITE BUT SEWER IS APPROVED

City Has Certificate From Board of Health for Work to Date

ALD. GREEN EXPLAINS

Some explanation of the city's position in regard to the outfall sewer and the sewage disposal plant was made to the Board of Works, last night by the Chairman, Ald. Green. It will be remembered that he interviewed the Board of Health. Last night he read a communication from that body which confirmed the serving of a mandatory order to the city, September 4, 1914, advising the city to start the sewer work. The sewerage was to be collected at the corner of Lock and King George Street, to which the street railway wharf is in close proximity.

"This was the most convenient point for collection and it would be cheaper to construct a force main at this point than to construct a gravity sewer to any other part, such as the foot of Park Street for the purpose of shortening the force main."

Having explained that the work was undertaken at the order of the Board of Health Ald. Green said: "We have not made a formal application for the site of the filtration plant. The Board passed and issued a certificate for every foot of work on this side of the river. Where the site of the disposal plant will be located, they have not decided. We have not made final application regarding the site because our plans are not completed. I am assured that as soon as the plans are ready, the site will be settled. As to where it will be that is not decided and I don't think the Board of Health has decided where it will be.

The City Engineer said it would be two weeks at least before the plans were completed.

It would apear that previous statements regarding the site of disposal plant almost immediately across the river, have been supposition. It would also appear that as the Board of Health ordered the work and issued a certificate, approving all work completed to date, which finds the collecting point at the corner of King George Street and Lock Street, the Board will not decide on a site in the wilds of the north country nor at Rice Lake. At the same time it must be borne in mind that the pumping station will not be a toy. The sewerage can be pumped across the river or down the river to a distance that would be decided by the amount of pumping power.

Entertained by Mounted Rifles

The men and officers of the 8th Mounted Rifles did themselves proud, last night, when they provided an excellent program of entertainment at the armouries. There were songs, instrumentals, speeches, and a tasty spread, catered by Coleman Bros. Mr. Chas. Coleman also found time to contribute a couple of comic songs.

Col. Miller made an excellent chairman and also took part in the program. Several of the officers, including Capt. Spencer and Lieut. Eastwood made speeches.

CONVENTION OF SUNDAY SCHOOLS

The first co-operative Sunday school convention ever held in this city opened this afternoon in the Sunday school of the Murray Street Baptist church. R. J. Kidd presided. At 3 o'clock F. L. Farewell of Toronto, field secretary of the Methodist Sunday School Board, spoke on "The Place of the Sunday School in Modern Education." Immediately after, E. W. Hapeny, of oTronto, general secretary of the Ontario Sunday School Association, spoke on "The Efficient Sunday School."

The speakers at this evening's session will be the Rev. P. K. Dayfoot, of Toronto, Baptist Sunday School Board, and Rev. C. A. Meyers, assistant secretary of the Presbyterian S. S. Board, also of Toronto. The evening meeting will be held in Charlotte street church.

A LETTER FROM HEBER ROGERS

Mr. Heber Rogers, son of R. B. Rogers, writing to his father from Salisbury Plain says that before his next letter was written he expected to be in France.

An extract reads as follows:—

Are you still in Peterborough or have you moved to Ottawa? It will be pretty hard training in the cold weather in Canada. Well we don't expect to be on these plains very many days more. Today was a big day here. The King and Lord Kitchener were here to review us before we go across the channel. We all marched over to Lark Hill, to the big plains over there. The whole division lined up in two lines. The Royal party came down one and up the other walking. Then there was a march past in double fours, all the infantry, cavalry, artillery, etc. After that we marched to the railroad and lined the track four deep. The whole division was on one side of the track and stretched for about a mile and a half or two miles. As the Royal train came along the cheers rose and followed it down the line. Our bunch happened to get shot with a moving picture machine. We are all ready to move now, just waiting orders! Our kit bags have gone to Salisbury, the base for our division. All our equipment is complete now, and we have also been issued with the Web equipment.

I suppose you know that I have joined the machine gun section. Gordon Graham is also in it. It is not a bad job and I like it ne. There will be plenty of excitement with them, as they are first into action and last out. If our battalion get a motor cycle I might take it if I can get it and act as a despatch carrier. Cousin Hermine was telling me today that they were promised a motor-cycle.

HEBER.

SEWER ASKED FOR BETHUNE ST. NORTH

The residents of Bethune treet, north of Smith street, applied for a sewer, but the board of works last night decided to postpone a decision till next meeting. The sewer could be constructed on the street and across Mr. Hickey's property to a manhole at the corner of Stewart and Reid streets, or it could be continued on Bethune street to Aberdeen avenue, west on the avenue to the Chemong road and back to the junction of Reid and Stewart streets. In the latter event, in the absence of revenue, the city would have to bear the whole cost.

WASTING OUR SUBSTANCE.

SOME TIME AGO a Toronto newspaper published an editorial giving an itemized account of the manner in which a young man, unmarried, spent his income for a year. The article was written about the time unemployment in Toronto first began to receive attention. The young man in question received sixteen dollars a week, and he kept an account of every expenditure for a year. He managed to spend all he earned. In the list there was really not an item that could be classed as money wasted or squandered. He was apparently a temperate, good living man. He spent about forty dollars for theatres, one hundred for clothes, and so on through the list.

What is a matter of concern is that there was no item of money saved. This case shows conclusively that Canadians, as a rule, have learned how to spend, but not how to save. They do not spend wickedly, but they do spend profusely. When a man spends all he earns, he is, as in this case, spending extravagantly. This young man thought he was not receiving enough money to save any for the rainy day. This false idea of what an adequate income should be seems to be that a man should receive more than he can spend, and then save the excess. True economy is in spending less than one receives—that is, living within one's income. A person that can't save any money on ten dollars a week, can't save on sixteen nor on twenty or thirty. The same cause that prevents saving on smaller incomes prevents it on larger ones. That is, that the wage-earner is not earning enough TO THINK of saving. Beginning at the foot of the ladder and giving no attention to saving money, there is no HABIT of saving formed, so that, when the income is increased, the earner has lost the capacity to save. The fault begins in the homes of a great many Canadians, in which the children are not taught habits of economy or of saving.

To return to the case in question, there were many items that this man could have done without, or at least cut down one-half. That involved a certain amount of sacrifice, but at the end of a year he would have found himself with a surplus. Some have said to us: What's money for but to spend? That is largely true. Money is not saved to keep hoarded or locked up forever, but to spend later in life, when adversity or age lessens earning capacity or income. Any person who is earning a yearly income that is larger than mere living expenses, and spends all of it, is spending too much.

Look at the other side for a moment. A wage of $8.00 a week means a little over $400.00 a year. Six per cent. is a fair return for money invested, and at that rate to yield an income of $400.00 an investment of $6,666 is required. For an income of $16.00 a week, an investment of $13,000 is required at that rate. Looking at these figures, one can get an idea of the value of money and what it means to receive even a small income. To the majority earning $8.00 a week, the saving of a sum sufficiently large to produce that income seems an almost impossible task. Yet to appreciate the value of money, of the money necessary to produce their own income, some such basis should be adopted.

When John Burns, the English Labour man, who was until the outbreak of the war a member of the Asquith Government, visited Canada a few years ago, he said we had no poverty in this country. He walked down city streets and said all the people were well dressed and well fed, were able to go to theatres, and so on. That was largely true, because most people were spending all they earned. Silk dresses, theatres, holiday trips, expensive suits, and so on, are desirable things, but sometimes cost too much.

One cause for this high living is the conspicuous expenditure of the rich. Riding in automobiles, living in expensive houses, theatre parties, European trips, naturally create in the poorer people a desire to do likewise in some degree. It is a matter of imitation—to have, as Israel said long ago, a king like other nations. To yield to this impulse has been the rule, and shows a lack of self-restraint. If people want to be happy they must show more character and learn to live within their income, save part of their income, make a few sacrifices, and not want the things of a millionaire when they have only sixteen a week instead of the million. The war may help Canadians to learn habits of economy.

GOOD PROGRESS FOR HYDRO-ELECTRIC.

THE SPEECH of the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Hon. J. S. Hendrie, contained the following reference to the Hydro-Electric Commission that should be of interest to the people of Peterborough:

> "Good progress was made last year in the work of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. There are now 82 municipalities receiving power, instead of 34 in 1913, and their maximum demands amount to 95,000 H.P., as compared to 42,000 H.P. a year ago. The Commission is at present operating five distinct transmission systems, and has a sixth under construction. The duplication of the tranmission lines and extensions in the western part of Ontario necessitated by the large increase in business, were completed during the last fiscal year. The extension of the operations of the Commission to the rural districts last year enabled it to reach a large number of consumers among the farmers of Ontario. Estimates and reports for radial railway systems were furnished to a number of municipalities and the necessary agreements for inaugurating the first system, having been approved by the ratepayers, have been executed by the municipalities interested."

THE ARBITRATION PROCEEDINGS.

A VERY IMPORTANT arbitration trial is proceeding in the Court House in this city. It is very important to the citizens of Peterborough, because it will decide what the taxpayers of this city will pay for the old plant or equipment that supplies them with electric light and power. It is important, also, to other municipalities because there will likely be other places where Hydro-Electric energy will not be obtained by the people without arbitration proceedings, and the case of Peterborough will likely be cited as a precedent. Here there is a remarkable array of prominent legal and scientific men, and the proceedings are bringing to light a large number of interesting details. Those citizens who can afford the time to hear the proceedings will not waste their time in doing so.

THE ITALIAN ENIGMA.

THE ATTITUDE of Italy is the subject of a noteworthy article in the Frankfurter Zeitung. It is recognized that the country is united, but its face is a riddle, and it is extremely difficult to raise the mask and see what is under it. One thing, however, is certain. Italian statesmen will seek to surmount the difficulties into which the outbreak of war has plunged their country and which the declaration of neutrality rather emphasized than solved. Neutrality such as that of the Scandinavian countries or of Spain is impossible for Italy; unless it turns back from the road to greatness on which it is already travelling.

The Frankfurter is uncertain whether neutrality will bear fruit in Italy or whether action will be necessary. Parliament meets on February 18th, a day which also marks the final completion of Italy's military and naval preparations. Another question propounded is: Will Italy be ready for every eventuality? Interests wrestle with wishes, wishes with scruples, and no one knows which will gain the upper hand. Foreign countries will only be able to influence a decision by the victories of their armies.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE HON. W. H. HEARST, Premier of Ontario, who has just celebrated his fifty-first birthday, was born in Bruce County in 1863, educated at the public schools, Collingwood Collegiate Institute, the University of Toronto and Osgoode Hall, graduating from the latter in 1888. He commenced the practice of law at Sault Ste. Marie, and was first elected to the Ontario Legislature for that constituency in 1908, was appointed Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines in 1911, and a few months ago was chosen Premier in succession to the late Sir James Whitney. He is regarded as a safe, conservative legislator. Premier Hearst is a prominent figure in the Methodist Church.

THE OTTAWA JOURNAL, in its "parliamentary record" of members, pays our representative the following compliment: "Mr. John H. Burnham, member for West Peterborough, is back at his old seat in the colony, from which same seat he delivers many a useful 'jab' for his party."

BY THE RETURN submitted by the Minister of Customs, it appears that it costs 2.71 per cent., or less than 3 per cent., to collect the customs revenue of Canada. It is customary to say that indirect taxation is expensive. But direct taxation would cost more to collect than the above.

A Breakfast-Time Bother.

(Toronto Telegram.)

Some doubt has been expressed whether the extra cent postage on letters will not stop the practice of sending advertising circulars through the mail. Mr. White's war tax amounts to $10 per thousand circulars, and it is argued that the task of distributing this matter may fall into private hands. Thus one source of post office revenue would be destroyed. Those who so figure do not understand the state of mind of advertisers, who think the best way to ingratiate themselves with possible customers is to bother them at breakfast time. They have an inexplicable notion that the ideal time to tell a man where to get his trousers pressed or his shoes half-soled is when he is engrossed with his personal letters or his business correspondence. Only the postman can secure the admission of the advertising dodger to the family breakfast table. If the missive does not bear a stamp it is forthwith recognized as a circular and chucked unopened into the waste-paper basket. But if it looks like a real letter, the citizen has to open it just before consigning it to that fate. As long as some otherwise intelligent people presume that they can secure the good-will of their fellow-citizen by making nuisances of themselves, they will clutter the morning mail with intrusive circulars. Dodgers pushed in letter-boxes at so much a thousand or thrown on doorsteps may make private houses and public streets untidy. Only the circular that comes disguised as a letter can rob the citizen of enough time to denounce it, tear it up, and throw it away. As long as advertisers can be cajoled into seeing business-getting possibilities in that procedure they will persist in their folly, even if they have to contribute to the state an extra cent for each victim of their untimely importunity.

When People Are Awake.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

Some of the people of England believe they are fighting two enemies, one without and one within. They say they are quite content to bear whatever burdens may be cast upon them in the war against the enemy without; but privation forced upon them by the few who are in a position to take advantage of their need they refuse to endure without at least a protest.

Late Admiral Mahan's Advice.

(London Chronicle.)

Almost the last public utterance of Admiral Mahan, before Belgian neutrality had been violated, was emphatic counsel to Great Britain to throw her preponderating fleet against Germany for the maintenance of British world power against what he regarded as a pre-determined war of calculated aggression by its most dangerous enemy.

WHY NOT A LADIES' RIFLE CLUB?

Editor Review,

Sir,—Now that we have a shooting gallery in our city why not organize a ladies' rifle club? Many towns throughout Ontario have these clubs and they are of great benefit to the fair sex. The ability to shoot straight gives a lot of confidence to a woman. The writer's own wife would not look sideways at a gun until presented with a rifle. Now, with her .22 rifle she can hit a 1-inch bull's eye at 25 yards. The only range has been the country, but now that there is, what promises to be, a first-class range centrally located, the ladies should get together and shoot. Here's hoping to see a club organized soon.

Yours,
SHOOTER.

THE PARTING OF THE WAYS.

On earth-bound shore I met a throng—
Each bore the Maker's guise—
I caught the merry word and song,
But there were tearful eyes.

Yet friend with friend went hand in hand,
Heedless of gloaming days:
Nor thought nor dream that chasm spann'd—
The parting of the ways.

Oh joy, be glad nor cease to sing,
For verging sunset rays,
As time and change conspire to bring
The parting of the ways!

The forms belov'd, the life entwined
So closely with our own
Have pass'd away, but still enshrin'd
The deeds, the words, the tone.

The life now hid with Christ in God
Leaves precious ling'ring rays,
As memoirs creep, and sentries keep
The parting of the ways.

Cease loving lovely world too well!
Rear not thy castle bars
Where brass and mere alternate swell;
But build beyond the stars!

So shall life's bark outride the strand
Awaiting trial days,
To anchor in the Harbor Land

Young Officers in Favor.

PARIS, Feb. 18.—Gen. Joffre, the French commander-in-chief, continues to carry out his settled policy of weeding out the higher ranks of the army in favor of younger and more active men. TURKISH MUTINY

Officers Who Tried to Stop War Are Court-martialled

PETROGRAD, Feb. 18.—A special correspondent of The Bourse Gazette reports from Tiflis that after Enver Pasha left Erserum for Constantinople following the defeat of the Turkish armies, a military conspiracy was discovered and a number of officers were arrested.

Meetings had been held secretly with the object of stopping the war. Fifteen officers were handed over to a court-martial.

In the recent fighting in the Trans-Chorok region the Turks used exclusively either nondescript slugs of lead or German dumdum bullets.

In their retreat before the Russian troops in that region the Turks are carrying off all the women and children.

KAISER IS DEPRESSED.

Six Months of War Have Had a Terrible Effect.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—A correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, who has recently had exceptional opportunity for close personal observation of the Kaiser, writes:

"His physical appearance shocked and almost frightened me. He has aged terribly. His hair is grey and he has an air of fixed depression. He speaks little, and his articulation is abnormally slow.

"I was convinced that he at last recognizes what the future has in store for him and his people and that he sees little brightness in the prospect.

"The officers of the general staff share his downcast mien and are apparently filled with similar misgivings."

Halvor Gunderson's Dog

Or the Story of a Troubled Conscience

By JOHN C. WADE

Halvor Gunderson had first noticed the dog behind his wagon when he stopped to rest his team on the Steven hill.

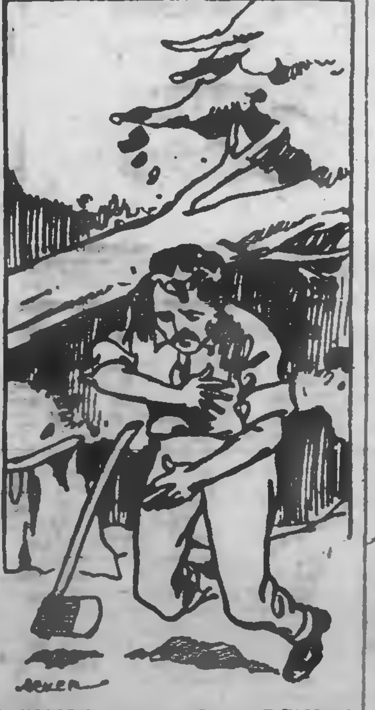
On stock days farmers from twelve miles back in the hills brought hogs and calves to town, and strange dogs were plentiful along the main road.

When well out of the ridge he again glanced back to see that he was losing none of his purchases out of his hog rack and saw the dog still following. He now looked at it more carefully.

It was a large shepherd dog with a full chest, a long, slim body well above the ground and coarse tawny hair that was nearly black on the neck and back.

When he turned into the short byroad leading to his house he whistled to the dog, but the latter had already turned with the wagon and was evidently intending to follow it wherever it went.

When he went to supper he took the dog with him. Its previous owner must have allowed it the freedom of the house, for it displayed not the slightest curiosity, but went immediately back to the stove and lay down.



TUMBLED DIRECTLY UNDER THE FALLING TREE.

The next morning when Gunderson took the cows to the pasture the dog fulfilled all his expectations. He showed perhaps a trifle too much eagerness and ferocity in driving the cows.

The dog was always with him from morning until night—among the corn rows, in the hayfield, at milking time. No matter where he went or what he was doing, it was always near by and always seemed to be looking at him.

There was a haunting familiarity about the dog's gaze, but Halvor could not place it.

Halvor watched the dog very carefully all summer, never allowing him off the farm if possible. One October morning, however, he escaped his vigilance and followed him halfway to the cheese factory before Halvor noticed him.

He was too far on the road to be sent back, so was allowed to continue. At one of the houses on the highway to the factory was kept a dog, a hound, that Halvor disliked very much. This dog would rush out furiously at all teams, baying noisily, but always keeping out of reach of the whip. Today, as usual, he came running across the fields, but when he saw the shepherd dog he turned toward him with unabated speed, his head low and tongue lolling.

The shepherd evaded the rush and slashed him in the shoulder as he passed. The hound turned to rush again, but the shepherd met him before he could even start, tearing him about the head and neck with quick, wolflike snaps.

The aggressor tried to fight back, but could not get an opening, and in a few seconds the shepherd had carried him off his feet and was trying for his throat. The hound was a powerful brute and was up again in an instant, but he had apparently abandoned all thought of fighting, for he started back across the field toward the house, even faster than he had come.

The shepherd followed him a short distance and then returned to the wagon. Halvor was mightily pleased with the discomfiture of the hound and the splendid fighting qualities displayed by his dog. His sheep would surely be safe with such a guardian.

Gunderson had been worrying considerably about them lately, for the sheep raising farmers in the hills north of his place had been having their flocks depleted the entire fall by a sheep killing dog.

Late in October Mrs. Gunderson received a letter from the small fishing village of Halleberg, which is on a fiord in northern Norway. The writer, Mrs. Gunderson's sister, among other things, said that Johann Jorgenson had left the previous spring for America, and she had heard that he had rented a farm near Seaton, Wis.

Halvor thought of the last time that he and Johann had spoken to each other on the beach at Halleberg, twelve years ago, when Johann said that he would settle his account with him if it took a lifetime. Seaton was but twenty-five miles north of Gunderson's place, and in this country of easy communication he would soon learn of him.

As the days went by Halvor brooded more and more over this disconcerting news. He watched all passing teams with feverish anxiety. Naturally of a morbid temperament, he gradually grew more sullen and morose. His horses and cattle felt the effect of this change and shunned him even more than before.

One cold November morning several of the cows had got out of the barn lot and wandered across the creek. The bridge was but a few hundred yards away, but Halvor ordered the dog across the stream after them.

The shepherd went to the edge of the icy water, but refused to go farther. He ordered him in again and again and finally, furious at his refusal, picked up a pitchfork handle and hit the dog between the eyes, knocking him down.

The animal was on his feet in an instant and with a snarl of rage sprang furiously at his master's throat. Halvor again swung the handle, this time blindly; but, fortunately for him, he again hit the dog in the forehead and with such force as to stun him for several seconds.

The shepherd finally got up, shook himself and walked slowly away. Halvor leaned against a fencepost, feeling a trifle weak, not so much from fear of the dog as from the look in his eyes when he sprang at him.

Twelve years before, on the beach at Halleberg, he had faced such a look from Johann Jorgenson, who fiercely struggled to free himself from the men who held him that he might again attack Halvor, whom he accused of refusing, though in a boat near by, to heed the cries of himself, his father and brother when they had been run down in their heavily loaded fishing boat the night before in a storm by a tourist steamer coming up the fiord.

One night as Halvor was coming down the valley road from a small town about six miles north of his farm he saw in the moonlight against the snow a dark form running swiftly through the trees along the hillside above him. It had the gait and appearance of a gigantic wolf, but he instinctively knew it to be his dog. He whistled and called, but it neither slackened its speed nor looked around. In a few minutes it had disappeared over the ridge.

He thought of his grandmother's tales of the werewolf, the man wolf, who could change from man to wolf at will. He had been thinking of these tales often lately. Her stories of warlocks, the storm wind and sea trolls had never so impressed his childish mind as these.

When told on a stormy December night in half whispers, the low room lighted only by the open fire, the sea raging on the shore before the house, the wind moaning through the trees on the montain side behind, he could vividly see the werewolf—the man in the wolf form—skulking along the edge of the forest and watching the village for his enemies.

He had all the ferocity of a wolf and the cunning of a man. He was the "hunter who never fails." Halvor knew his American neighbors with their automobiles and telephones would laugh at such an idea, but he had been raised by the sea and had all the superstition of a seafaring people deeply implanted in him.

The refusal of the dog to eat fish confirmed his fears!

Johann Jorgenson would never eat fish, explaining laughingly that as he spent about sixteen hours a day with them it was too much like eating his friends.

Halvor now found it necessary to watch the dog all the time; he never turned his back to him for an instant.

As week after week went by the strain showed in his appearance—gray began to appear in his hair, his face became more haggard.

One gray January afternoon he was chopping on a hillside, with the dog sitting in the snow a short distance away, watching him.

He was wondering how much longer he could continue under the present state of affairs. He must end it some way. Perhaps one of his neighbors could be persuaded on some pretext to attempt to shoot the dog.

The idea appealed to him; he thought it over carefully. He became so engrossed with it that he forgot for some minutes to look up. Just as the large red oak that he was chopping was about to fall he raised his eyes and saw the dog was not in view.

Glancing fearfully over his shoulder, he saw that which he had so long expected to see—the dog within a few feet of his back!

With a startled cry he sprang forward, but in so doing slipped on the icy hillside and tumbled directly under the falling tree.

When he was found many hours later by the party of neighbors with lanterns, who had been summoned by his wife, he was pinned fast under the tree trunk and had apparently been dead for hours.

His dog was shot that same night while attempting to enter a sheepfold.

A farmer living some miles north of Gunderson's identified the dog as one that he had formerly owned and that had run away the previous spring after having been whipped for worrying sheep.

HOUSEHOLD FERNS.

How to Pot and Care For These Popular Plants.

The idea that ferns must have no sun is wrong. Ferns may live in the shade. There are some sorts, of course, that are scorched by the sun. But most ferns that are cultivated in the house like much light and some sunlight.

Window boxes should be sprinkled lavishly with water twice a day. If it is dry and dusty the leaves should be well shaken before sprinkling. If possible get the earth with which to fill your boxes from an old hotbed—rich loam and rotted manure about half and half.

Failing that, take any which is handy and enrich it with ammonia and bonemeal, mixed well through. A heaping teaspoonful of the bonemeal or a tablespoonful of manure is enough for a six inch pot of earth.

Liquid fertilizer, likewise, must be kept off the roots, stems and leaves. Make a hole at one side or a trench just inside the pot rim, pour in the fertilizer and let it sink, then put back the earth and water the pot well.

Black Neck Ribbons.

Black moire ribbon one-half inch wide is used for lorgnettes in place of the usual grosgrain. In fact, moire ribbon is used exclusively, and every one is wearing it around the neck, hanging to about the waist line, a pendant of some sort hanging from it. Gold or jeweled slides are frequently seen, and they naturally correspond with the pendant.

Delicious Raisin Pudding.

After pouring four cupfuls of scalded milk over one and one-quarter cupfuls of rolled crackers allow it to stand until cool. Add one cupful of molasses, four eggs, slightly beaten; one-half of a grated nutmeg, one-half of a teaspoonful of cinnamon, one teaspoonful of salt and one-third of a cupful of melted butter. Parboil one and one-half cupfuls of raisins until soft by cooking in boiling water to cover; seed them and add to the mixture. Turn the batter into a buttered bread pan, cover, set in a larger pan of hot water and bake slowly for three hours, stirring after the first half hour to prevent the raisins from settling. Serve with the following sauce:

Beat until light the yolks of four eggs and add gradually to this while beating constantly one cupful of powdered sugar and two tablespoonfuls of grape juice. Place on the fire and cook for five minutes, stirring constantly. Set in a pan of ice or very cold water and beat until cold. Then add one cupful of heavy cream, very stiffly beaten, and one teaspoonful of vanilla.

Cream of Lettuce Soup.

To make this nice soup take four heads of lettuce, wash and drop into boiling water. Boil without covering for ten minutes, drain and lay in a dish of cold water for a few minutes, then drain again, chop fine and rub through a sieve. Have ready one quart hot milk thickened with a paste made of one tablespoonful butter and two of flour. Take out a few tablespoonfuls of this and blend with lettuce, then add all to soup. Season with salt and pepper, let simmer about five minutes, and serve with croutons.

Pickled Red Cabbage.

Cut a small head of red baggage as fine as for slaw; then put it into a colander, and sprinkle each layer with salt. Let it drain two days, then put into a jar and pour over it boiling vinegar enough to cover. Put in a few slices of red beet root. Choose the purple red cabbage. Those who like the flavor of spice will boil it with the vinegar. Cauliflower cut in bunches and thrown in afterward will be of a beautiful red.

Diced Beets.

Cook a dozen small beets in boiling water until tender. Remove skins and cut into small dice. Mix a half tablespoonful of cornstarch with a half cupful sugar. Add one-half cupful of vinegar and boil five minutes. Pour over beets and let stand twenty minutes, adding a tablespoonful of butter just before serving.

Eggs Easily Digested.

As an article of diet nothing is more valuable than an egg, which is a highly concentrated food, nutritious and easily digested when properly cooked. Eggs should take the place of many meat dishes, which is a means of practicing economy by reducing the butcher's bill.

Boracic Acid For Eyes.

A good boracic lotion for the eyes may be made as follows: Put into a pint bottle one ounce of boracic acid crystals, fill up with hot boiled water and thoroughly shake. When the lotion has been used if any crystals are left at the bottom more hot water can be added.

Wedding Gifts.

When invited to a church wedding and not to the reception following it is not necessary to send a present to the bride, but a call is made on the bride on her at home day a month or two after the wedding.

HIS HEALTH IN A TERRIBLE STATE

"Fruit-a-tives" Healed His Kidneys and Cured Him

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th. 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My Kidneys were not doing their work and I was all run down in condition. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect, I found more than satisfactory.

Their action was mild and the result all that could be expected.

My Kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am enjoying the best health I have ever had".

For the Children

Little Princess Juliana, Idol of the Netherlands.

Although the Netherlands—or Holland, as it is more commonly called—is as yet not mixed up in the great European war, signs of the conflict are on every hand. Many of the people of Belgium have sought safety across the Holland border, for the two countries adjoin. Little Princess Juliana, who will be six years old next April, is too young to know much about warfare, but she has seen some of the little children who were driven from their homes. Her mother, Queen Wilhelmina, has done much to relieve the distress of the homeless ones, and Juliana, of course, is full of sympathy.

Princess Juliana is heir apparent to the throne of Holland and may some day rule as queen, her father not being in the line of succession. It is to be hoped that when she is called to rule that wars will no longer be tolerated in the world.

A Way to Help Birds.

Five members of a second reader class in a South Dakota rural school celebrated the first Christmas of the Liberty Bell Bird club of the Farm Journal, Philadelphia, by having a real Christmas tree for the birds near their schoolhouse.

The cedar tree which had been the center of their own jolly Christmas festival was taken out of the schoolhouse by an older pupil while the little folks made baskets to hang on the tree. After this whenever they ate their dinners the children carefully placed all the crumbs left in small baskets, which were then hung on the birds' Christmas tree, where the feathered guests eagerly gathered to enjoy their feast. Where there is a suitable tree standing near the home or school it can easily be converted into a Christmas tree for the birds by fastening gifts of food to its branches. Sheaves of grain, baskets of suet and breadcrumbs and a dish of water will always be relished by the birds.

COLORS THAT MAKE ONE SEEM SLIM.

A girl who fears that she is too plump for the fashionable ideal of beauty should ponder well before choosing the color of her clothes.

Many colors add to their wearer's apparent size, while others have a kindly way of diminishing it.

Thus black—alas that it should be so in a gray world!—has the power of making any one look her slimmest, and the stout find it a friend. Yet its effect is so depressing that one forgives those who ignore this quality.

Subdued shades of blue, heliotrope and olive green have also this happy and much coveted effect of lessening the appearance of bulk, but wedgwood blue, pale gray and almost all tones of red have the opposite power.

White can be worn by all, though only the blond should choose clear or dead white. The wise brunette should select creamy tones.

Mauve and certain shades of green if worn near the neck and shoulders are helpful in lessening any appearance of overstoutness.

Oddly enough, these colors usually suit a certain type of blond that is apt to become stout after very early girlhood is past.

Animals and Insects.

Here are a few unexplained facts about animals and insects: A fly will crawl to the top of a window pane, fly back to the bottom and crawl up again; hardly ever does it fly up and crawl down. A hen always scratches for food with the sun behind it, so that its rays will reflect on the tiny particles. Cats seldom lie with their feet to the fire, dogs invariably lying just that way.

A Health Hint.

The Stolen Custard.

In haste I bore the tidings,
"My darling, I'm afraid
Your pussy cat has stolen
The custard that you made."

I feared a burst of weeping,
But saw with glad surprise
A look of joyous rapture
Light up the childish eyes.

"Oh, auntie! I'm so flattered
To have dear pussy feel
That I can make a custard
That's good enough to steal."

FEELS LIKE A NEW WOMAN

As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Dispelled Backache, Headaches and Dizziness.

Piqua, Ohio.—"I would be very ungrateful if I failed to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the praise it deserves, for I have taken it at different times and it always relieved me when other medicines failed, and when I hear a woman complain I always recommend it. Last winter I was attacked with a severe case of organic weakness. I had backache, pains in my hips and over my kidneys, headache, dizziness, lassitude, had no energy, limbs ached and I was always tired. I was hardly able to do my housework. I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on one other occasion, and it had helped me so I took it again and it has built me up, until now I feel like a new woman. You have my hearty consent to use my name and testimonial in any way and I hope it will benefit suffering women."—Mrs. ORPHA TURNER, 431 S. Wayne St., Piqua, Ohio.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

HASTINGS HAPPENINGS

Hastings, Feb. 17. — The services in the local churches on Sunday last were in commemoration of the one hundred years of peace between Great Britain and the United States.

A very successful carnival was held in the skating rink here Wednesday night. The evening being favorable, quite a number appeared in costume. Several prizes were given, and those who were fortunate enough to secure them were considered quite lucky. The race was as usual won by Mr. Bert Dodd of town, who appeared to have no trouble keeping ahead of those competing against him, and came in an easy winner.

A wedding of local interest was solemnized at Grace Church, Winnipeg, on Wednesday last, the bride being Miss Georgina Howson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Buck, of Asphodel, and the groom Mr. Gordon Brackenridge, formerly of Westwood. The young couple are well known here, and a host of friends join in wishing them a long life of connubial bliss. Mr. and Mrs. Brackenridge will take up residence in Kerrobert, Sask.

The annual sleigh ride and social in connection with the Presbyterian Sunday school was held on Friday night. After the children had enjoyed themselves to the utmost driving around, they repaired to the basement of the church where the friends of the Sunday school had provided an excellent supper. After full satisfaction had been done to the wants of the inner man, a good program was given by the members of the school and a very pleasant evening was spent together.

Those who attended the operetta, "The Courtship of Miss Canada," given in Norwood on Friday night, under the auspices of the I. O. D. E., report an excellent program and a well-filled hall. We understand the play is being repeated on Monday night.

Some of our hockey sports went to Havelock on Saturday night, but were defeated in the game.

Mrs. H. Collins has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. G. Douglas.

A banquet was tendered to Mrs. C. B. Beamish on Thursday evening by the local chapter of the I.O.D.E. prior to her removal to Picton. Mrs. Beamish has been an active member of the order ever since its organization, and much regret was expressed at her departure from town. Mr. Beamish was also waited on by several of his friends and presented with a club-bag as a slight token of appreciation of his worth. Mr. and Mrs. Beamish leave during the present week for their new home.

Mr. John Thomson of Wheatley, is to fill the vacancy as manager of the Union Bank here, caused by the removal of Mr. Beamish. Mr. Thomson is a son of Rev. D. A. and Mrs. Thomson, of this place, and is returning to the scene of his childhood. We wish him success.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam. Beamish was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday last, when their daughter, Ella, became the bride of Mr. W. Gibbons of Saskatchewan. Their many friends extend congratulations, and join in wishing them prosperity through life.

The members of the Presbyterian church drove over to the home of Mr. Adam Humphries Monday night and spent a very pleasant evening with the family.

Some of our young people attended the "at home" at Norwood on Tuesday night, and report a good time.

Mr. James Stevenson took a trip to Belleville last week.

Miss Jessie Martin is visiting with friends in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Baker of Campbellford spent Tuesday with friends here.

Mr. George Laing of Peterborough spent Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Beavis.

Mr. Armor Weir of Norwood was in town on Wednesday.

Mrs. T. J. O'Neil has been visiting friends in Keene.

Miss Willena Fife returned on Saturday from a pleasant visit with Peterborough friends.

Mr. Norman Reesaw has purchased the farm of Mr. Fred Richardson and intends moving there shortly.

Mr. Richardson is moving nearer Hastings, having secured the farm belonging to the Misses Maguire.

The Misses Oliver of Percy spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Herb Oliver.

Mr. Thos. Hill of Peterborough spent the week-end here with his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Lew Kelly spent Sunday with friends in Warkworth.

Mr. and Mrs. Stillman have been visiting in Keene.

Some of our nearby residents say that the crows have made their appearance again and are wondering if spring is near.

A shortage of hides in the tanenry here has occasioned the laying off of some of the employes.

Cross Evamination of R.T. Jeffery

revenue, he said it would depend upon how much of the plant was constructed. If there was enough built to operate, it would start to earn revenue in two months.

Had Large Experience.

Mr. Tilley asked witness to recount his electrical experiences, which covered a period of seven years since leaving college. Previous to that he had steam and electrical plant experience in British Columbia and Sault Ste. Marie, besides working in machine and car shops. The last two years of his life had been spent in the employ of the Hydro-Electric Commission. He spent six months designing the system in Windsor and Walkerville. In June, 1913, he made a valuation of the Peterborough Light and Power Company plant. Prior to that he made a valuation of plants in Renfrew, Leamington, Amherstburg, and Harrow.

Mr. Tilley—Just let us understand how you made your appraisal here. You drove over the whole system?

Mr. Jeffrey—I took the streets north and south and east and west, walking and driving.

Mr. T.—How long did it take you?

Mr. J.—About one week.

Mr. T.—Did you climb poles?

Mr. J.—About six or seven.

Mr. T.—You examined some poles with a bar?

Mr. J.—I did; about forty of them.

Mr. T.—What did you do to the others?

Mr. J.—I inspected them.

Mr. T.—Could you do it just as well driving as walking?

Mr. J.—No.

Mr. T.—Did you make a record with regard to each pole?

Mr. J.—I averaged the age of the poles for each block.

Mr. T.—Did you put it down?

Mr. J.—Yes, in a little book.

Mr. T.—Where is that book now?

Mr. J.—It is in Toronto and is private information, and is not available for this arbitration.

Couldn't Produce His Notes.

Mr. T.—Are you taking that stand on your own authority or on the authority of the Commission?

Mr. J.—I couldn't produce it without the authority of the Commission.

Mr. T.—The book you had on you is the only record kept for the purposes for which you made this valuation?

Mr. J.—Yes.

Mr. T.—Does that book show only the pole records?

Mr. J.—It shows 10,000 less pounds of wire than in the inventory.

Might Subpoena the Secretary.

Mr. Tilley made a direct request that the arbitrators request that the book be produced.

Judge Huycke said the request would be al right if the book was the property of Mr. Jeffrey.

Wallace Nesbitt said the only course was to subpoena the secretary of the Commission if the book was to be produced.

Mr. Tilley laid stress on the importance of the book being produced in view of the evidence of the witness.

Mr. Cowan thought it was a delicate matter when one started to see how enquiry into the records of the Hydro-Electric Commission could be made.

Mr. Jeffrey said he was willing to wire the Commission and ask them if they would be willing to produce the book.

Mr. T.—When you made that inspection did you get your information from Mr. Fisk and Mr. Fife?

Mr. J.—I talked the matter over with them, particularly Mr. Fife.

Mr. Jeffrey agreed that from his notes in the little book an unbiased view of the pole matter would be obtained. For the purposes of the arbitration he made a new valuation which he had just completed a few days ago.

Mr. Tilley put some pointed questions to Mr. Jeffrey, asking him to divulge the name of a certain employe of the company who had assisted him to complete his valuation.

Mr. Jeffrey said he had received confidential information from some of the employes, who were all friends of his and who assisted him as much as possible in obtaining his valuation.

After Mr. Cowan, K. C., had raised objection to the trend of Mr. Tilley's questions, the latter did not press them.

Mr. T.—Did you spend some days going over the Otonabee system?

Mr. J.—No, I did not.

Mr. T.—I am told you did so.

Mr. J.—Whoever told you that, told you wrong.

Mr. T.—When did you make this scrap valuation?

Mr. J.—The other night.

Mr. T.—Who asked you to?

Mr. J.—Mr. Cowan did.

Mr. Jeffrey said the scrap valuation did not represent the value of the system as it now stood, but the amount it would bring if torn down and sold on the best terms procurable.

MORATORIUM BILL TO-DAY.

Draft of Measure Will Be Presented in the Legislature.

TORONTO, Feb. 18.—The Ontario Government will bring in a draft bill of a moratorium to-day, and it will likely be given first reading at once. The outlines of it will be given, but details will be added later, after committee discussion has been allowed.

The aim of the bill is to give judges on the bench the discretionary right to allow or refuse the foreclosure of mortgages during war time. If evidence shows a man is against the wall and cannot pay, pressure will be forbidden.

On the other hand, restrictions will prevent any one unfairly seeking a refuge from legitimate settlements. This is the first war measure of the Government, and it will be made retroactive, dating back to the beginning of war. Hon. I. B. Lucas will sponsor it.

--THE C.O.E.F.--

In a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Ackerman, Lieut. C. H. Ackerman writes:—

"I am enclosing some poetry that Sir Kenneth MacKenzie wrote and gave to me while I was at Wishford. I have the original and the other day he mailed me a copy of a Salisbury paper all neatly printed. I gave him the nick-names of the different regiments and he wrote it up after the style of Kipling.

(Canadian Overseas Expeditionary Forces).

(Copyright. All Rights Reserved.)

I wonder if our mothers would say if they could see us now,
Covered with mud from head to foot, wallowing through the slough;
Up to our knees in the slime and slush on the roads of Salisbury Plain.
We used to be Strathconas once,
Argylls, Seaforths, and Gordons once,
Lisgar Rifles, and Queen's Own once,
Now we're labelled "Canadian."

We volunteered for the C.O.E.F. directly the war began,
Chucked our billets in works and stores, off to enlist we ran;
Left our life of the plains and woods, the trails of Saskatchewan.
We used to belong to the "Mounties" (1) once,
Northumberland Rifles (Cobourg), and Royal Scots once,
The R.C.Ds. (2) and the Nineteenth (3) once,
Now we're simply "Canadian."

They sent us straight to Valcartier Camp where all the Brigades were formed,
Met the men from East and West, who in their thousands swarmed;
All of them filled with one desire to go to Old England's aid.
Men who were Simcoe Foresters once,
Peterborough Rangers and Light Horse once,
Montreal Heavies (4) and Grenadiers (5) once;
Battalions to form a Brigade.

Men in all walks of life met there, millionaires, "stony-brokes," clerks,
Merchants, shopmen, lawyers, and some ministers straight from their kirks;
Ranchers, pressmen, doctors, and all to King George's call not deaf.
Men who had been York Rangers once,
Fort Garrys, Borderers, Ninetieths (6) once,
The "Hunger and Thirst Boozilliers" (7) once,
To join in the C.O.E.F.

Though thousands had served as soldiers before, many had not had that book;
We taught them their drill from "Right about face!" to—"At the halt on the left,—form platoon!"
And those who could not a commission get fell right into place in the ranks;
Men who'd been heads of departments once,
Sons of the wealthy and potent once,
Sinking all social position at once,
For Duty's sake, asking no thanks.

We trained in camp, then sailed in the fleet across to England's shore,
Horse and Foot, with guns complete, some thirty-three thousand or more;
Keen for the work that lies ahead, eager to do our share.
To scrap with the German bullies once,
Help to avenge the Belgians once,
Join the Imperial forces at once,
And show what for death we care!

But K. of K. keeps us on Salisbury Plain, and we're getting all slack and stale,
Though "we lack the discipline Regulars have," this idleness we bewail;
The months pass by, and we'll lose the zest that we had for a trench to man.
To join the Allies in France at once,
To try our "Rosses" on Germans once,
Flesh our blades in the bounders once,
For aren't we Canadian?

January 16th, 1915. KENNETH MACKENZIE.

Origin of Gibraltar.

The "tar" in Gibraltar is a contraction of Taric or Tarif, the name of a famous pirate of medieval times. The whole word may be translated as "mountain or cliff of Taric." This same root "tar" occurs in the word "tariff." Taric after a time came to levy a tax or tariff on passing vessels instead of robbing them outright. In this way our word "tariff" had its origin. It is interesting to note also that this robber was further honored by having the town of Tariffa, near Gibraltar, named for him.—Detroit Journal.

Surnames in England.

History shows that surnames did not come into general and hereditary use in England until after the Norman conquest, when the upper classes were first known by the names of their lands. The lower orders took the names of trades, birds, animals and various other objects in art and nature. We are told that the earliest English surname is "Hatta."

LOSSES IN BATTLE

Men Called "Missing" Are Not Always Dead or Wounded.

accounts of battles one almost invariably reads of the dead, wounded and "missing." That the latter are not always among the dead or wounded, nor even among the prisoners taken by the enemy, is shown in this extract from General Horace Porter's "Campaigning With Grant:"

"We learned something at Shiloh about the way in which reports of losses are sometimes exaggerated in battle. At the close of the first day's fight Sherman met a colonel of one of his regiments with only about a hundred of his soldiers in ranks and said to him, 'Why, where are your men?'

"The colonel cast his eyes sadly along the line, wiped a tear from his cheek and replied in a whimpering voice, 'We went in 800 strong and that's all that's left of us.'

"'You don't tell me!' exclaimed Sherman, beginning to be deeply affected by the fearful carnage.

"'Yes,' said the colonel, 'the rebs appeared to have a special spite against us.'

"Sherman passed along some hours afterward when the commissary was issuing rations and found the colonel's men returning on the run from under the bank of the river, where they had taken shelter from the firing, and in a few minutes nearly all of the lost 700 had rejoined and were boiling coffee and eating a hearty meal with an appetite that showed they were still very much alive."

Whole Hog or None.

"Whole hog or none" refers to Mohammed allowing his followers to eat all except one portion of a pig, but failing to mention what the portion was, so that if a Mohammedan did not leave pork strictly alone he might as well consume the whole hog as risk eating any part of it.

"MOST BEAUTIFUL" WOMAN IS DEAD

FORT WILLIAM, Feb. 18. — The death occurred yesterday after a short illness of the wife of Dan McKay, superintendent of the N. M. Patterson Grain Co. elevators here. Mrs. McKay was formerly Miss Margaret McDonald, who was judged to be the most beautiful Scotch Canadian girl in Canada, by judges appointed by The Montreal Herald a few years ago in a contest held by that paper.

Mobilizing Against Italy.

GENEVA, Feb. 18.—(Via Paris.) —Austria has been concentrating troops for the last ten days on her Italian frontier. The men are chiefly artillery men and their guns have been emplaced at favorable positions dominating the Tyrolese passes.

Swiss, Italian and Austrian soldiers are close on one another on the lonely three-cornered frontier of the Alps at a height of from 5,000 to 8,000 feet, and frequently fraternize in the deep snow.

The Swiss soldiers usually act as the interpreters between the Austrians and Italians.

War Humor.

Austrians are being urged to send newspapers to the front to serve as chest protectors for the troops. If possible the papers should be German, as these lie best.—Punch.

THE GRANARY OF THE EMPIRE.

Canada proudly proclaimed in 1887 and again in 1897 that she was the granary of the Empire. Her opportunity now is to make good. Many of her young men are displaying a martial turn and hastening to offer themselves, to sacrifice themselves, in the cause they have at heart. But there is even a deeper duty resting on this country. That duty will fail filled, while helping others, cannot fail to help ourselves. We shall be abundantly paid for all we do, and in doing will possess the proud sense of serving the right. To neglect the slightest opportunity for production is to not only fall short of the call of patriotism, but to be guilty of a crime. We have the resources, we must have the energy to justify our claim to be the Granary of the Empire.

Warsaw.

Warsaw, the capital of Poland, is the third city of the Russian empire. Beautifully situated on the left bank of the Vistula, it is 700 miles from Petrograd and 400 from Berlin. It is a recognized center of science, art, industry and commerce and has a population of well over half a million.

Soothing.

The professor looked worried.

"I don't think," said he, "that my lecture last night was very much of a success."

"But, think dear," replied his wife, "what a splendid audience you began with."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

THE COURTSHIP OF MISS CANADA

Operetta Was Given by the Daughters of Empire at Norwood

WAS REPEATED

Norwood, Feb. 18. — The local chapter of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire held a very enjoyable and profitable operetta on Friday evening of last week entitled "The Courtship of Miss Canada." Eighty-seven Norwood people took part in the entertainment and every part was taken with a great deal of credit to the performers. The town hall was crowded to the doors and the proceeds amounted to about $180. So well was the large audience pleased with the performance that it was requested that the play should be put on again on Monday evening of this week when the hall was almost filled again. The proceeds were $82.50, the admission being 25c. each.

Mrs. C. W. Waters as Miss Canada acted her part not as an amateur but as a professional. Miss Helen Anderson as the Indian maid merited the unstinted praise of the whole audience. Eight or ten little girls in a drill won respected applause, half a dozen little boys as newsboys brought down the house. In fact every character in the eighty-seven was portrayed in a manner highly creditable to the ones who had the entertainment in hand. Of the men actors Mr. C. J. Puffer as "Uncle Sam," and Mr. Ernest Hall, as "the weather man," deserve special mention.

The following represented the cast of characters:—

Act I.—Miss Canada, Mrs. Waters; 10 Provinces, Mrs. J. Weir, Mrs. F. C. McRae, Mrs. Rev. Wolland, Mrs. Geo. Mills, Mrs. E. C. Squire, Mrs. B. W. Squire, Miss Rose Squire, Mrs. J. F. Pearce.

Four little winds — Misses Reba Squire, Elsie Laing, Marjorie Miller, Jean Minore.

Progress—Mr. John Robb, with cadet drill recited "Canadian Born."

Weather man and two cities.

Army of newsboys in song.

Wheel drill by ten young ladies in white costumes representing ten organized societies of women in Canada.

Indian maid fleeing from student is advised by Canada to submit to discipline of schooling.

Four little winds bring messages from nations.

Act. II.

Building of flag by provinces — John Bull (Mr. Geo. Mills) enters with England, Ireland and Scotland.

Chorus—Hail King George.

Solos — "A song of Homeland" (England) by Miss Nora Duffield.

The Scottish Blue Bell (Scotland) by Mrs. Porter, Killarney (Ireland) by Miss Roxie Andrews all beautifully rendered.

Eight little girls in drill represent Canada's bouquet.

Four maids advise Canada of approach of nations-a-courting nations as announced by Herald pay address to Canada with chorus of "Won't you be my sweetheart."

Canada declines the proposals of her suitors after which the little flower girls join hands and dance around John Bull while all sing "What's the matter with father."

Act. III.

Indian maid (Miss Anderson) in a beautiful recitation sitting in despair at the door of her chief's tepee bemoans loss of her country and her people's glory. Mr. Ernest Hall takes the part of the vanquished chief.

Canada inclined to remorse makes answer. The Provinces speak encouragingly Canada responding to their words, and looking forward to a great future glories in her power. The angel appears rebuking Canada in inspiring verse. This part was perfectly taken by Mrs. A. Kempt. In humility Canada dedicates herself with all her provinces and resources to the Great Ruler of the Universe, while "Holy, Holy, Holy," is sung, all kneeling.

GAINS MADE ALONG WESTERN FRONT

Weakening of German Forces to Reinforce Eastern Armies is Signal For an Anglo-French Advance, and Paris Report is a Record of Unbroken Successes---Artillery Advantage Great.

PARIS, Feb. 18.—Taking advantage of the weakening of the German lines in France to form new armies to attack the Russians in East Prussia and Bukowina, the allies have begun a vigorous advance and are playing havoc with the German hosts or trenches at important strategical points in the lines. Not deceived by the German stories of adding reinforcements to their armies in Belgium and their taking the offensive at certain points to cover the withdrawal of large forces to the east, Gen. Joffre has massed fresh forces of troops at commanding points and is taking the Germans by surprise.

The strength and striking force of the artillery of the allies, which is now becoming an important factor in their grand tactics and outranges the best of the German guns by a mile, enables the making of rapid preparation of the ground for sudden attacks and of this feature of warfare the allied generals are beginning to take full advantage.

The revived activity of the allies was signalised yesterday by the following up of their gains in the Champagne region northwest of Perthes, by capturing a half mile more of trenches over the two miles taken the preceding day, and the repulse of German attacks north of Mesnil-les-Hurlus and Beausejour, delivered with a view to counter-acting the French progress elsewhere. A large bomb-thrower with several small ones and 200 German prisoners were captured.

North of Arras is another point of great importance. Here the French troops were active, carrying two lines of trenches, making some prisoners, inflicting heavy losses, and killing a number of German officers who were standing in the rear to urge their men on to the attack. Violent counter-attacks by the enemy were smashed to pieces.

In the Argonne, where the French have been barely holding their own for some weeks, they suddenly assumed the offensive in force in the forest of La Grurie, and occupied considerable ground in the face of desperate fighting by the Germans. Several isolated actions of great fierceness were fought at close quarters.

The progress on the whole northern front, including the heavy artillery actions from the sea to the Oise, which resulted in the dispersal of concentrations of Germans, the blowing up of many caissons, and the destruction of trains, needs only to be continued for a short time to enable the allies to burst through the German lines at two or three points and force a retirement into Belgium to another standing ground.

The Germans who attempted to carry Four de Paris by main force were completely overwhelmed.

Progress at a number of points between the Argonne and the Meuse is reported also.

In Alsace the French are also making good progress. The ridge dominating the Sudel farm, a strong position, has been taken and all the ground gained has been tenaciously held.

Fighting in the Champagne vine country is under difficult conditions. Positions are easily concealed by the mass of vines and the density of the vineyards. Owing to the importance of attention to these in the spring to ensure a good vintage this year, the French are anxious to clear the Germans out of this region as early as possible, and the indications are for continuous progress.

BRITAIN REFUSES TO YIELD ON FOODSTUFFS ISSUE

Retaliatory Measures Will be Taken Against Germany, Says Sir Edward Grey, in Reply to U.S. Note—Britain Awaits Opening of Submarine Blockade With Equanimity.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Great Britain's second and complete reply to the American note of protest which on Dec. 28 last asked for an early improvement in the treatment of American commerce by the British fleet, was made public last night by mutual agreement between the State Department and the British Foreign Office.

The note, addressed to Ambassador Page by Sir Edward Grey under date of Feb. 10, denies that the depression in American industries is due to the activity of the British fleet, and suggests among other causes the shortage of shipping facilities, the consequent diminution of the cotton trade and destruction by submarine mines, "laid by the enemy indiscriminately," of many neutral vessels.

After giving a lengthy and detailed answer to the charge that American ships and cargoes were being unduly detained, the communication contains in its concluding paragraph the announcement that Great Britain intends to take retaliatory measures against the German submarine campaign against enemy ships, but does not reveal their nature.

Conceding that foodstuffs intended for the civil population of a country are not contraband, the British Government point out that "in any country in which there exists such tremendous organization for war as now obtains in Germany there is no clear division between those whom the Government are responsible for feeding and those whom they are not."

"It will still be our endeavor," says the final paragraph, "to avoid injury and loss to neutrals, but the announcement by the German Government of their intention to sink merchant vessels and their cargoes without verification of their nationality or character, and without making any provision for the safety of non-combatant crews or giving them a chance of saving their lives, has made it necessary for his Majesty's Government to consider what measures they should adopt to protect their interests. It is impossible for one belligerent to depart from rules and precedents and for the other to remain bound by them."

Drastic Steps Promised.

LONDON, Feb. 18. — Sir Edward Grey, in a statement issued here last night, intimates that owing to the German submarine campaign against merchant shipping, Great Britain in reprisal will take drastic action that will eclipse any previous dealings with neutral commerce directed to Germany. Owing to the breach of all previous rules of warfare, openly proclaimed in the Berlin decree concerning the torpedoing of neutral vessels in British waters, Britain will probably retaliate by cutting off all commerce from Germany. This will be done even at the risk of alienating neutral sentiment. Britain determiner.

On the eve of the threatened German blockade, British shipping men have assumed a watchful, waiting policy, though waiting in this instance means not cancellation of sailings, but waiting to see if the Germans pull off their well-advertised show. Some continental ferry services have been temporarily suspended, including the Dutch mail boat from Flushing to England to-day. At the continental offices of the South Eastern, Great Eastern, South Western and London & Brighton Railways, no changes of cross-channel services are announced. In the last few days a large number of vessels cleared from ports in Great Britain, but whether the work was rushed to get them away from home waters before Thursday is a matter of speculation.

An official of one transatlantic line said yesterday: "It is my personal opinion that Germany is not intending to sink Atlantic liners with Americans aboard, despite all their bluster. What I think they hope to do is to sink a number of smaller British craft, believing that by so doing they will demoralize shipping entirely. If that is their belief, it is doomed to disappointment. So far as I know, not a single sailing of any regular liners has been cancelled. We are doing some watchful waiting to see what turns up."

Newfoundland Contingent Arrives.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Feb. 18.—News of the arrival at Liverpool of the steamer Dominion with 250 volunteers, comprising the second contingent of the Newfoundland regiment, was received here yesterday. The soldiers will be sent to Fort George, Inverness, Scotland, where the first contingent is being trained for service.

TWO SHIPS TORPEDOED

British Collier and French Steamer the Victims

PARIS, Feb. 18.—An official communication, issued by the Ministry of Marine, tells of the sinking yesterday by the German submarine U16, of the French steamer Ville de Lille off the Barfleur lighthouse, a short distance east of Cherbourg, after the submarine had ordered the crew to leave the steamer. The statement follows:

"The French steamer Ville de Lille, belonging to the Compagnie Navigation des Bateaux a Vapeur du Nord, sailing from Cherbourg to Dunkirk, sighted the German submarine U16 near the lighthouse at Barfleur at 1.30 o'clock Tuesday.

"The Ville de Lille endeavored to escape, but was outspeeded by the submarine, men from which boarded her and gave the crew ten minutes to leave in the ships' boats. They then sank the Ville de Lille by bombs placed in her interior.

"The U16 headed for a Norwegian steamer, but sank out of sight when a division of French torpedo boats from Cherbourg appeared on the horizon."

The Ville de Lille was a small steamer of 997 tons.

The British steam collier Dulwich, bound from Hull to Rouen, was torpedoed by a German submarine twenty miles northwest of Cape De la Heve at six o'clock Tuesday night. The torpedo struck the middle starboard side.

A BAD DAY FOR SNIPERS

Princess Pats Have Played Havoc With Pests

NORTHERN FRANCE, Feb. 18.—(Canadian Associated Press Cable.)—The Canadian contingent, the safe arrival of which in France has just been announced by the Colonial Secretary, would in any case have met with a great reception at the front, but after what has been accomplished by the Princess Patricia's Regiment, they were certain to be received with more than ordinary enthusiasm.

Nothing but praise is heard concerning the achievements of the Princess Pats. Reports of their splendid work are just filtering through from the trenches and in the severe fighting in which they have been engaged, they have made for themselves a high reputation.

Not only have they won distinction for what they have accomplished as a combined force, acting in concert with the English army, but they have achieved fame for the manner in which they have carried out duties requiring not only courage, but individual resourcefulness.

German snipers were very active in the section where the Canadians were engaged. "So the Pats got busy," remarked the officer who had just returned from their quarters. "The men from the west include many excellent shots, and from their work one would almost conclude they have that intuition which enables them to scent the location of snipers. Be that as it may, the pests were given a bad time.

"A number of officers and men of the Canadian regiment undertook the task of discovering snipers who were harassing their movements. In this they achieved a remarkable measure of success, especially as the snipers found themselves sniped."

INSTRUCTIONS TO "PIRATES"

Have Orders to Wipe out all Traces of Work

LONDON, Feb. 18. — The Copenhagen correspondent of The London Daily News wires: From Hamburg it is learned that the German submarines which are to engage in the blockade of the English coast have received detailed instructions how to act. These instructions state that the blockade of Britain gives the submarines the right to regard all merchantmen found within the blockaded area for the purpose of conveying anything to Britain as enemy ships engaged in illegal operations. The submarines are to approach the merchantmen, if possible, without being seen and torpedo them immediately without the slightest examination regarding their nationality or in any way concerning themselves as to the fate of the crew.

Neutral vessels which break a blockade have no rights at all, according to international law, and it is understood the desire is that the crews of the torpedoed ships shall perish, so there may be left no evidence regarding the fate of the ships. The German authorities believe the disappearance, with all hands, of many merchantmen will produce a most terrorising effect.

It is reported the Kaiser will arrive at Wilhelmshaven to-day. The general belief is that he is going to Heligoland to direct the blockade personally. In a few weeks, the rumor adds he may even go farther than Heligoland.

Kingston, London, Berlin and Waterloo sent peace centenary greetings to many points in the United States.

GERMANS MAKE READY FOR HUGE OFFENSIVE IN EAST

Russians Have Withdrawn to Strategic Positions Over a Front of Seven Hundred Miles and Are Awaiting the Onslaught—Germany Has Drawn Reinforcements From Western Theatre.

LONDON, Feb. 18. — The Daily News has the following from its correspondent in Petrograd:

"I now have received information which tends to clear up a situation hitherto rather difficult to understand. The Germans are preparing a general attack along the whole Russian strategic front, more than seven hundred miles in extent. The enormous power developed by Germany in this attempt is eloquent of long years of preparation. After a mad attempt to break through the Russian defence at a salient point of the line at Borzimoff, the Germans advanced in East Prussia in overwhelming strength. I am informed they were ten to one against the Russian force, which for months past quietly pushed forward to this region. The Russians were fully aware of this movement and made no serious attempt to check it. On the contrary, they moved forward a strong cavalry screen through the region on right bank of the lower Vistula, which at one time penetrated into German territory, and at the same time developed a sudden activity in the region of the Mazurian Lakes, with the object of fixing the Germans in their determination to attack in this direction. Apparently the Germans originally estimated the force necessary for their purpose here at four new army corps, in addition to the men already holdings positions in East Prussia at Cadres, for these four corps were quietly withdrawn from the armies on the western front, and the numbers filled up from new levies in the interior of Germany.

"When, however, the Russians began making a show of renewed activity over the wide front, extending from the Lower Vistula to Tilsit, the Germans doubled this original estimate.

From eight to ten German army corps now are believed to have been concentrated in East Prussia and launched upon the region north of the Vistula and eastward towards Niemen. They came on like an avalanche, a veritable German lightning stroke. But the Russians foresaw the entire manoeuvre. They retired betimes, leaving adequate forces of admirable light horse to carry on a running fight along the line of the advance of the Germans.

"The siege of Boyren fortress has been abandoned, and all the Russian forces, after laying waste the entire region, retired upon fortified positions toward Niemen.

"The position at the present moment is that fighting has already taken place around Augustovo, while the German line north of the lower Vistula has reached Plock and Racionez, about a couple of marches from the fortress of Novo Georgiovik.

"Northwest of Warsaw between the lower and upper reaches of the Vistula, the front remains where it was three months ago, and the situation here is briefly: The Germans cannot and the Russians will not advance to the main battlefield.

"The present campaign, however, is now in the Carpathians, where matters appear entirely in Russia's hands. Their right is steadily advancing there, while the centre and left continue to crush every German attack. In Bukowina, the enemies' forces have occupied Nadvorna and crossed the River Sereth. Germanic armies are thus attempting to turn both flanks of the Russians' seven-hundred mile front, which is now almost in the shape of a parabola, with Borzimoff, indicating the apex. Its sides extend to infinity, while all points on its line are equadistant from certain points. The inexhaustible supply of Russia's splendid fighting material, presents an infinity for all practical purposes, while the convenience for a front for those inside the curve is obvious. Germanic armies are outside."

Lieut.-Col. T. A. Sparham, of Brockville, former commander of the 41st Regiment, is dead after a brief illness.

Why "No Tea or Coffee" For Children?

Many parents who drink tea or coffee would not allow their children to touch it.

The 1½ to 3 grains of the drug, caffeine, in the average cup of tea or coffee, is far more injurious to the susceptible nature of a child than to an adult, but, just as constant dripping will wear away stone, so will the repeated doses of caffeine undermine the strongest constitution.

Parents who would protect their own health as they do that of their children, will see the reason for quitting both tea and coffee and using

THE CALL.

[The following poem from the pen of a Canadian soldier with the first contingent is reprinted from The London Daily Mirror.]

I hear the clear note of the bugle
And the roar of the calling drum
And I feel the swing of the marching men,
And a deep, deep voice says, Come
For the arrow of duty points forward
Tho the heartstrings quiver and break,
Yet the voice of my calling country
Is one I may not forsake.
For my manhood heeds and listens
And bends an attentive ear,
And tho war's alarm may bring me harm,
My road lies plain and clear.
It stretches wide from my own fireside,
At the far end stands the foe;
And tho grim death meets my eager breath,
I am ready and glad to go.
For England asks for the sons she lent
To the East, West, South and North,
And who stands by when a mother's cry
Is bidding her sons "Stand Forth"!
The shades of the past stand clear at last
For the flag by land and sea;
What was duty for Wellington, Nelson and Moore
Is doubly duty for me.
For they handed down the hard-won crown
That is made for the victor's brow
And the glory of deeds afloat and ashore
Is one to remember now.
Then God send England the strong right arm,
To prosper well in the fight,
And show that the sea-girt island
Is backed by the Empire's might.

FIREPROOFING SHINGLES.

The Use of Paint Greatly Reduces Their Danger.

Building conditions in Canada are such as to make the use of shingles for roofing houses, stables, etc., almost universal. Their general use, in an unprotected condition, adds considerably to the ordinary fire risk as well as to the conflagration hazard, and, consequently, increases the insurance rate on the buildings concerned. To overcome this disadvantage, numerous investigations and experiments have been and are still being made with the object of discovering a material the application of which will render the shingle roof fireproof, or, failing this, to secure a process of treatment of shingles whereby they may be included in the category of slow-burning structural material. Thus, it has been demonstrated that the use of a good quality of linseed oil carrying a suitable pigment will materially reduce the hazard. By the application of paint, the shingles are protected from the weather, thus preventing warping and the formation of pockets in which hot cinders may lodge; irregularities in the surface are also filled up by the paint.

Experiments have demonstrated that, under a one-minute exposure to flame, painted shingles are badly attacked. Under a three-minute test, the unpainted shingles were severely burned while the effect upon the painted ones was such that the actual burning was limited to the portion directly exposed to the flame, the paint retarding the spread of the fire and the charring of the wood. In the absence of any positive fireproofing material, the results obtained from the use of paint upon exposed shingles may be considered one of the best means of reducing the fire risk on shingle-roofed buildings.

Modern Fiction.

A young lady in Chicago wrote to a friend in a Canadian public library recently for a list of ten of the best works of fiction she had read during the last year. The recipient of the letter, a young lady well known for her ready wit, sent the following list: "The Truth About Germany: Facts About the War," by Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, and other Teutonic romancists; "The Secrets of the German War Office," a fine piece of imaginative writing by Dr. Karl Graves; "England as Germany's Vassal," a fairy tale by Von Bernhardi; "The Fatherland," running serially in New York; "The Vital Issue," also published serially in New York; "On to Paris via Sayville, R.I.," by Ambassador von Bernstorff; "Called Back! a Trench-ant Tale," by Von Kluk; "The Mailed Fist, or Returned for Better Direction," by William Hohenzollern; "The Uneaten Paris Dinner or The Wrong Goose Cooked," by Franz von Speed; "Everything Normal in Berlin," by Sir Roger Casement.

SHE ADMIRED BRAVERY

By F. A. MITCHEL.

It was in the late autumn. Edith and I were walking in the woods kicking up the dead leaves, for there were only a few left on the trees. We were both young, I twenty-two, Edith eighteen. I was sweet on Edith, and when a man of that age is sweet on a girl the first idea that enters his head is that she can only love a heroic personage who combines every manly attribute. When a man of forty gets sweet on a woman he fears that she won't consider that he has money enough to make it worth her while to marry him.

While Edith and I were walking along to the pleasant sound of the kicked leaves I was thinking about how many virtues I must possess to win her. It was in wartime, and I naturally supposed that military glory would count for a good deal.

"We're getting quite a number of instances of bravery from this war in Europe," I remarked.

"Yes," she replied, "they're splendid. Just think of a young earl not yet thirty years old, with the life of a nobleman before him, giving his life for his country."

"Would you like to be the widow of such a man?"

"I would grieve for him, but I would glory in having had such a husband."

This was not encouraging for me, a man of peace. It was some time before I tried to find out any more of those traits I did not possess, the absence of which would induce Edith to turn me down.

"I read an account some time ago," I said, "of a Belgian soldier who was placed in front of a company of Germans who were attacking his countrymen. Seeing him, the Belgians lowered their rifles. 'Fire!' he cried. 'For heaven's sake, fire!' A volley swept the Belgian and the Germans away together."

"What a noble sacrifice!" exclaimed Edith fervently.

"Do you suppose," I said, "that if you had been that Belgian's wife and a witness of the scene and his countrymen had looked to you to approve his order to fire you could have made the sacrifice yourself?"

This was a poser. Edith made no reply for quite awhile; then she said that she would have preferred to compromise by having them fire on her. I was not disposed to let her out in this way and persisted in having a direct answer, whereupon she said that she was afraid the test would be too much for her. She might be able to make the sacrifice and she might not. Of one thing she was certain. Her heart would be buried with that noble Belgian.

It was apparent to me that to win Edith I must do something heroic.

"Do you know," I said, "I have concluded that this war is a struggle between reaction and progress. I consider it the duty of America to join in it on the side of progress."

"So do I," was the prompt reply.

"What is true of a nation is true of one of its individual citizens."

"What do you mean?"

"That it is my duty to fight for the world's progress. I'm going abroad to enlist."

Edith looked grave.

"Don't you think it my duty?"

"No; I don't."

"Why not? Haven't you agreed with me that it is our duty as a nation to fight on the side of progress, and what is the duty of a nation is the duty of its individual citizens?"

"Yes; I suppose so. But I think it would be very foolish for you to go all the way over there to—to get yourself shot."

I looked down sidewise at Edith. The idea of my making myself food for powder evidently troubled her.

"I sail next week."

There was no comment on this for awhile. Presently Edith asked me in a faltering voice why I had said nothing of this before. I was some time framing my answer. When it came I spoke in a choked voice:

"Because I dread a parting."

"With whom?" She kept her eyes bent on the ground.

"You," I faltered.

I went on to tell her that I loved her, and she confessed that my love was returned.

"How hard for us to part," I said, "on the eve of our betrothal!"

"We will not part," she said firmly.

"My duty calls."

"What duty?"

"To progress, civilization, the cause of freedom."

"Let it call."

"I might have an opportunity to die one of those noble deaths we have been talking about."

"You'll do no such thing. You'll stay at home."

"But think how proud you will be of your soldier lover."

"I don't want a soldier lover."

"Must I go unsupported by the knowledge that you are willing to sacrifice"—

"You'll not go at all."

We were sitting on a low horizontal limb of a tree. Edith threw her arms around me to hold me from going to fight for an idea which I had no idea of fighting for. I gave in at last and consented to remain at home.

After we were married one night we heard burglars below. My wife in order to prevent my going down to attack them locked the door and threw the key out from the window.

Talking Business.

What are the wild waves saying?
I do not understand
As coldly they are spraying
The somber autumn sand.
But, being good at guessing,
I think I read this note:
"Old man, it's quite distressing.
You need an overcoat."

In summer when the breezes
The fleeting foam flecks chase
And every prospect pleases
And pleasure sets the pace
The waves may whisper lightly
Of love and brides of June
To those who wander nightly
Beneath the silver moon.

To youth and maiden strolling
Along the whitened beach
They murmur in their rolling
Of lovey dove and peach.
They help along romances
With language of their own
And give to stealthy glances
A pleasant undertone.

But when the autumn season
Has chased away the crowd
Rhyme gives a place to reason,
And then they talk out loud
The waves that once were humming
The song the lover sings
Now talk of coal and plumbing
And such distressing things.

Lesson VIII.—First Quarter, For Feb. 21, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Sam. iv, 1-13, 18. Memory Verses, 10, 11—Golden Text, Jas. 1, 22—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

As we read this chapter and the two following and vii, 1, 2, we cannot but notice the frequent mention of the ark of the Lord, or the ark of God, or some of its other titles, and when we recall that it was the principal vessel in the tabernacle and the only one of all the tabernacle vessels that continued to be used in the temple of Solomon, that it was made specially to be a receptacle for the two tables of the law, that over its blood stained lid or mercy seat and between the cherubim the glory of the Lord was revealed, and that from above the mercy seat the Lord communed with Moses, we must be persuaded that this vessel had a wonderful significance. And when we read in Rev. xi, 19, of the temple of God in heaven being opened and there being seen in it the ark of His Testament we stand in still greater awe before this holy vessel. It is mentioned forty times in the books of Moses and twenty-eight times in Joshua, chiefly in connection with the crossing of the Jordan. In our lesson chapter and those following it is mentioned thirty-seven times, so that we can easily see that the interest centers upon it.

Lesson verse 2 shows us Israel smitten before the Philistines, and we think that we hear again the words of Joshua, "O Lord, what shall I say when Israel turneth their backs before their enemies?" (Josh. vii, 8.) But, as then, so now, it was because of sin in the camp. As the elders considered the present defeat they did not seem to think that the difficulty might be with Israel, nor did they turn to the Lord, but said, "Let us fetch the ark of the covenant of the Lord that it may save us" (verse 3). The presence of the ark caused Israel to shout with a great shout, and when the Philistines understood that it was because the ark was come into the camp they said that God was come into the camp, the gods that smote the Egyptians. On the part of both Israel and the Philistines it seemed like pure superstition. The latter knew no better, but for Israel to put confidence in the ark rather than in the Lord reminds us of their worship of Aaron's golden calf and, away beyond the time of this lesson, their worship of the serpent of brass (II Kings xviii, 4).

Is it not the same today with those who think there is any benefit in the mere reading of a chapter in the Bible, or saying a prayer, or taking the communion, or in any religious formality? Anything that is not real heart dealing with the Living God is only a form of superstition. The Philistines were stirred to great fervor by the cry of their leaders, "Be strong; quit yourselves like men and fight" (verse 9), and the Lord delivered Israel into their hands so that 30,000 were slain, including Eli's two sons, and the ark of God was taken (verses 10, 11). Poor old Eli waited with fear and trembling for tidings from the battle, and when he heard the sad news and that the ark of God had been taken he fell off his seat backward and broke his neck and died. He was ninety-eight years old and had judged Israel forty years (verses 12-18). I think that while outwardly it was a broken neck it may have been inwardly a broken heart. In the same day it seems as if Phinehas' wife was also taken away (verses 19-22), so that a great calamity came to the house of Eli in one day (ii, 34). Thus suddenly have great events transpired again and again, and so shall it be at the end time.

The story of the ark in the hands of the Philistines (chapters v and vi) makes us think of Jerusalem, a burdensome stone for all people, and that all that burden themselves with it shall be cut in pieces (Zech. xii, 3). The Philistines found the ark a very grievous thing to have in their midst, and after a few months (vi, 1) they were glad to send it back to Israel. The story of the new cart and the two milk cows tied to it, with their calves shut up at home and the cows taking the straight way to Beth-Shemesh, lowing as they went, but not turning aside to the right hand or to the left (vi, 7-12), is a wonderful record of the hand of the Lord upon dumb beasts and brings to mind the dominion over all sheep and oxen, beasts of the field, fowl of the air and fish of the sea that has had some foreshadowings all the way along, but will be fully seen when the kingdom comes (Ps. viii, 6-9; Heb. ii, 8, 9).

The men of Beth-Shemesh rejoiced greatly to welcome the ark, and they offered burnt offerings and sacrifices unto the Lord, but they made a sad mistake when they looked into the ark, and they suffered greatly for it. As we said at the beginning of this study, the ark was made to keep the holy law of God, which Israel could not keep. The blood sprinkled upon the mercy seat from year to year (Lev. xvi) told of the demands of the law met by a substitute, even Christ, the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth (Rom. x, 4). Life never was nor could be by the law, which can only bring us all in guilty before God and is therefore called the ministration of death (Gal. iii, 21; Rom. iii, 19; II Cor. iii, 7).

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Feb 17.—At the C.P.R. live stock market there was no further change for cattle today, but the feeling continues easy at the recent decline in prices, and the prospects are for lower values next week if receipts are in excess of requirements. The supply today was not large, but it was quite ample to fill the wants of the trade which was somewhat limited as butchers were fairly well supplied, and now that the Lenten season is on the consumption of beef will be smaller than usual, consequently on the whole the trade was good. Sales of steers were made at $7.50 to $7.75, good at $7 to $7.25, and the lower grades at from $5.50 to $6.50, while choice butchers' cows brought $6.25 to $6.50, and the commoner ones sold at from $5 to $6, and bulls from $5.25 to $6.75 per cwt. The tone of the market for sheep and lambs was very firm at the recent advance in prices on account of the continued small offerings for which there is a good demand, and sales of Ontario lambs were made at $8.75 to $9, and Quebec stock at $8 to $8.25, while ewes sold at $5.25 to $5.50 per cwt. The demand for calves was good at prices ranging from $5 to $15 each. The market for hogs was weaker and prices showed a further decline of 10c per hundred pounds, with sales of selected lots at $7 to $8.50 per cwt. weighed off cars.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

ANOTHER BASKETBALL LEAGUE AT THE Y.M.C.A.

Two Divisions of Five Teams Each in Schedule

A revival of enthusiasm in basketball has taken place at the "Y." by the organization of another league composed of two divisions with five teams in each division. The initial games are scheduled for Saturday night, when three games will be pulled off. A league with ten teams is one of the largest that the Y.M.C.A. has ever conducted, so that the great strides taken in developing players is plainly seen.

A feature of the second league is the remarkabily fine spirit that the older players are exhibiting. Most of these older followers of the game played in the first league under the name of "Veterans," and succeeded in winning the pennant. In this league they are scattered among the teams in the capacity of captains, thereby strengthening and rounding out the efficiency of such teams.

There are several new players in the new league who received their development in the first league and are full of promise.

"Chappie" Nicholls, an old player, who has been in Toronto, is back in Peterborough, and will play with the Excelsiors.

The ladies are especially requested to witness the games in this league. Quite a number became interested in basketball during the first league. No charge is made to see the games, but anywho dislike to see such worthy games gratis will be given an opportunity to contribute by a silver collection.

The teams in Division "A" are: Cressmans, Fred Cressman (captain) De Laval, W. English (captain); Junior Business Men, Max Metheral (captain); Excelsiors, Alex. Darling, (captain); Unknowns, M. McCarroll. (captain).

In Division "B" they are: Beavers, Ross Dobbin (captain); Hustlers, W. Heaslip (captain); Maple Leafs, W. Richardson (captain); Collegiates, Hunter Lewis (captain); Miracle Men, D. Loucks (captain).

Games must be played on dates and times arranged. If one team only is present, that team wins the game by default. If neither team is present, each is credited with a loss.

All teams wishing to arrange practice hours may do so by applying at the physical director's office.

The personnel of the teams is:

Cressmans — Ed Raynor, V. Palmer, Fred Cressman, Claude Bartlett, H. Cressman and D. Carlyle.

Unknowns — Ed McCarroll (captain), Geo. Robertson, Elmer Brown, B. Mulhern, Ray Best, F. Douglas.

De Laval — W. English (captain), Stan. Taylor, B. Hamilton, P. Spratt, J. Downing.

Junior Business Men — Max Metheral (captain). C. E. Sisson, Ford Turner, Mel. Turner, H. Cranfield, Johnston, Jackson.

Excelsiors — Alex. Darling (captain), H. Knapman, H. Long, C. Nicholls, C. Stewart.

Beavers — Ross Dobbin (captain), Harold Lees, H. Weller, Waters, Thackeray.

Hustlers — W. Heaslip (captain), N. Laing, W. Carruthers, V. Lewis, Jones, J. Davidson.

Maple Leafs — W. Richardson, A. Horsfield, P. Dunsford, H. Taylor, E. Smythe, W. B. Cowan.

Miracle Men — Dan Loucks, L. Smith, J. Kerr, H. Mulhern, J. Munro, F. Preston.

Collegiate — Hunter Lewis (captain). G. Stevens, H. Stewart, D. Canniff, F. Jobbitt.

On Saturday, February 20th, the first league games will be played between the Beavers versus the Maple Leafs and the Collegiates versus the Hustlers.

COMMENT As You Like it

Edmonton Bulletin: Worried by the inroads Portland has made into the Vancouver hockey team's lead, Frank Patrick wired his Alberta scout, Fred Whitcroft, asking to have two forwards sent to the coast at once. A BONSPIEL

Curlers at Norwood to Hold Competition

Norwood, Feb. 18. — The curlers are arranging to hold a local bonspiel on Friday of this week. Six rinks will compete for the prizes and a good time is expected.

Skip J. R. McKelvie, president of the club, is almost certain of winning the Union Bank trophy this year as he is at present tied with skip Finlay. Mr. Finlay has played all his games while Mr. McKelvie has two more games to play and should he lose one game and win one he has the cup. At any rate he has three chances to Mr. Finlay's one. Should Mr. McKelvie lose two games, he has yet to play he and Mr. Finlay will play off.

At the meeting of the Presbytery of Lanark and Renfrew at Renfrew the death of the son of Rev. S. G. Brown, of Almonte, a member of the Princess Patricia's Regiment, in France, was announced. The Presbytery sent a message of condolence to Mr. Brown.

FRANK PATRICK

who will have charge of arrangements for the world's series at the Pacific Coast next month. His Vancouver team is now leading, though hard pressed by Portland. Patrick is back in the game for the Terminals.

TIRED OF TRAVELLING, FRANKLIN HOME RUN BAKER QUITS GAME

With the retirement of J. Franklin Baker, the hard-hitting third baseman of the Philadelphia Americans, as announced by Manager Mack only two members of the Athletics' famous "one hundred thousand dollar" infield remain on the team.

Eddie Collins, star second baseman, will wear a Chicago uniform this season, leaving Jack Barry at shortstop and "Stuffy" McInnis at first base. Larry Lajoie, who returns to the Mackmen after an absence of 13 years, will take Collins' place at the second sack, but so far as is known Mack has not decided upon anyone to fill the vacancy caused by Baker's retirement. Several youngsters, including Kopf and Crane, were mentioned by sporting writers as likely candidates for the position.

In making the announcement that Baker would retire, Manager Mack said that the idea was not a new one for the slugging third baseman, and that he has experienced great difficulty in the past in getting him to continue the game.

"For several years I have made annual visits to Baker's home," said Mack, "to sign him for the next season and last spring I proposed that he sign for three years. This he finally consented to do with the stipulation that he would be privileged to retire permanently after the season of 1914.

"Baker feels that he does not have to play ball for a living any longer, and says he has grown tired of travelling around the country as ball players have to do.

"Baker has been a credit to baseball in every way, and has the best wishes of the Athletic Club and myself."

PLAYERS FINED DOLLAR AND COSTS

McGiffin Loses Toss and Pays for Two

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Feb. 18. — McGiffin of the Torontos and Ross of Ottawa, who indulged in a fist fight on the ice last night during the Ottawa-Toronto game, were each fined one dollar and costs or fifteen days, in the police court this morning. They fliped a coper to see which should pay, and McGiffin paid the eight dollars.

An Old Time Joker.

It happened that Dean Swift, having been dining at some little distance from Laracor, his residence, was returning home on horseback in the evening, which was very dark. Just before he reached a neighboring village his horse lost a shoe. Unwilling to run the risk of laming the animal by continuing his ride in that direction, he stopped at one Kelly's, the blacksmith of the village, where, having called the man, he asked him if he could shoe a horse with a candle.

"No," replied the son of Vulcan, "but I can with a hammer."

Lingering Leave Taking.

The visiting lady had kept her hostess at the open door fully half an hour saying goodby. Finally an irate masculine voice indoors called out:

"Say, Maria, if you're going out, go. If you're staying, stay, but for heaven's sake don't come out."—Harper's

WANT FUNDS TO KEEP THE TEAM HERE

Subscriptions of $2500 Will Keep the Game in This City

The baseball meeting held last evening in the Bank of Montreal chambers drew together all the directors of the Peterborough Canadian League Club and a large number of fans. The problem of financing a team in Peterborough during the coming season was given much consideration, and it was finally agreed that could $2500 be secured by subscription, it would be possible to have a team. To ascertain if that amount could be secured, a committee was appointed to start the subscription. This committee will report back to a general meeting next Wednesday evening.

If a team is not entered in the Canuck League, application will be made to have the territory and franchise reserved till 1916. Then, if conditions were favorable, the club could proceed with the game.

Killed—348 officers and 5,812 men

Wounded—45 officers and 352 men.

Missing—8 officers and 5 men.

To this list Mr. Churchill said should be added the casualties of the First Royal Naval Division which participated in the defence of Antwerp, which were: Killed, 5 officers and 36 men; wounded, 4 officers and 184 men; missing, 7 officers and 868 men; interned, 39 officers and 1,524 men.

The Boy He Wanted.

The aim of golfers is, of course, to go around the course with as few strokes as possible, and the man with the least strokes wins the game. A player realized this once, and decided to engage a caddy who would help him.

"Yessir," said the boy.

"Can you add up?"

"Yessir."

"Well, what's five and seven and four?"

"Twelve, sir."

"Come along," said the golfer, "you'll do."—Pearson's Weekly.

Indians on the War Path.

DENVER, Colo., Feb. 18. — Fifty heavily-armed men headed by U. S. Marshal Mebeker, set out at daybreak to give battle to fifty Piute Indians from the reservation in Southwestern Utah, who went upon the war path.

The Indians, equipped with plenty of provisions and ammunition, are entrenched in the mountains. A number of whites who attempted to approach the Indians' stronghold to open a parley, were driven off and a desperate fight between Marshal Mebeker's posse and the Pintos seemed inevitable.

All the women and children are being removed from the district where the uprising occurred.

Wilhelmina's Fate in Balance.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—A. G. Hays, representing the owners of the Wilhelmina and cargo, returned yesterday from inspecting the ship at Falmouth and called on the American Ambassador and consul-general for information concerning the status of the Wilhelmina.

The British Foreign Office has made no reply to Ambassador Page's representation that the cargo was destined for civilians in Germany. Additional evidence respecting the cargo is on the way from the United States. It is not likely that there will be a decision until this arrives.

War Brings Mice.

One curious result of a foreign invasion is recorded in the letters of Prince Metternich to Mme. de Lieven. From Judenburg, a small town in Styria, the prince writes: "The burgomaster here has been expatiating to me on the large amount of damage done by mice to farms in the surrounding district. On inquiring how long they had been afflicted in this way, I was told, 'Since the French were here.' 'Do you mean to tell me the French brought mice with them?' I asked. 'No,' replied the burgomaster; 'but they ate so much bread that they covered our fields with crumbs, and since then all the mice in Styria appeared to have settled here'."

Exports To Indies.

As a result of the trade agreement between Canada and the West Indies and British Guiana, Canada shipped to British Guiana in the first nine months of this year, 113,000 barrels of flour worth $494,262 as compared with 61,000 barrels worth $275,492 for the same period the year before. The Customs Department of British Guiana has decided that Canada's flour shipped via New York must be bonded through and not be reshipped at that port. Other West Indian colonies are likely to make the same regulation in order to ensure that all flour getting the preferential tariff rate shall be Canadian flour.

A REPORT

Concrete pavements require joints about every 25 feet in order to take care of contraction and expansion in the concrete. These joints are a source of weakness and in modern concrete pavements are generally protected by strips of steel embedded and held in the concrete with a layer of tarred felt between them. This of course increases the cost of the pavement, but is necessary as otherwise the edges of the concrete at the joint wear very badly.

I estimate that a concrete pavement built of first-class materials, with protected joints will cost at least $1.70 per square yard, built by day labor and without guarantee.

Bituminous Pavements.

Under this heading come pavements of several different types. The simplest type is based on the old macadam idea. A foundation is prepared by grading and rolling. On this foundation a macadam base is laid and well rolled. From this point on details vary. Usually the macadam base is covered by a two inch layer of crushed stone coated with tar preparations or asphalt and compacted by rolling; on this layer a wearing surface of smaller hard stone, also coated with tar or asphalt, is laid to a depth of from ¾ to 1½ inches and rolled. On the top of this, fine stone and dust is spread thinly and rolled in.

Another type is built in practically the same way as our present asphaltic concrete pavement. A concrete base is laid, and a coating of bituminous material spread over it; on this a layer of fine stone and dust is laid; and on this coarse stone to form the wearing surface. Before rolling a certain amount per square yard of hot tar or asphalt is sprayed over the coarse stone. The surface is then well rolled. After rolling a seal coat of car or asphalt is sprayed over the surface and fine stone spread over it. This is again rolled until perfectly compact. This is what is called the penetration method.

The surface may also be mixed with the tar or asphalt to an ordinary asphalt pavement and rolled. This is a little more expensive but in my opinion makes a better job as each particle of stone is sure to be well coated.

These pavements have the advantage of being fairly quiet, easy on horses, fairly easy to clean, are not slippery, are of good color and are easy to repair. They can be built by the penetration method without an expensive plant.

They will not last as long as the higher priced pavements as the materials used and the method of construction are not of the same quality.

There are a number of patented bituminous mixtures on the market such as "Tarvia," "Pioneer Brand," etc., which can be bought at a reasonable price and are far superior to ordinary tar for the construction of these pavements.

The estimated cost of this type of pavement is about $1.55 per square yard, built by day labor, without guarantee.

Rocmac Pavement.

This is a type of pavement of which the principle is entirely different from the foregoing. It is a macadam road with a special surface. This surface is constructed as follows:—

On the macadam base, fine limestone dust and screenings mixed with the Rocmac solution is laid to the depth of about ¼ inch for each inch of depth of the wearing surface.

For a three-inch surface this coat is ¾ inch. The stone comprising the wearing surface is then laid on this coat to the desired thickness rolled into the mixture of Rocmac and dust flushes up to the surface. The surface is then dusted over with fine limestone and dust and rolled again.

The Rocmac solution is composed largely of a silicate which unites with the carbonate of lime in the limestone dust forming in time an artificial stone.

This pavement has been laid in a number of Canadian cities in the last five years, and is still in a rather experimental stage. I have not seen it myself, but judge that its life is comparatively short. It should make a pleasing and satisfactory road while it lasts. It can be laid by day labor without any plant except such as we already have.

It would probably cost about $1.75 per square yard by day labor, without guarantee.

There are numerous variations on the above types of pavements some of which are patented, but the principle is the same in all.

It seems to me that the only real way to judge these pavements is to try them. I would recommend that a section of some street be selected where the traffic is uniform and conditions as to foundation, etc., as near alike as possible. On this street lay trial sections of the different types of pavement of not less than 750 square yards area. In this way an idea can be formed as to the comparative first cost at once, and later an opinion formed as to the merits of the respective types.

All these pavements can be laid by day labor without any great expense for plant.

In this respect I have not considered or discussed the more expensive forms of pavement such as asphalt, brick, stone, wood blocks.

BOYS MADE HAPPY AT OAK HALL'S

Though "Dollar Day" has come and come and gone, and though it cannot truthfully be styled as successful as that of last year, it was not because some merchants failed in their efforts to make it a success. Foremost among these was Mr. J. Maher, of the Oak Hall store, who certainly lived up to the principles upon which the day was based. He went further than that by providing over one hundred boys with something for nothing, and incidentally it might be stated that he will henceforth have live advertising agents in such boys. Mr. Maher distributed one hundred bags of marbles by scrambling them among several hundreds of screeching, yelling, bustling oys of all ages who surged around the front of the store at four-thirty, and who made that section the liveliest spot in the city for some time. Police officers were kept busy trying to maintain a right-of-way for the street cars. The marbles were scrambled from an upstairs window over the store.

Mr. Maher adopted a unique plan for "Dollar Day." He advertised one hundred surprise bundles which were on sale for two hours in the morning, three in the afternoon and two in the evening. Each bundle was advertised for sale at one dollar, but guaranteed to contain several time the value of that figure. As a consequence he did a rushing business, and feels that the purchasers received their money's worth several times over.

During the scramble which occurred in front of the store, the crowd of boys stretched across in front of Dr. Frank's office, and the doctor amused himself tossing copers to the youngsters much after the plan of tourists who throw coppers into the sea to watch South Sea Islanders dive for them. He distributed about seventy-five copers in this interesting way.

"THE PIT"

The scenes of the drama are laid in Chicago during a period of speculation in the wheat pit, and intimate pictures of society life form the prologue of the play. Cressler, a victim of rash speculation in "The Pit," commits suicide just as Curtis Jadwin, a prosperous young broker, wins the hand and heart of Laura Dearborn, a rich and lovely society girl. Their married happiness is menaced by Jadwin's infatuation for wheat speculation, which leads him to neglect his young wife. Corthell, a former lover, appeals to her, charms her with music, and almost wins her away from her husband. The latter is temporarily won from his passion for moneymaking, but succumbs to it again, and leaves the path open for Corthell to make further onslaughts on Laura's heart.

Jadwin now plans a great wheat corner, and starts in by winning back a fortune, of which his friends deprived him years before. The market recedes, and Jadwin quarrels with his partner, accusing him of trying to sell him out. Jadwin thereupon plunges into the market, but failing in his frantic efforts to corner it, hears the name of his firm "read out" by the secretary. The corner has been prevented; he is ruined.

Quitting the tumult of the Board of Trade, he makes his way home, a beaten man. His wife is on the point of eloping with Corthell, but when she sees her unhappy husband her heart is touched. Dismissing her lover, she turns to Jadwin and promises to help him commence life afresh far from the feverish temptations of speculative business life. He has lost a fortune, but has a devoted wife, whose love has returned to him.

"The Pit" will be shown in five reels at the Grand Opera House on Monday and Tuesday, February 22nd and 2r3d.

"What did you learn at the school?" the boss asked the fair young applicant for the stenographer's job.

"I learned," she replied, "that spelling is essential to a stenographer."

The boss chuckled.

"Good. Now let me hear you spell essential."

The fair girl hesitated for the fraction of a second.

"There are three ways," she replied. "Which do you prefer?"

And she got the job.

Parting of the Ways.

It was over, then—the dream. The wife rose unsteadily and put on her hat.

She was weary—weary to the bone of it all—his threats, his unmanly evasions, his weak, despicable subterfuges.

But her eyes were resolute.

"It's no use, Henry," she said bitterly. "I'm going."

At the door she paused—paused with set lips and unpitying eyes, while he poured forth a husband's soul in one last anguished appeal.

"Think of me!" he cried desperately. "Think of your father and mine! Think of our son"—

"It's no use, Henry," she repeated wearily, as the door closed. "I shall vote the straight ticket."—Judge.

An Ancient Builder.

Probably the greatest builder the world ever had was Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon from 604 to 561 B. C. There is scarcely a ruin in Babylonia which does not show traces of his work. Nearly everywhere in Mesopotamia and even in Persia are found bricks bearing his name. He delighted in restoring the old temples. He surrounded defenseless cities with walls and moats. He confined the rivers to their courses with huge brick embankments. Shortly before his time Babylon was completely destroyed, but he rebuilt and enlarged the city.

And One to Carry.

The high school freshman was not doing very well with his studies and the principal called him into the office one afternoon to find out what the trouble was.

As a preliminary question he asked: "Er—Ralph, how many subjects are you carrying?"

"Why, I'm carrying one and dragging three, Mr. Buford," was the unexpectedly accurate reply.—Woman's Home Companion.

One Way of "Beating the Bounds."

The Cossack can do much in war, but in peace time he is not so handy. Then he is either a fisherman or a farmer, but he knows little about land surveying and less still about land registration. When disputes arise there is a method of settling them. When the boundary has been settled it is registered not upon parchment, but upon boys' backs. All the boys are collected and driven like sheep along the newly surveyed boundary. The procession halts at each landmark, a certain number of boys are chosen, thoroughly whipped and then sent home. This is done in the belief than an unmerited whipping would always remain in the memory—a truly wonderful method of "beating the bounds."

REVIEW OF BRITISH OPERATIONS

FRENCH STEAMER IS HIT BUT IS TOWED TO PORT

Was Torpedoed Without Warning by German Submarine

DIEPPE, France, Feb. 19. — A German submarine torpedoed this morning without warning the French steamer Dinorah from Havre for Dunkirk, at a point sixteen miles off Dieppe. The Dinorah did not sink, but was towed into Dieppe. No mention is made of the loss of any of her crew. Daily steamship traffic between Dieppe and England has been suspended.

LONDON, Feb. 19. — A despatch from Berlin says that no news of the submarine campaign against Great Britain is expected until the submarine fleet can return to its base and report results. No news is expected from England regarding the destruction of ships.

DOVER, Feb. 19. — The Norwegian tank steamer Beiridge struck a mine today and was beached at Walmer to save her from sinking.

RESERVES ON THE SAME BASIS AS ACTIVE ARMY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 19. — General Joffre today issued an order saying: "Now that reserve regiments have acquired special fighting ability, they henceforth will be put on the same basis as the active army." The designation of "reserves" has been suppressed.

ADVANCE TO BE EXPECTED IN PRICE OF JELLIES AND JAMS

Finance Minister to be Asked to Exempt Bananas From New Levy

IS FOOD FOR THE POOR

By way of a change that is quite satisfactory to the consumer, the price of sugar has not advanced for several days. The retail price at the present time is 8 cents per pound.

One of the chief reasons for recent advances is due to the fact that freight rates on raw sugar from Cuba to New York have ascended since the middle of January from 8 cents to 21 cents per hundred. This was owing to the British admiralty requiring so many ships for its use, thereby creating a scarcity of tonnage when the Cuban crop came in.

If sugar maintains its high price, jams, jellies and all kinds of preserved goods will go up. Last year manufacturers of these goods used much cheaper sugar than will be possible this year—$2.50 per hundred pounds less than at present. This year's marmalade has been made with dear sugar, so it seems inevitable that the delicacies in question will soon cost more.

Cocoa has advanced on the primary markets lately, but the retail price remains the same for the present. The heavy buying by European firms has caused the increase. Cocoa is a food with a high value and the nations at war are anxious to have plenty on hand.

Means Loss of Cheap Food.

An effort is being made to have bananas marked off from the new tax rates. A statement setting forth the facts bearing on the banana trade will be forwarded to the minister of finance with the request that before the new revenue act is finally ratified, he go into the matter thoroughly to see whether the interests of Canadian consumers would not be better served by placing bananas with other foodstuffs exempt from the new levy. The general grounds on which opposition is based is that the tax would result in a loss of cheap food for the poor and a further decrease in banana importation which would increase very materially the present cost of this food. A very small proportion of bananas are consumed by the rich, in fact ninety per cent. of the imports of this food are consumed by the poor.

It was proposed some time ago to impose a banana tax in the United States but after the question had been thoroughly discussed by press and people as to its bearing on the cost of living, it was abandoned.

The banana is a highly nutritive food and contains a greater portion of flesh forming elements than either apples or oranges. In brief the opposition to the tax is urged because it means a tax on the food of the poor who are least able to pay it.

POLES

And Postholes Are Dealt With at Arbitration

Considerable general evidence was obtained this morning at the arbitration proceedings, dealing principally with the poles of the Peterborough Light and Power Company. A. J. Fife, of the company was placed in the stand first and testified to the length of time required to dig post holes. He figured that postholes could not be dug in Peterborough under one dollar.

With regard to peeling poles Mr. Fife said 2½ cents per linear foot was about the minimum cost. To test the cost of peeling poles he had experimented in the company's pole yard and found that 30, 40 and 50 foot poles cost approximately 2 1-16 cents per foot to peel.

Did What He Was Told.

Mr. Cowan went after Mr. Fife vigorously, questioning him about what information he had supplied to Mr. Jeffrey. Mr. Fife stated plainly that he had furnished only what information he had been authorized to by Mr. W. H. Munro.

Q.—How long was Mr. Jeffrey driving over the system inspecting poles?

A.—About four days.

Mr. Cowan—Surely it does not take four days to drive over the pole system of Peterborough.

Mr. Hillman, foreman of the company, who had charge of the work of peeling poles in the pole yard was questioned closely by Mr. Cowan on the time it consumed. There was half an hour of time which Mr. Hillman could not account for.

He made another test on the order of Mr. Fife. His record was turned in on the order file. Mr. Fife made out the time card. They peeled 440 poles. He turned in the record on a time card. The pole yard was cleaned out on instructions of Mr. Fife and ties made out of them.

Mr. Cowan requested the arbitrators to make an inspection of the pole yard and the two power stations. He felt that the arbitrators should view the contents of each.

Data Was Not Complete.

Mr. Hawkins was put in the box and asked by Mr. Tilley what he thought of the methods used in arriving at the labor costs. Much of it was correct but to draw any additional information from it was impossible owing to a lot of data that was entirely lacking in the records produced. With regard to shaving poles an opinion could not be formed unless the length of pole was furnished.

Some poles in the yard of the company were very undesirable, a number of good ones, fair ones and about what one might expect to find in an ordinary pole yard.

Examined by Mr. Cowan, he was asked to estimate what it would cost to erect 2100 poles, and how he would proceed about it. He would first go to his records to see what a reasonable cost would be. It was never done on the basis of so much per foot.

HIS MAJESTY REVIEWING CANADA'S FIGHTING MEN.

On the eve of their leaving England for the area of hostilities, His Majesty King George reviewed the whole of the Canadians quartered on Salisbury Plain, and in the townships and hamlets round about. This was the second time his Majesty had shown his regard for the forces sent by the Dominion to the motherland, in paying them a personal visit of inspection.

At the head of the column were the Canadian Horse Artillery, followed in order by the Dragoons and Strathcona's Horse. The former looked very fine in yellow close-fitting oilskins, while the latter wore their Stetson hats. The horses no longer limped from their sufferings from the privations of a British winter, but were curvetting and prancing to the strain of the martial music, while the swords of their riders gleamed bright in the sunshine.

Following came the Canadian cyclist corps, with rifles strapped to their machines; then more artillery, and after them the Canadian Engineers, with Col. Armstrong at the head. The infantry were the next; first the men of Ontario, then Col. Turner, looking fresh and fit, in spite of a recent spill, riding a little ahead of the Highlanders.

GROUND GAINED HELD WITHOUT DIFFICULTY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 19. — A report on the progress of the fighting on the continent was given out officially in London today. It is the second of a bi-weekly communication on the operations of the British army in France, promised by the authorities, and it reads:

"The enemy has displayed considerable activity during the past few days, southeast of Ypres. Fighting on this part of the line has at times been severe. At one or two points the enemy succeeded in occupying some of our trenches, but they were driven out by counter-attacks. One of the enemy's trenches was blown up and a number of prisoners taken. Our troops delivered their counter-attacks with great gallantry in spite of difficulties entailed by the waterlogged condition of the ground around the trenches and bad weather.

"On the night of February 15th an attack was made on our line north of Ypres canal, and on the following night a similar attack was made near Neuve Chapelle. Both were easily driven off with loss to the enemy.

"All ground recently gained has been strengthened and held without difficulty.

"South of the River Lys our guns dealt effectively with the enemy's artillery fire, which has increased somewhat of late.

"Our aircraft have carried out valuable reconnaissances and they have also successfully engaged aeroplanes of the enemy.

"One of our aviators recently attacked two German machines in succession; he drove off the first, and left the second to our artillery, which brought it to the ground inside hostile lines."

Insurance Agent Meets Tragic Death

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

HAMILTON, Ont., Feb. 19. — Leslie W. Glenie, agent for the London Life Insurance Company, was cut in two by a street car today when his bicycle slipped and threw him under the wheels.

DEATH OF MR. BERT MARTIN IN HAMILTON

The many friends of Mr. Bert Martin, who formerly resided at 50 Aylmer street, will regret to learn of his death, which took place in the Hamilton hospital yesterday at the early age of 27 years.

The late Mr. Martin was well known here, being a member of the Park Street Baptist Church.

He leaves to mourn his loss a sorrowing wife, his parents and one brother, who resides in Hamilton.

The body will arrive here on the noon train Saturday, the funeral taking place from the residence of Mr. John Stiner, 52 Aylmer Street, on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock. The funeral will be conducted by the Rev. J. R. Webb.

The Hamilton board of control yesterday ordered the reduction of the city hall staff by four officials.

Mr. W. D. Bannister of Hamilton has begun suit against Mr. James I. Thompson for $1000 awarded him by the court for alienation of his wife's affections by defendant.

LOANS MADE TO CANADA BY LONDON

LONDON, Feb. 19. — "As there have een several statements made regarding the public borrowing of Canada in London during the past year," says the Standard, "we think it would be helpful to set forth what may be considered a fairly authoritative statement. During 1914 the total public borrowing in London by Canada amounted to about forty-three and a quarter millions sterling, this sum including just under six millions, being the approximate amount of installments received in London on the Canadian Pacific Railway notes. The total compares with fifty seven and three quarter millions raised in 1913, when Canadian Pacific notes accounted for twelve and a quarter millions of the amount, and thirty-two and three-quarters in 1912. The reduction in 1914 as compared with 1913 is, of course, to be largely accounted for by the crisis which broke out last August. As regards municipal issues, the borrowings would seem to have been about six and a quarter millions, which compares with just under fourteen millions in 1913, while the total issue by the Provincial Government came to just about £6,000,000, as compared with £2,800,000 in 1913.

On the other hand, a Times despatch from Bucharest says the Russians have evacuated the whole of Bukowina.

STORIES ABOUT WAR SUPPLIES ARE NOT TRUE

Horses Purchased by Commission Have Been Satisfactory

Ottawa, Feb. 19.—"The remount commission remains," was the reply of Major-General Sam Hughes to a question put by Mr. Robb, of Huntingdon, in the Commons yesterday. Mr. Robb read two newspaper articles, one stating that a number of horses had arrived at the Sherbrooke military camp through the agency of the remount commission under Sir Adam Beck, and adding that the Ontario horses had not all been satisfactory for cavalry purposes. The other article reported that some 500 Clydesdale horses had been purchased for the first contingent in Britain because the Canadian horses had been found too light for use by the transport section. Mr. Robb said that he was not prepared to sit quiet "while the remount commission was going around buying all the old hacks" and sending them forward for use by the military forces. He wanted to know if the Government proposed to dispense with the services of the commission.

"As far as the statement of the hon. member is concerned," replied the Minister of Militia, "it is without foundation. As far as the remount commission is concerned, it remains."

Gen. Hughes told Mr. Verville that a fair wage clause was attached to the contract governing the work on the rifle range and the camp construction work at Valcartier. Such a clause was also attached to the contract for the construction of build-

COST OF THE ARBITRATION

Is Placed at Between $1000 and $1200 for Each Day

To the ordinary mortal who never requires its aid, law is a strange, mysterious profession, aid of which in time of trouble they blindly seek with perfect assurance. The average person is incapable of appreciating or comprehending the intricacies of law and for that reason he usually entertains, even against his will at times, great confidence in a lawyer.

This brings us to a concrete instance of the substantial character and the importance of law. We refer to the arbitration going on daily in the city, conducted by two of the most learned and experienced legal lights in the province, to determine the value of the distribution system of the Peterborough Light and Power Company. Possessed of well-trained, evenly-balanced intellects, with the logical instinct highly developed, they are conducting a case that is of the greatest importance and magnitude, and of vital interest to the pocketbooks of the ratepayers of Peterborough.

In order to arrive at an equitable valuation of the plant of the company, and to determine what is a fair price at which the city should acquire it, it became necessary to settle the matter if possible by this means, namely arbitration.

Upon the decision of the city to adopt the hydro-electric system, they found it necessary to take over the distribution system of the local company. Special legislation was secured giving them power to do this, and the citizens authorized the spending of $120,000, part of which was to buy the system. The company, however, felt that the offer of $100,000 did not represent a fair price, and after considerable delay the matter was laid over to be settled by arbitration.

Some of the brightest engineers in the country are at the arbitration proceedings giving evidence, some to whom money is not a primary consideration in life. The solicitor who is acting for the company and the solicitor acting for the city are surrounded by these engineers, whose advice and counsel is invaluable. Like a general marshalling his forces, so do these lawyers marshal concrete engineering information for the purposes of using it to arrive at an undistribution system.

Costing $1000 to $1200 Daily.

Roughly speaking, the arbitration may be said to be costing the city in the neighborhood of $1000 to $1200 a day although at first glance the figures seem staggering it must be remembered that expert engineers and noted solicitors are not giving their services for a song. From authoritative sources this morning the Review learned that the three arbitrators, consisting of Wallace Nesbitt, K. C., His Honor Judge Huycke and D. A. Ross were each earning fees of $100 a day. Solicitor M. K. Cowan, for the city, and W. N. Tilley, for the company, would receive fees of about $100 each daily.

Mr. Strachan, representing the company bondholders, was receiving $100 a day

The city has three expert engineers, all of whom gave evidence, whose fees would approximate, it was said about $50 each per day. In addition, there were the fees of other witnesses, whose evidence was material, although not coming under the category of expert. Altogether, about $1000 a day would seem a very reasonable and conservative estimate of the daily arbitration expenses, for which the city will likely be liable.

WRIST WATCH FOR PTE. McLAUGHLIN

An enjoyable time was spent Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McLaughlin, 285 Concession street. It was in honor of Mr. McLaughlins' brother, Private William McLaughlin, who has enlisted with "B" Squadron, 8th Mounted Rifles. Mr. James Davis made a short speech and also presented Pte. McLaughlin with a wrist watch, and to Miss Ethel Bradley was accorded the honor of fastening the watch to his wrist.

A few appropriate verses composed by Mrs. A. F. Calder were recited by Mrs. Huffman.

After the presentation the gathering joined in singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary." Dancing was indulged in, and the company of over fifty couples sat down to supper at midnight.

General Manager J. Frater Taylor of the Algoma Steel Corporation, at the annual meeting of the board of trade of Sault Ste. Marie, stated that by next May the steel corporation would be turning out steel rails for South Africa.

BRITAIN STANDS FIRM.

GREAT BRITAIN'S reply to the United States is a firm statement that she will continue the food blockade of Germany. Sir Edward Grey's note is clear and firm, and makes it plain that where one nation breaks the rules and precedents of civilized nations, it is impossible for another to be bound by them. Britain has to protect herself and must meet Germany's challenge. The reasonableness of Britain's position ought to appeal to a nation of clear-headed people like those of the United States.

STATUS OF THE SENATE.

NOW that the political complexion of the Senate is threatened to be changed in the natural course of events, the Toronto Star, (Liberal) has suddenly developed an idea that the Senate is hopeless, and that when it is not mischievous it is useless. It is strange that the Star never developed any such idea so long as the Senate was Liberal and likely to remain so. In this connection, the Hamilton Herald, among the ablest of the independent press of Ontario, has this to say, and while we do not agree with it in an elective Senate, we believe that the Upper Chamber is a necessary part of our governmental machinery:

> "We do not believe in the abolition of the Senate. The Herald is convinced that if the Senate were abolished there would soon be a clamour for a second chamber to act as a check upon the misuse of power by the cabinet. Under our present system of party government, the cabinet is supreme. What we have is really cabinet government—an oligarchy. In theory, of course, Parliament is supreme; but in practice, Parliament means the government majority in Parliament, and the government majority does not control the cabinet, but is under the all but absolute control of the cabinet. Sometimes, though very rarely, the cabinet must yield to the will of the government majority as expressed in the party caucus; usually the rank and file meekly follow and submit. It is not good to have overmuch power concentrated in a few hands. If there were no Senate, the Premier and his colleagues would be well-nigh absolute. What is needed is a Senate which would be really independent of the cabinet, to act as a check upon the undue exercise of partizanship in legislation and administration. Such a Senate could be constituted by election for groups of constituencies, the senators to serve for fixed terms, a third of them to be elected every two years, so as to keep the Upper Chamber in touch with public opinion. But what is the use of agitating for the abolition of the Senate? The Senate cannot be abolished without the consent of the parties to confederation, the Legislatures of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and old Canada (represented by Ontario and Quebec), perhaps also the Legislatures of all the other provinces. As the Senate is regarded by many as a safeguard of provincial rights, it is extremely improbable that the necessary consent to its abolition could be obtained. Since its constitutional ending is chemerical, why not try to get it constitutionally mended?"

It should be observed that the Herald is a little astray in saying that the Senate could not be abolished without the consent of the provinces. As the Canadian Constitution is an act of the British Parliament, it can be amended or changed by another act of the Imperial Legislature. There is no such complicated and almost impossible process as prevails in the United States, where the consent of the states is necessary by law. Each state is, and was, considered a sovereign commonwealth. The Canadian provinces have never had that status.

WHY WERE THEY THERE?

THE REPORTS in the Toronto newspapers of the hearing of Carrie Davies say that there was a great number of morbidly curious men and women — a regular stampede of well-dressed women — who, overcome with curiosity to hear the unhappy story of what had led the girl to such extremities, had lost all sense of decency. When a policeman called out scornfully: "Why are all these women here?" there was no evident feeling of shame. The women who packed the halls, merely crowded, pushed, jostled one another in the effort to get a position of advantage. No men were allowed in the court room, but it was jammed with women. It is very doubtful whether the revolting details they were looking for will be forthcoming, but the fact that they were there shows what a hold such an affair has on the minds of many women. If women are to lead the race upward and on, as Goethe said in the concluding lines of Faust, there will have to be less interest in scandal.

NATIONAL CONTROL OF NATIONAL RESOURCES.

FEW NATIONS have set out on their courses with such a magnificent national domain as that which was placed in possession of the United States.

The experience gained by the republic and the policy followed in the administration of her wonderful resources, have been noteworthy, while the result is one of deep interest. To the average American citizen the policy has been costly, to the foreigner, instructive. The final outcome has been that, in a land originally permeated by the gospel of state rights, there has now grown up a vast and potent public opinion favouring national control of national assets. State administraton has, in actual practice, resulted in lack of uniformity in legislation, in interstate competition, and in the vesting in the few, of the property rights of the many. The ever-increasing sentiment advocating central control of natural resources has had its practical manifestations in the national conservation movement inaugurated under Mr. Roosevelt, and in federal legislation respecting forests, coal deposits, water-powers, and migratory birds.

At the present time, a further measure of this nature is awaiting the attention of Congress—a measure which aims to place migratory fish under the protection of the Washington Government.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

OUR EVENING CONTEMPORARY thinks there is something wrong with the Government because a few of the Princes Patricias are suffering from frost-bite. This kind of criticism is so petty and far-fetched that it is laughable. We wonder that the Government has not been blamed because some of the Canadian soldiers did not get their meals on time. We believe the soldiers got chilly once or twice, and some have been killed in action. Blame it all on the Conservative Government, is the position taken by our contemporary. This was the kind of criticism that prevailed in Peterborough when it was a village a long time ago.

BOTH Toronto and Brockville have had their little war incidents. Here is one that may be due shortly from Ottawa or Montreal, figuratively speaking: This city was attacked last night by bomb-dropping aeroplanes, and much damage was done. The noise of the explosions could be distinctly heard. Rumour has it that French are in revolt. Opposition at Ottawa has declared party truce at an end. Sir Wilfrid has called out the Senate. Later. A policeman investigating the back-yards, where the bombs dropped, discovered a small boy setting off jumbo firecrackers.

OF COURSE, the Toronto Star would have its little joke on the Globe and other morning newspapers who "fell" for that Brockville aeroplane story. The contention that morning newspapers have to poke about in the dark with lanterns for news when everybody is asleep, or ought to be, was apt. Still, does the Star recall a little incident, in fact, an invasion of Canada by way of Windsor, a few months ago?

IT IS THE BUSINESS of armies to destroy. It is the business of Canadians to build up Canada by buying goods made in Canada by Canadians.

WE HAVE HEARD a great deal about Germany's shortage of food, but there still appears to be plenty of German trenches.

French capture more German trenches, says a despatch. How long is this supply of German trenches going to hold out?

Lack of Tonnage.

(Industrial Canada.)

It would seem from what has recently been stated that the only remedy now for the diminishing railway returns is higher freight rates; in fact, the statement has been made that there has been a general downward tendency in these rates during the past few years. Is this correct? Our observation is to the contrary. It is safe to say that there has been a decided improvement in this department; as a matter of fact, the carriers are suffering more from the lack of tonnage than from rates. Our rates, so far as the carriers are concerned, compare favourably with those in effect in the United States. There are a great many factors entering into the operation of our railways which should be considered very carefully by the Board of Railway Commissioners before allowing a general increase, such as has been announced. There can be no possible objection to a reasonable return for the services rendered. It would be unfortunate, however, to allow a condition of affairs to exist which would result in the public bearing the result of a lack of efficiency.

Australia and the British Preference.

(Stratford Herald.)

Certain Liberal papers in the West are endeavouring to glean a little political capital out of the report that the government of Australia "has increased the British preference." Now the fact of the matter is that Australia hasn't touched the British preferential tariff at all. The customs duty on goods entering the Commonwealth from Great Britain is precisely the same as it was six months or a year ago. What Australia has done is to increase the tariff on foreign goods. In other words, she has introduced more protection. Are we to understand that the Free Trade Liberals of the West are in favour of such a policy here? And incidentally we may inform them that the Australian rate of duty on British goods is higher than that of Canada.

Merchants Not Sincere.

(Moose Jaw Times.)

That a good many merchants are not sincere in preaching the "buy-at-home" gospel is illustrated by the action of the Calgary City Council in awarding the contract for street car transfers to a Montreal firm at twelve cents a thousand against a local firm's offer at fifteen cents a thousand. With too many merchants the "buy-at-home" idea is supported only when it means "buy from me." When it means "buy from the other fellow," an altogether different view is taken of the matter.

His Name is Breitung.

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

The owner of the Dacia explains that he was born in Michigan, that his father was of Russian and German descent, and his mother a Frenchwoman. His name, however, is Breitung, and there is little question that he could be more easily elected for public office in Germany than in either France or Russia.

Fame of a Tailor.

The name of Captain Keayne has a secure niche in history as the founder of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery company. He was a merchant tailor and had been a member of the Honorable Artillery company of London, and his Boston company had to overcome the opposition of Governor Winthrop who feared the establishment of a Pretorian guard. Perhaps Keayne would have failed entirely had he not been "distinguished for his piety and benevolence." In the practice of his art as a tailor he ran foul of the laws for the regulation of business and was fined £200 by the great and general court for exacting more than sixpence in the shilling profit on foreign goods. He died in Boston March 23, 1656, and his will, in which was a substantial bequest to Harvard, is one of the longest on record.—New York Sun.

GOOD WHILE IT LASTED

I had a dream the other night
Of peaches, cream and honey,
Of autos, airships, motorboats
And wads of easy money,
Of swell resorts beside the sea,
Where everything was handy.
The ladies favored me with smiles,
And I was all the candy.

I didn't dare to pinch myself.
By instinct I divined it—
That I would thereby break the spell
And but a dream would find it.
And so I reveled in the smiles,
The coin, the fragrant clover,
Well knowing by experience
That it would soon be over.

I threw the speed gauge open wide,
I knocked the record silly.
I didn't stop for ditch or stone,
I jumped the places hilly.
And when the pace so hot became
The passengers all fainted
I dropped into a little town
And left the place well painted.

I can't recall exactly what
I had that day for dinner;
But, judging from results that night,
It surely was a winner.
I don't remember what it cost
Or where it was I ate it,
But I can tell you for a fact
I'd like to duplicate it.

How Unreasonable!

Many business men actually believe that spelling ought to be an accomplishment of the average college graduate. A young bachelor of arts was recently put to work running a small printing press in the back room of a banker's office. He was to set up and print a number of circulars to be sent out to customers of the house. When the work was finished it was found to differ decidedly from the standards of spelling set by the late Messrs. Webster and Worcester. The young man was summoned to an audience with his chief. The interview was not pleasant, and the young man showed as much by his face when he rejoined the rest of the office force.

"What's the matter, John?" some one asked him.

"Matter enough," replied John. "The boss expects an educated man to spell just like a blooming stenographer."—Youth's Companion.

PRESIDENT OF C.P.R. TALKS

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy Predicts an Era of Marked Activity for United States in Near Future

IS CONFIDENT OF CANADA

Sir Thomas Shaugnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, in an interview with a representative of the New York News Bureau at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, New York, confidently predicted that in the near future the United States will enter upon an era of marked activity and prosperity, and he spoke in terms of quiet but absolute confidence concerning Canadian conditions and prospects. With regard to the reported intention of the Canadian Pacific Company to sell or lease its steamship lines, Sir Thomas said it was true that a compnay was being formed to take over their ocean steamships, but explained that the matter was one wholly of internal arrangement making for greater efficiency in the management of the company's affairs and one which will undoubtedly prove beneficial to the shareholders.

Sir Thomas said that his visit to New York was mainly in the nature of a pleasure trip for himself and his family, and it is his intention to return to Montreal in a day or two.

"Naturally I know much more about the affairs of Canada," said Sir Thomas, when asked to comment on business conditions in the United States, "but I can see no reason why busines should not be excellent in the United States. There are large crops, prices are very commanding, and the United States is doing a very great export business, notwithstanding the shortage of tonnage on the Atlantic. I do not think there is the least doubt that one of these days in the near future the United States will enter upon an era of very marked activity and prosperity. There does not appear to be one single factor to account for abnormal depression, unless it be that uncertainty about legislation and consequent uncertainty about financial plans have retarded the railroads in making expenditures that ought to be made to meet the requirements of improved business when it comes. It strikes me as an onlooker that the existing business depression in the United States is merely temporary and that there are signs of a return to confidence which was shaken three or four years ago.

"The remarkable promptness with which the Pennsylvania Railroad bonds have been taken up is a very hopeful sign and this will probably be the beginnig of similar movements on the part of other large United States railroad corporations."

Discussing the crop situation in Canada, Sir Thomas said: "We did not have as good a crop last year as we had the year before owing to a prolonged period of drouth, but there is reason to believe there is still a very considerable quantity of wheat in the farmers' hands, and although last year's crop is estimated by some at 20,000,000 bushels and by others at 40,000,000 bushels less than in 1913, the great increase in price which has taken place will probably enable the farmers to secure quite as large a return. On the whole, therefore, the farmers are likely to be in very good shape when they have disposed of their existing stocks.

"With regard to the current year, the area under crop is very largely in excess of anything we have ever had before in Western Canada. It is estimated by some that the additional acreage under crop is as much as forty percent., but speaking conservatively I should say we can safely say we can count upon a 20 per ly count upon a 20 per cent. or 25 per cent. increase in acreage, and this ought to produce a record crop. I expect to see an appreciably larger movement of grain from the West to the eastern markets and seaboard in the course of the next two months than we have had during the past two months, and, of course, this will have a beneficial effect on railroad earnings."

Asked to comment on the reported intention of the Canadian Pacific to separate its steamship business, Sir Thomas said: "What is planned is merely an organization for simplifying management. We are proposing indeed we are now forming a shipping company which will take over our own ships and probably some others. This shipping company will in reality, be a subsidiary company for the handling of our ocean traffic so as to keep this part of our business quite apart from the management of the railway. It is merely an internal arrangement — we want to put our steamship business in the same relation to the railroad company as if it were an independent steamship company. This, we are sure, will mean increased efficiency and prove beneficial to our shareholders."

Sir Thomas smiled when reminded of repeated rumors as to his pending retirement. "I am getting old it is true," he said, "but there is a lot of work in me yet, and the time has not yet come for my retirement. I have no idea of it."

Concerning Canadian conditions in general Sir Thomas spoke in terms of complete confidence. "In Canada even before the outbreak of war we had a lull which naturally followed a period of extraordinary activity. Then, of course, the war and all the disturbance that naturally attends such a condition of things as now prevails in Europe, has had a bad effect upon our business affairs. But Canada has passed through the ordeal in excellent shape, and I cannot help feeling that if the next crop is as good as we hope for, business will be very active in Canada again."

Referring to the application of the Canadian railways for authority to increase their eastern freight rates by 5 per cent., Sir Thomas said there was no doubt that conditions warranted the increase. "Our eastern rates," he said, "are based upon precisely the same conditions as those which prevail in the eastern United States. There the United States Interstate Commerce Commission found that the increase was warranted and it was granted. Our wages are just as high if not higher, and everything connected with the operation of our eastern roads is on just as high a basis as in the eastern United States."

Adding to his already published comments on the Vanceboro outrage Sir Thomas pointed out that the bridge was an international one on a line which was an important avenue between Boston and other important points in New England and the lower Provinces of Canada. This meant that a great number of innocent citizens of the New England States might have lost their lives if the attempt to destroy the bridge had succeeded.—Financial America.

The Bauer of Austria.

The most interesting of Austrian types and the backbone of the dual monarchy is the bauer. In social rank he occupies somewhat the same position as the old English yeoman, farming his own land and in many cases enjoying a far more substantial fortune than the nobility. The bauer has a strict social code of his own, mixing neither with the laborers on one hand nor the aristocracy on the other, is apparently quite content with his lot and takes pride in his ability to provide almost all the necessaries of life from the productions of his own land, even, in many cases, growing the flax from which his women folk weave all the household clothing.—London Mail.

Born to Fighting.

Mons began fighting. Caesar founded it as a camp and a short time later Cicero's brother sustained a siege by Ambiorix. Its most famous siege was in 1572, delivered by Frederic of Toledo, one of the distinguished generals of Alba. The siege lasted from the end of June to the middle of September; sorties and relief were vain; the town capitulated under the most honorable conditions. In 1691 the Marechal de Luxembourg attacked the town, inflicted great damage and forced surrender. In 1709 Marlborough and Prince Eugene attacked and carried the town after a siege of 126 days. In 1746 the Prince de Conti laid successful siege. In 1792 Mons was the first fruit of the republican victory at Jemappes, and in 1794 the Austrians were subjected to a crushing defeat.—New York Sun.

Total premiums paid from 1st February, 1890, to February, 1910 (20 years) $419.00

The premiums were then permanently reduced by the accumulated profits to $10.20 per year; this he paid for the past five years .. 51.00

WHEN ELIZABETH SCORED

Or a Case of Too Many Lovers

By AGNES G. BROGAN

In all his trying experiences as an editor Richard West had never faced so peculiar a situation. The two young men had burst in upon his privacy, accusing and gesticulating in an incoherent manner. After much questioning their cause of complaint was found to be the recent publication of the following astonishing communication:

Mr. Robert Wells and Mr. John Glegg of Woodborough announce their engagement to Miss Elizabeth Thornton of this city.

Twice the perplexed editor read the paragraph, then rubbed his eyes.

"This is out of my province," he remarked at last, "but I'll see the society editor about it."

"No use," snapped Robert Wells. "We went to her first, and she says the clipping was inadvertently copied from the Woodborough Suburban. Any joke goes in that home town paper, but how a thing like that could 'get by' in a responsible daily"—

"Such blamed carelessness might bring a pretty suit against your paper," hotly interrupted John Glegg; "made things hot enough for us in Woodborough, but it was rather too much to have it repeated when we came to the city."

In a spirit of relief the managing editor turned to answer his telephone. "Editor Daily News?" questioned an aggrieved feminine voice. "Well, this is Mrs. William Thornton. I called up to ask explanation of that vulgar notice regarding my daughter which appeared in last night's paper. Yes; unfortunate mistake no doubt, but I will call to see you personally this afternoon—at 4 o'clock."

Viciously Richard West banged the receiver into its hook. "So there is a Miss Thornton!" he exclaimed.

"There is indeed," Mr. Glegg remarked feelingly.

"And you have both, perhaps, been paying her attention."

"Well, rather," this from Mr. Wells.

"I can only express, then, my regret for the occurrence and suggest a public contradiction."

"Contradiction," groaned the blond one of the two. "Good heavens, it's been rubbed in enough now!"

"If anything of the kind happens again"— vaguely threatened his companion, and the door closed with an eloquent slam.

Suddenly the editor's annoyed expression changed to one of irrepressible amusement. The smile still lingered as he returned to his work. But as the hour of 4 drew near and his clerk announced a visitor he glanced apprehensively toward the door and arose stiffly. It was only a girl who confronted him, however, not the dreaded Mrs. Thornton, whose important name figured so largely in social circles—just a slip of a girl with appealing blue eyes and a sensitive mouth.

"Are you the editor?" she asked naively and, uninvited, settled herself in the editor's chair. "I came about that engagement notice. Had to get here before mother, who will probably make a fuss. I am Elizabeth Thornton."

Bowing, the editor waited. "It was I who wrote the announcement," she calmly stated.

"You?" He swung about in unbelief. The girl nodded.

"It was one of my jokes," she said ruefully. "They always turn out the wrong way." She leaned forward confidentially. "Do you know what it means to have reckless impulses, Mr. West—doing or saying a thing you are bound to be desperately sorry for next day? Well, that's me. Let me explain about that foolish announcement." Miss Thornton's suddenly embarrassed gaze sought the toe of her foot.

"You see, I have known those two boys, Bobbie and Jack, for some time, and we've gone around a lot together, more or less. One afternoon unexpectedly and 'right out of a clear sky'—Bobbie asked me when—we were—going to be—married. Why, I'd never even thought of such a thing. When I tried to tell him so he insisted quite stubbornly that the marriage question had always been understood between us; said when he talked about it I had never contradicted him." Miss Thornton raised aggrieved eyes to the editor. "Now, wasn't that unreasonable," she demanded, "to be expected to marry a man just because one had not gone round denying being engaged to him? And that very evening"—she paused impressively — "Jack Glegg comes walking over to ask me when I'm going to marry him; declared I knew all along that the house he was building was for me.

"I had encouraged Jack in the building," Miss Thornton admitted, "because he's naturally idle, and I like to see him busy. But it seems Jack had told me the roof would never go on his house until he had the promise of a wife to occupy it, and, of course, any one would have advised him to put on the roof. So," she sighed, "it ended by both boys accusing me of falsely leading them on while being engaged to the other, and when I emphatically denied this to each they settled back comfortably, believing me to be still their 'own betrothed.'" Miss Elizabeth Thornton laughed.

"It was all so perfectly ridiculous," she continued, "that I decided to give them enough of the subject and wrote that silly notice, hurrying it off to their home town paper to greet them when they arrived. Woodborough enjoys publishing amusing personalities, and I expected the affair to end in a laugh." She regarded the editor accusingly. "But, oh, when the awful thing came out in your paper!" Miss Thornton threw out her hands. "Now I'm afraid—for you," she said.

Richard West followed the girl to the door and then surprised himself by continuing to follow into the elevator and on down to the street, where he stood an unnecessary length of time assuring her of his regret and of his ability to soothe the ruffled feelings of her mother. Again, in his office he stooped to pick up a bunch of faded violets which had fallen from the girl's belt and to place them carefully in his desk. Then he leaned back in his chair, falling into a pleasant reverie. Each fragrant breath from the violets seemed to bring back in an indefinable way the piquant charm of the girl's presence—that one laughing gleam from her bluebell eyes. And so for days the winsome face haunted his memory.

Richard West formed a habit of gazing eagerly down at the passersby or of falling into brown studies before his desk. Then, one day, the girl's well remembered name caught his eye, seeming to stand out in glowing letters upon the social column of his own paper. When he had read the passage a second time he summoned the social editor.

"Let me know," he requested, "if this announcement has been duly authorized." The social editor peered through her glasses.

"The engagement of Miss Elizabeth Thornton to Mr. Robert Wells," she quoted. "Oh, yes, that is correct! The notice was copied by request from a Beechwood paper. Miss Thornton has been a guest at the Balmoral, returning this week, as the notice says, to be married in the city. I will send you the original copy."

Swiftly the editor's practiced eye scanned the bold signature, "Authorized for publication by Robert Wells." Undecidedly his hand went out toward the telephone. Then, as if in answer to his thought, the office door was opened to admit a small figure.

"May I come in?" asked a diffident voice. Richard West's heretofore well behaved heart beat a rapid tattoo as the vision in blue advanced to his side.

"I did not think you would do it again," she reproached him. In silent exoneration he handed to her the original signed slip of the disturbing announcement, watching in vast relief as rebellious color flooded the girl's indignant face.

"It is just as I thought," she cried. "Robert Wells wrote the wretched thing for revenge.

"And the fact stated is not true?"

Miss Thornton scorned the eager question. "I was having such a lovely time," she said—"dancing, driving, tennis! Now he has spoiled it all. If I had leprosy I could not be more avoided. 'Returning to be married in the city,'" she mocked. "I'll never be married as long as I live. This time you are not to blame, and I came down to scold you."

"One might be driven to second offense," he told her, "for the pleasure of seeing you once more."

"You may see me again sooner than you expect," she laughed, and her prophecy came true.

It was a flushed and beautiful young woman of flashing eye who burst in upon him one gloriously memorable morning.

"I hope I'm in time," she began breathlessly and waving aloft a paper. Grandmother read it last night in the Farm Gazette."

With that glowing face so near his own, it was rather difficult at first to grasp the significance of this latest message, but presently Richard West realized that "Miss Elizabeth Thornton was again reported engaged. Mr. John Glegg this time figuring as the fortunate bridegroom elect."

"Isn't it contemptible?" Miss Thornton glanced distractingly through a floating strand of hair. "You see, they have agreed together to get—even. Oh, I wish"— The resonant voice broke tremulously as the girl turned to the window.

Richard West followed, shaken, between a desire for deep sympathy and a desire for helpless laughter, wondering at the mighty emotion which surged within him at the sight of two very genuine tears creeping down the girl's averted cheek. Tightly his hand closed over hers.

"It has all been so childishly foolish," she murmured.

"Perhaps it has," the man answered gently, "but I'm afraid that I cannot be sorry, Elizabeth"—he paused, and the name was allowed to pass.

"I can't be sorry because the 'foolishness' brought you to me, and I can't be quite sorry for your tears. Tears prove the existence of a heart, and if you have one—if—I—have—I want it—to keep forever, Elizabeth."

Silence in the office while the telephone bell rang unheard; then Richard West rushed over to his desk to pen a hasty line.

"There," he cried triumphantly; "that goes into the paper tonight, and I think, dear, you've scored the boys there."

Glancing over her lover's shoulder the girl read aloud: "The engagement is announced of Miss Elizabeth Thornton to Mr. Richard West. Wedding to take place next month."

Tenderly her eyes sought those of the editor. "Authorized for publication by Elizabeth Thornton," she said.

Rheumatism
A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It.

In the spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally, I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvellous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, understand, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer any longer when positive relief is thus offered you free? Don't delay. Write today.

CHARMING PARTY GOWN.

From now until Lent society will make the best of its time. For the dances, dinners and theater parties with which the days before the penitential season will be crowded, the gown pictured here is a charming model. It is of pale green crepe. The gathered tunic is attached to the skirt on the hips. The smart sleeveless effect is used for one shoulder, which is draped with white lace and net and garlanded with pink roses. The girdle is of sequin embroidered net.

Parker's First Stories.

Gilbert Parker said of his first attempt at authorship: "I went to Archibald Forbes, with whom I was acquainted, to have him give me a note to the Macmillans, as I wanted to see whether they would not bring out a book of short stories for me. He read the stories and then invited me around to dine to give me the letter of introduction and the opinion of the stories. 'I have read your sketches,' he said after dinner, 'and I must say this of them—I have never seen such a fine collection of titles in my life.'

"'There, don't say another word, Mr. Forbes,' I said. 'I understand perfectly. Each title suggests a complete idea which the story fails to carry out. I understand perfectly.' Thereupon I went home and burned every one of them. Then I sat down and wrote the first of the 'Pierre' series, which was the beginning of what success I ever had."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Obesity.

We are all better off for a proper amount of fat. Adipose tissue is a poor conductor of heat and so prevents the bodily heat from passing off too rapidly. Moreover, in case of illness it gives the patient some reserve to draw upon. But when a person begins to suffer from his fat, when he grows breathless and disinclined to move about, he is certainly beyond the line of safety. When a very stout person stops exercising the muscles begin to atrophy. The weaker they get the sooner they flag under the weight they have to carry. In that way a vicious circle is established—first heavy weight and shirking muscles, then, as a result of that, still heavier weight, and finally almost useless muscles. Although fat people are not always great eaters and many thin people eat a surprising quantity of food, it is nevertheless in general true that those who eat more than they need are likely to grow stout, especially if they eat a good deal of the sugars, starches and fat foods. On the other hand, the nitrogenous foods lead to tissue waste. That is why physicians sometimes treat cases of extreme obesity by a meat diet. Anything that increases oxidation tends to lessen fat, and therefore stout people should practice deep breathing in order that the body may burn up its waste materials rapidly. If ordinary exercise, even walking, has grown intolerable, you can breathe deeply while you are sitting still. The treatment of corpulence with medicines should always be directed by a physician, for there is danger in experimenting.

Good Form

Correct Table Service.

Many of the niceties of table service which busy housewives are apt to regard as unnecessary frills are in reality distinctly savers of money, time and labor.

For instance, the custom of using plate doilies with a centerpiece for two menus of the day, reserving a tablecloth for the dinner table only, is recommended for its common sense as well as attractiveness. The doilies can easily be rinsed out whenever a spot appears, and in the season of fresh fruit a stain on a doily is not such a serious matter as the same spot on a large damask cloth. Small luncheon cloths, either square or round, barely reaching the edge of the table, are also a great saving of larger and more handsome table linen and enable the housewife to keep her table immaculate with little trouble and expense.

Daintiness and economy are also achieved by keeping on hand a supply of individual paper cases for the serving of entrées or desserts. When unexpected guests make the quantity of some particular dish an embarrassing proposition these receptacles often save the day. Every available morsel can be apportioned in these individual cases and no empty platter be visible as evidence that the supply has been exhausted. Moreover, even the simplest preparation assumes an air of elegance when served individually in a paper or china case and with an appropriate garnish.

Good Form Hints.

Politeness has well been called the kindness of small things.

Those who are kindest in their judgment are generally the least unjust.

Negligence is the rust of the soul that corrodes through all its best resolutions.

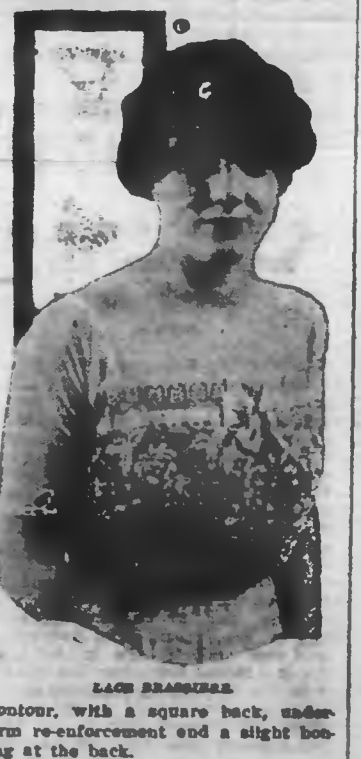
She who receives a good turn should never forget it; she who does one should never remember it.

It is impatience that breaks the machinery of life.

HANDMADE LINGERIE.

Handmade lingerie is expensive in the shops. The clever needlewoman will therefore find a dainty brassiere a welcome gift for women friends.

An especially good contour is given by a brassiere that is of fine eyelet embroidery with a closed front and crossed adjustable back with elastic at waist and shoulders to keep it in perfect shape. The front has a V contour, with a square back, underarm re-enforcement and a slight boning at the back.



LACE BRASSIERE.

Another design of hexagon net, re-enforced hooks in front, has a V neck, back and front, dress shields, val edging and no boning.

Especially suitable for chiffon, net and lace blouses is this model. It is of shadow lace attached to almost invisible sleeves of net, in which dress shields may be sewed. The brassiere is drawn up at the top with ribbon.

Cord and Tassel.

The cord and tassel promises to prove an important trimming accessory. In Paris the pearl tassel has already made its appearance, and later on there will be seen tassels in jewels of varied hues and also in silk in matching tone with the frock. This sort of garniture is particularly effective with the velvet costume.

Near Enough.

We read about the simple life
And how it is succeeding,
But most of us are overjoyed
To take it out in reading.

A joy it is to contemplate
A life of bread and reason,
But at this moment, for our part,
The thing is out of season.

We praise this method to the skies
And hear it highly rated,
But for our personal affair
We'll take it complicated.

In dew for breakfast duly mixed
With plain and lofty thinking

May suit the mental plodder.
But we will make our bill of fare

To live on Emerson and toast
May be sublime and filling.
As for that noble scheme with us,
It does not make a killing.

A sack of peanuts and a peach
A meal may make that's ample,
But, we confess, for daily fare
We do not like the sample.

Though we applaud the ones who thus
Their appetites may coddle,
We're mighty careful that we do
Not take them for a model.

A Neighbor Told Him To Take Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

If you want to know what Gin Pills will do for you, just drop a line to Mr. D. A. Yorke, at Bellrock, Ont. He will tell you what Gin Pills did for him, after he had suffered with Kidney trouble for 15 years. Here is his letter:

"I suffered for about 15 years with my Kidneys. I could get nothing to help me. The pain went all through my back and shoulders and down the calves of my legs. When I would sit down for a while, I could not straighten up again until I would walk a rod or more, the pain was so great. A neighbor advised me to take GIN PILLS. I did so and six boxes cured me. It is about two and a half years since I quit taking them. My back is all right; no pains and no more backache. I thank GIN PILLS for it all—they are worth their weight in gold." D. A. YORKE.

ENGLISH WALNUT

Its Cultivation is One of Canada's Youngest Industries.

The Persian walnut, commonly called the English walnut, was named "Nut of the Gods," 1900 years ago, by the Romans, and by them was distributed throughout southern Europe, where descendants of these original trees are now standing — some of them more than a thousand years old —lasting monuments to the men who conquered these countries. In many places these same trees are producing a large part of the total income. English walnut timber is very valuable, having a handsome grain and being unusually heavy, so heavy, in fact, that the green wood will not float in water. The wood is used in the manufacture of gunstocks and furniture, having a greater value than mahogany. Single trees have been known to sell for more than $3,000.

Realizing the importance of having a home supply of English walnut trees. France passed a law in 1720 prohibiting the exportation of the timber.

The Romans did not neglect England; for as a result of their invasion, many of these fine trees, hundreds of years old, are scattered along the roads and drives in every part of the islands. Some are nearly a hundred feet high with a spread of more than a hundred feet and bearing thousands of nuts for their owners every year. One tree is reported to be more than a thousand years old and to produce more than 100,000 nuts a year, being a chief factor in the support of five families. In England, by the way, it is customary to eat the fresh nuts, after the removal of the outer skin, with wine, the two dainties being served together.

The Germans, also, were quick to discover the great intrinsic value to their country of these trees, and very early formed the habit of planting a young English walnut tree to take the place of one which for any reason had been cut down.

Experts say there is no good reason why this country should not raise, at least, enough English walnuts for our own needs, and even export a few million dollars' worth.

As an ornamental tree the English walnut is unsurpassed. It has a light bark and dark green foliage which remains until late in the fall, being shed with the nuts in October and never during the summer. It also is an exceptionally clean tree and beautifully shaped, and so far as known has never been preyed upon by the San Jose scale or any other insect pest. This freedom from scale is attributed to the peculiar alkali sap of the tree.

The demand for this nut is increasing rapidly, as its great food value is constantly becoming better known. Its meat contains many times more nutriment than the same amount of beef steak.

The price is keeping pace with the demand, the growers now receiving three times as much for a pound of nuts as they got a few years ago when they were producing only a tenth of the present output.

Thus it may be seen that the planting of English walnut trees not only is an exceedingly lucrative venture for the present generation, but it means the conferring of a priceless boon upon the generations to come. Some places are considering the advisability of planting after the custom in England and Germany, where practically all the walnuts are distributed along the drives or serve as ornamental shade trees upon the lawns. There is one avenue in Germany which is bordered on both sides for ten miles by enormous English walnut trees which meet in the centre, thus forming a beautiful covered lane and at the same time yielding hundreds of dollars' worth of nuts each season.

Besides the demand for the English walnut as a table and confectionery delicacy, they are often used for pickles catsup and preserves, and in France many tons a year are made into oil, furnishing a splendid substitute for olive oil.

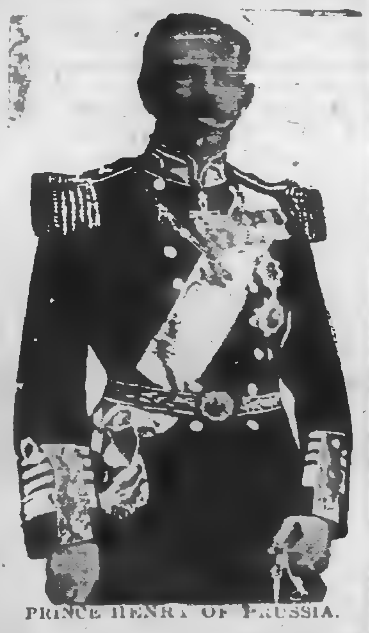
THREATS BY GERMANY UNFULFILLED SO FAR

Kaiser and Brilliant Staff Reported to Have Gone to Heligoland to Supervise Operations—Traveler From Germany Says Talk of Famine Has Terrified the German People.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—A despatch to The Daily Mail from Copenhagen, says, "The Kaiser, with Prince Henry of Prussia and Admiral von Tirpitz and representative staffs, left Berlin yesterday for Wilhelmshaven, Heligoland, and other naval stations, to direct arrangements for the blockade of the British Isles. It is reported that the Germans built 120 mine-laying submarines for this purpose during the last six months. Every submarine is able to carry more than a hundred mines, which are placed on deck so they can be discharged quickly. The weight of each mine is believed to be about 1,200 pounds.

No incidents, so far as is known, have yet marked the opening of Germany's submarine blockade of the British Isles, although it has been in force for nearly 24 hours. Nor has the British Government thus far announced its promised retaliatory measures.



PRINCE HENRY OF PRUSSIA.

Precautions, however, are being taken on this side of the North Sea, and although the German Government has warned the German people not to expect any sensational developments for some days, the regular cross-channel passenger service have been somewhat curtailed and altered. Otherwise the sea-borne trade of the country is proceeding much as usual.

A despatch from a correspondent in Amsterdam says:

"I learn authoritatively that Germany intends carrying on her threatened blockade by combined Zeppelin and submarine action.

"Great airship activity continues in the North Sea.

"According to latest information from Berlin, Unter Den Linden cafes and restaurants have been filled with excited crowds reading special bulletins entitled 'Der Tag'."

A Copenhagen despatch says that Norwegian shipowners do not fear the German mines, but should the threatened blockade hinder Norway's trade with Britain, Norway will stop all trade with Germany.

Germans Fear Starvation.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 19. — "The German people are more terrified by the possibility of being starved out by Britain than by the thought of final disaster overtaking their forces in the field. Bethmann-Hollweg's recent utterance that Great Britain was using barbaric methods in attempting to starve 70,000,000 men, women and children has had an effect on the nation that the Chancellor did not foresee. It has frightened the people, has focussed the nation's thoughts on the food peril, and by repeatedly accentrating his statement he has drawn the people's attention from the military aspect. The terrible crisis of starvation, laughed at a few months ago, is not now far from being a real thing in some of the country districts in Germany."

This confession by a German, just returned from Hamburg and Munich, sound a note of alarm which, though never heard in the columns of German papers, is frequently uttered over the frontier in Bavaria and southern towns. My informant had read about the potato disturbances in Berlin among women, and had no doubt they were really riots, although such description could never pass the censors. He has visited towns around about Munich, where he said people practically were starving and daily journeys by train and road to Munich to fetch food were necessary to save people from absolute starvation. In many of the small provincial towns in the south of Germany food supplies are quite exhausted, food shops are shut up and the whole responsibility of feeding the people is thrown on the military governor of the district, who gets supplies from the garrison, which may be miles away.

Berlin Cafes Face Ruin.

BERLIN, Feb. 19.—(Via London.) —While the proprietors of large cafes are pleading for an extension until two o'clock of the recent one o'clock closing order on the ground that they are facing ruin, the police are reported to be seriously considering the advisability of forbidding all afternoon cabaras and vaudeville teas.

MUTINY AT GHENT

Germans Sent From Front Tied in Pairs

PARIS, Feb. 19.—An official note issued last night tells of a big mutiny which, it is alleged, was plotted in the German army. As a result of the discovery of the plot, about 5,000 men, 30 of whom were officers, have, it is said, been sent back from the front tied together in pairs.

The accused men were sent back towards Brussels, Malines, Antwerp and Namur.

The mutiny occurred at Ghent about two weeks ago.

THE DOCTOR'S WIFE
Agrees With Him About Food.

A trained nurse says: "In the practice of my profession I have found so many points in favor of Grape-Nuts that I unhesitatingly recommend it to all my patients.

"It is delicate and pleasing to the palate (an essential in food for the sick) and can be adapted to all ages, being softened with milk or cream for babies or the aged when deficiency of teeth renders mastication impossible. For fever patients or those on liquid diet I find Grape-Nuts and albumen water very nourishing and refreshing.

"This recipe is my own idea and is made as follows: Soak a teaspoonful of Grape-Nuts in a glass of water for an hour, strain and serve with the beaten white of an egg and a spoonful of fruit juice for flavouring. This affords a great deal of nourishment that even the weakest stomach can assimilate without any distress.

"My husband is a physician and he uses Grape-Nuts himself and orders it many times for his patients.

"Personally I regard a dish of Grape-Nuts with fresh or stewed fruit as the ideal breakfast for anyone—well or sick."

In stomach trouble, nervous prostration, etc, a 10-day trial of Grape-Nuts will usually work wonders toward nourishing and rebuilding and in this way end the trouble. Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

LANDSTRUM IS CALLED

Last Line of German Reserves Ordered Into the Ranks

HANOVER, Germany, Feb. 19.—All German men attached to the landsturm or last reserve of the army, whether they had the previous training or not, were called out by decree on Jan. 28. The order applied to all men who had not completed their 45th year by Aug. 14, 1914, in the case of those who had been trained, or Dec. 14 of untrained men. The service of the men is to continue till the end of the war.

The German War Department is calling on the elderly men at the present time, and is keeping its eyes open to the future. The announcement was made by the Minister of War in a recent interview that the recruits due to come up this year in the ordinary course would not be called before the normal date in the fall. This apparent holding back from active service of good material in the shape of young men was decided on as a precaution for the future.

No popular sailor is so little known personally to the British people as Admiral Jellicoe. Yet the admiral has had an adventurous record and has three times in his career recovered from wounds that were at first believed to be fatal.

Admiral Jellicoe comes of a family of French extraction and his father was a sailor. As a midshipman he excelled his fellows in his studies and attention to duty and won nearly all the prizes offered on his training ship. He took part in the bombardment of Alexandria, fought at Tel-el-Kebir, and had a narrow escape from drowning when the Victoria sank. He also fought during the Boxer rebellion in China. As an administrator his career was no less distinguished for he served as director of naval ordnance and as controller of the navy.

A writer describes him as a slender man below average height with calm grey eyes and an air of perfect confidence. At the same time there is a lurking sense of humor in the lines about the eyes and mouth. In his small, wiry figure he resembles the late Lord Roberts.

Admiral Jellicoe has always been immensely popular with the enlisted men of the navy, by whom he is known variously as Jackey-oh-hell-fire Jack and also as Silent Jack from the fact that he seldom speaks unless he wants something done.

A pathetic incident to do with the death of Sergt. Frank S. Brown, of Almonte, officially reported on Tuesday to have been killed in action with the Patricias at St. Eloi, was the receipt a few days ago of the following poem from him entitled "Letters":

What is the call,
The bugle call,
The call that has no betters?
The silver call
That beats them all,
The music call for letters.

You can take a silver trumpet
And sound the dread alarm,
T. A. will spring to action
With his rifle 'neath his arm.
But if you want to see him jump
Or run like a streak of hail,
Just take the same old bugle
And sound the call for "mail."

No one who ain't been there himself
Can tell just what it means
To have a live epistle
From your home, tucked in your jeans.
A tripping sweet John Collins
To a thirst you wouldn't sell,
Ain't in it with a starving heart
That gets a word from Nell.

Or if the maiden's name is Kate,
Or Jean, or Marguerite,
A scented word of love makes
A week's dull drudgery sweet.
Why, any mother's soldier son
Who learns that bugle cry
Just stops his heart and holds his breath
For fear he'll be passed by.

His hand is all a-tremble,
His eyes stick out like pegs,
He goes all of a-quiver,
With the ague in his legs;
And if his name's not on the list,
He waits like a frozen bud,
Until another mail call drags
Him plowing thro' the mud.

He ain't no corerspondent,
And his answers may be few;
His opportunities are slim,
To write his "billet doux."
But when he does, it is beneath
A spluttering pine knot taper,
With a broken nib and an ink-stained pen,
On a scrap of cartridge paper.

Now, the moral is for folks at home,
Don't wait for him to write,
And don't just say, "Dear Tom — must close;
I hope this finds you right."
A good long newsy letter
Is the best that you can yield
In the way of down right service
To your Tommy in the field.
What is the call,
The cheering call,
That every other betters?
A silver call,
A longed-for call,
The music call for letters.

Madoc Review—The members of the Women's Institute, hearing that the boys of "D" Company, 9th Regiment, who have enlisted for active service, would be home for the opening of the armouries, took advantage of the occasion to meet the boys and give them a hearty send-off. The Lieutenant, W. Smith, kindly mustered the eleven soldiers in training. Mrs. A. H. Watson, President, spoke to the boys commending their bravery and then presented each boy with two pairs of socks and two heavy flannel shirts, also a $5 gold piece. This, she said, was not to be spent the first time they went down the street but was to be put deep down in their pockets so that when a time came when it might be badly needed it would be useful. On Saturday the executive of the Institute met Major Rierdon and presented him with a similar momento, also another gold piece to carry to another Madoc boy, Mr Ted Hill, who will also sail with the third contingent.

BILL TO ABOLISH DEATH PENALTY IS REJECTED

Hon. Mr. Doherty Opposes Abolition of Capital Punishment

OTTAWA, Feb. 19.—Capital punishment in Canada stands. Mr. Robt. Bickerdike's bill to abolish the death penalty was rejected in the Commons last night by the Minister of Justice, who delivered a lengthy argument in defence of the extreme punishment.

In the course of his speech Hon. Mr. Doherty took occasion to answer the charges in connection with the administration of Kingston Penitentiary, which were preferred in the Commons some days ago by Dr. J. W. Edwards of Frontenac.

The Minister, in discussing Mr. Bickerdike's bill quoted statistics, which he held "were profoundly significant," and which showed that out of the 79 men hanged in Canada during the past three years, 38 came from foreign countries and 27 of them from countries where capital punishment did not exist; and he pointed out hat several countries which had abolished the death penalty had recently reintroduced it.

D'Annunzio For War.

PARIS, Feb. 19.—In an interesting interview yesterday Gabriel D'Annunzio declared that within the next couple of weeks Italy will have drawn her sword for the liberation of her people in Trentino, Dalmatia and elsewhere.

D'Annunzio himself is about to open a campaign in favor of armed intervention in a sequence of chants entitled "Foretokens and Orisons." The first will appear next week.

CONSOLIDATE GAINS UNDER HEAVY ATTACKS BY ENEMY

Village of Norroy and Surrounding Heights Have Been Recovered—German Officers Are Beginning to Show up in the Casualties—All German Attacks Repulsed With Heavy Losses.

PARIS, Feb. 19.—The formidable nature of the French advances against the foritified German lines, across the north of their country, and in the territory of the enemy in Alsace and Lorraine is being revealed by the reports of continued success in capturing trenches and beating back many attacks of the enemy. After losing material points in his line the enemy yesterday made repeated onslaughts on the lines of the allies and especially on the newly-won positions, only to be driven off with tremendous slaughter imposed by the German fashion of launching attacks en masse and the clever use of cover by the defenders. Counter-offensive were taken at the proper time and the Germans were made to quail and flee before the bayonet.

The Village of Norroy in Lorraine, which was lost and partially regained a few days ago by the French, was completely recovered, together with an adjacent eminence, and the Germans were hurled back to their old line of trenches. The French War Office takes particular care to deny the German statement that they have evacuated the village, and adds that they have been driven out of it.

That the Germans consider the present offensive is vital is indicated by the fact that many of their officers were killed in the fighting. Hitherto it has been the custom of officers to remain in the rear of their troops when they went out to the assault, and to leave the prodding on of the men to the brutal non-coms., but now the officers have been putting themselves in the leading ranks. Critics are inclined to believe that this is an indication of the beginning of the demoralization among the German solders, and that they are no longer the splendid fighting machine that they were seven months ago.

The fighting yesterday was mostly directed to holding the ground already gained. In the Champagne country Wednesday night and yesterday morning two formidable German counter-attacks were repulsed in desperate fighting, the melee ending in the French troops chasing the enemy with the bayonet. Three machine guns and several hundred prisoners were taken in repelling these attacks.

The French troops clung with success to some ground which they have gained on the heights of the Meuse, near Eparges, in the face of a strong endeavor of the enemy to regain it. Progress here would enable the allies to overcome one of the most formidable obstacles and allow them to clear up many German positions to the Belgian frontier and beyond. The Meuse Valley is one of the important gateways of invaders to France, and progress along the banks of that steram would enable the valley to be cleared of the enemy.

North of Arras the French gained two of the German trenches by a surprise attack, and captured a bomb-thrower and several hundred bombs.

Five counter-attacks were delivered by the Germans near Roclincourt in the Aisne district, to recover ground lost the previous day. These onsets were all repulsed.

The capture of the southern peak of the Sudel farm by the French in Lorraine appears to have been a considerable success. This place, under the Germans, has become a formidable redoubt. The French captured a considerable quantity of war material, including a bomb-thrower, five machine guns, several hundreds of rifles, a large quantity of barb wire for entanglements, thousands of cartridges, much telephone apparatus, and other military utensils.

WILL CRUSH IMPERIALISM.

War Will Continue Until Allies Are Victorious Says Viviani.

PARIS, Feb. 19. — Premier Rene Viviani took occasion yesterday to declare afresh to the Chamber of Deputies that it was the determination of the French Government to prosecute the war until victory for the allies had been fully attained.

"The Government is determined," the Premier said, "to bring about the restoration of Belgium and to retake Alsace and Lorraine."

The Deputies wildly applauded M. Viviani's statement.

Premier Viviani alluded eloquently to the tenderness felt by France for the heroic fidelity of the populations of the provinces occupied by the Germans in northern France, which, he said, were "suffering under the brutalities of Prussian militarism."

France, he added, would persist until German Imperialism, which had endeavored to crush all liberty, was itself crushed.

TOOK THIRTY DAYS

In Preference to Paying Fine of $10

Edward Quinlan opened Lent with a blaze of joy. He tarried before the brass rail long enough yesterday to gather a happy jag, and, forgetting that the privilege is denied him, he permitted one of the blue-coated gentry to see him. The result was that Edward decorated the Police Court woodwork today. The charge was "drunk while on the blacklist," and the court sang out the "$10 or thirty days." The thirty days looked better.

Quinlan was not allowed to go without the Chief's "Where did you get the liquor?" He delivered a well-connected story. He hadn't been in Montgomery's hotel for a long time, and when he appeared at the threshold yesterday morning about 9 o'clock he became fascinated with a new bartender who claimed no acquaintance, so he remained till 8 o'clock last night. He was outside when taken into custody by an officer. Quinlan did not know the name of the bartender, nor were his descriptive powers very extensive. He knew little of him, save he was big and had fair hair.

ATTACKING FROM NORTH NEW ATTEMPT AT WARSAW

Conflicting Forces Are in Contact From the Niemen at Augustowo to the Vistula at Plock, and the Enemy is Trying to Turn the Russian Flank at the Northern End of the Line.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 19.—The Russian front, from the Niemen at Augustowo to the Vistula at Plock and Sierpec, has established almost continuous contact with the Germans, who are endeavoring to make a new attempt to capture Warsaw from the north and fighting has reached a climax of stubbornness at both flanks of the alignment. The Germans are striving desperately to break through the Russian lines at Augustowo at the southeastern corner of East Prussia and on the roads which lead from Sierpec to Plock. The German plan is evidently to turn the Russian flank and compel the grand duke to make a retirement, but the Russians are determinedly resisting and if they are able to secure a brief delay of the enemy they are expected to be able to solidify their positions and make them impregnable as they have done before Warsaw. It is conceived that necessity may compel the Russians to retire slightly, but general confidence remains that the Germans have attempted to reach Warsaw by the back door, but in the present instance they are swinging further east to the banks of the Niemen, to make a drive south.

In Bukowina the Russians finally announce the evacuation of Czernowitz and retirement behind the River Pruth to avoid being flanked by the hostile column which has been moved up the valley of that stream. The Russian withdrawal was steady and in good order and the Austro-Germans failed to gain any material advantage commensurate with the vast forces collected to invade Bukowina. The Russians are reported to have concentrated east of the Bukowinian frontier in their own territory, north of the Roumanian border, and are able to attack any advance of the Austrians northward in flank.

In the Carpathians the Russians are holding their ground and yesterday repulsed a series of obstinate attacks from the upper San river to Svidnik.

The militia authorities have arranged to allow the Brockville Home Guard to use Lee-Enfield service rifles for musketry drilling.

CORROBORATIVE EVIDENCE ON VALUE OF EQUIPMENT

It's Necessary to go to the Second Hand Shop to Replace One of "Peterborough's Antiques" Otherwise Called Arc Lamps

ENGINEERS HAVE NO "UNION"

All day yesterday and until a late hour at night the legal conflict to determine a fair and equitable value for the distribution system of the Peterborough Light and Power Company proceeded, save for two adjournments to supply the needs of the inner man. As the arbitration proceedings near the close they are growing in interest and excitement quite comprehensible in view of their importance and the fact that no small sum of money may yet be ordered to change hands. No one at this stage is in any position to forecast or express authentic views of what will be the probable outcome of the arbitration. All that legal reasoning and argument, and all that skilled evidence is capable of adducing is being brought forward by Mr. Cowan who is acting for the city in conjunction with City Solicitor Gordon.

Whatever way it finally goes the city is due credit for the fight that they are putting up.

A Hard One on Toronto.

While much of the evidence is not particularly interesting, it is brightened at times by the friendly exchanges in which the opposing legal lights occasionally indulge. Comparisons were frequently made by some of the witnesses for the city with electric systems in other cities. The city of Toronto street lighting system came in for some hard jabs at the hands of W. N. Tilley. The latter has no use for Toronto as far as its illumination supplied by the Toronto Electric Light Company was concerned. It was so poor that he wouldn't trade the local arc light system for it, and that was the worst thing he could say. Just as the night sitting closed yesterday he put Mr. R. T. Jeffrey in the box during which time he wanted to know if Mr. Jeffrey wouldn't take the Toronto Electric Light system over at a scrap valuation if it was going to be taken over. Mr. Jeffrey disagreed. Mr. Jeffrey said it was neither obsolete or antiquated as the solicitor maintained.

Mr. Tilley—No city would put in such a system now would they?

Mr. Jeffrey—O yes they would. Some cities prefer their kind of a system.

Being unable to get Mr. Jeffrey to agree with his views Mr. Tilley gave up.

Afternoon Session.

At 2.45 p.m. Mr. F. B. Brown, better known as "Wally," was called to the witness stand. He is a highly qualified electrical engineer, a graduate of McGill, with the degree of Bachelor of Science, and holder of post graduate degree also. He is now a partner in the firm of Francis and Brown, consulting engineers in Montreal. He was called to Peterborough to go over the system here which he did in company with Mr. Sifton, Mr. C. L. Howse, and Mr. R. T. Jeffrey. He had gone carefully over the inventory with Mr. Jeffrey and found it substantially correct. He said that an allowance of 50 per cent. was reasonable for depreciation on cross arms in Peterborough. The price of the cross arms was based upon what Mr. H. O. Fisk had told him they could be made for here. Mr. Brown found the wire on use in Peterborough in fair condition, but much of it with the insulation worn off. Insulation on wire often deteriorates in a few years. Twenty years was a fair average for Peterborough. Ten per cent. of depreciation on wire in Peterborough would be too much.

The system here was supposed to be a 32 c.p. system but the city was only obtaining 8 or 9 c.p. efficiency from it. No other city the size of this city was using such a system now.

Arc Lights Here Obsolete.

He corroborated the statements of Mr. Jeffrey that the arc lamps in use in Peterborough were of an old and obsolete character and it was a good many years since a type of arc lamp had been manufacturer. When you wanted to get one of "Peterborough's antiques" in was necessary to go to a second hand shop.

Mr. Brown said he saw a few of the company's transformers, but did not make a minute examination of them. The valuation placed upon them in the exhibit was practically correct.

It was impossible to buy such machines as were in the Murray Street power station now as they had been superseded by a newer type.

Examined by Mr. Tilley, the witness stated he had been in charge of construction and remodelling of electric plants in Hull, and Westmount and other places. He supervised the operation of the Westmount plant from 1906 to 1909. He believed a plant could be constructed and some revenue obtained in eight months. With the position Peterborough was in, they could start the preliminary work very quickly. There would be very little designing to do in Peterborough as it would be merely a destribution system.

Engineers Had Their Rates.

Mr. Tilley endeavored to get Mr. Brown to admit there was considerable difference of opinion among engineers in fixing depreciations. Mr. Brown stated that there were certain rates which the majority of engineers were guided by. Recent advances in the electrical world has introduced factors which did much to determine the antiquation and absolescence of machinery.

"Are you not approaching this subject from the standpoint of an engineer and not from the standpoint of a man who has actual experience in the operation of a plant?" Mr. Brown hesitated in replying, and apparently would have preferred not to answer. Finally he said he was approaching it from the standpoint of an engineer.

Q.—In getting at the value of an electric plant generally speaking, what elements do you use, regardless of whether it is operating at a value or less, but as a going concern.

Mr. Cowan, K.C., objected to this question contending it was a purely legal one.

Mr. Cowan asked the arbitrators if they would permit the question. They agreed they would allow the question, subject to Mr. Cowan's objection.

Some Important Factors.

In replying Mr. Brown said he was not prepared to say what he would include in arriving at his valuation. However the franchise value, the good will of the people and the right to do business were some factors that would be considered.

The questions put to witness by Mr. Tilley at this point developed into an argument between the two on finance, which kept growing more and more intricate, until Mr. Cowan objected on the ground that his witness did not pose as a financier.

Mr. Tilley pressed Mr. Brown to tell what engineers tariff fees amounted to for valuation work in laying out a distribution system. A fair engineering allowance in this case was five per cent, said Mr. Brown.

Mr. Tilley—I suppose you engineers have a union?

Mr. Brown—No, but I wish we had.

Mr. Tilley—What does contingencies cover in this valuation? What would you estimate for contingencies in a plant for things in the system that you would not see at all?

Mr. Brown—As an estimate for a new job five per cent. would not be a bad estimate.

Mr. Brown's evidence was concluded at 5.15.

Mr. Sifton's Evidence.

Mr. Sifton, electrical engineer, graduate of S.P.S., Toronto, in 1906, was called to the stand at 5.30. He reviewed his electrical experience which included the designing, laying out and operation of the hydro electric system in London, Ont. In August, 1914, he took charge of the system in Hamilton. He is now stationed permanently in London in charge of their hydro system with a percentage of his time being given over to his position as consulting engineer.

Could Erect Plant in 7 Months.

He agreed that there would be no difficulty in constructing a plant in Peterborough in seven or eight months. He was called here to investigate the apparatus of the system, and spent about five days in examination. He adapted the company's inventory and checked it up and assumed it was correct. He inspected the plant in November, 1913, and returned and inspected it in 1914. He examined 25 or 30 of the oldest poles and found them untrustworthy and that the city was taking great chances in keeping them up. From his own actual experience he could not say what the average life of a pole was. From his knowledge as an engineer he would allow eighteen years as the life of a pole in Peterborough. He had gone over Mr. Jeffrey's exhibit and thought that his allowances had been very fair, very liberal, and fair to the company.

Peterborough Meters Poor.

Mr. Sifton had nothing to say for the Peterborough meters, that is the meters which were manufactured by the Peterborough Meter Company. He had made a particular study of meters and averred that he wouldn't have them at any price.

Mr. Sifton told Mr. Cowan he had examined the Murray Street sub-station. It deserved all that the previous witness had said about it. It was certainly obsoletely equipped. From actual experience Mr. Sifton said he thought the allowances made for depreciation and reproduction were very reasonable, that is there had been no attempt to price anything higher than what it was worth.

WERNER VAN HORN

the man who declared war upon Canada. He is serving thirty days in jail at Vanceboro, Maine, for having broken windows in that town by using dynamite in an attempt to blow up the bridge between New Brunswick and Maine. In the meantime the Washington authorities will consider whether he should be turned over to the Canadian authorities.

Ottawa, Feb. 19. — The Department of Justice is keeping closely in touch with the progress of events in the case of Werner Horn, the alleged German reservist, who attempted to wreck the C.P.R. bridge over the St. Croix River. No official reply has yet been received, to the application of the Canadian Government for the extradition of Horn, the proceedings in all such cases being invariably slow. At the same time there seems to be no doubt that extradition will be granted, barring substantiation of claim that Horn was carrying out a detail of a general plot prearranged in Germany. In that event the straight legal aspect of Horn's act might be overshadowed by a question of its political significance. In the meantime the whole matter is being investigated by officers of the United States Government, and is being watched by officers of the Canadian Secret Service and of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

DIRIGIBLE IS IN TROUBLE

Second German Aircraft Likely to be Interned

LONDON, Feb. 19. — A Zeppelin airship, carrying a crew of eleven men, has landed on the Danish west coast at Bareese, near Varde, and is being forced by a raging snowstorm to remain there, according to a despatch from Copenhagen.

The weather is so wild, the despatch states, that it is doubtful if the Zeppelin will be able to leave Danish territory within the 24-hour limit.

The despatch adds that the entire Zeppelin fleet seems to be patrolling the North Sea, just outside Danish waters, with Count Zeppelin himself in command.

Another version of this story says four of the crew of the Zeppelin were drowned.

Loss of the L-3.

LONDON, Feb. 19. — The German dirigible destroyed by explosion on Fano Island, after catching fire, as recorded yesterday, turns out to be the Zeppelin L-3, one of the largest in commission. She was completed in 1914, and was 550 feet long, had a diameter of 61 feet and displaced 32 tons. She was supplied with four motors with a total horsepower of 720, and had a speed of 40 knots. Commander Prinz, who with his crew will be interned in Denmark, says the situation when the fire broke out was most critical. He feared that the bombs on board the airship would explode before he could get to the ground.

TO AVOID STARVATION.

Germany Driven To Submarine "Blockade," She Declares.

BERLIN, Feb. 19. — The German reply to the American note regarding the submarine "blockade" published yesterday says the steps taken are not against neutral commerce, but against Britain's method of warfare in starving Germany.

"All these encroachments," the note says, "have been made as has been admitted, in order to cut off all supplies from Germany, and thereby starve her peaceful civil population—a procedure contrary to all humanitarian principles.

"Germany, after six months of patient waiting, sees herself obliged to answer Great Britain's murderous method of naval warfare with sharp counter measures," it concludes. "If Great Britain in her fight against Germany summons hunger as an ally, for the purpose of imposing upon a civilized people of seventy millions the choice between destitution and starvation or submission to Great Britain's commercial will, then Germany to-day is determined to take up the gauntlet and appeal to similar allies."

OFFICERS FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

J. J. Turner is New President and Jos. Wearing Secretary

At the evening session of the Sunday School Convention held last night in the Charlotte Street Methodist Church the following officers for the City Sunday Schools were elected:—

President—J. J. Turner, Jr.
1st Vice-President—R. J. Kidd.
2nd Vice-President—W. Madill.
Secretary—Joseph Wearing.

The speakers were Rev. P. K. Dayfoot, and Rev. C. A. Meyers, of Toronto.

The group suppers in the Sunday school halls of the churches at six o'clock were well attended and proved an interesting feature of the convention.

City Sabbath Schools.

The report of F. E. Kerr, secretary for the local Sunday Schools was as follows:—

"The year 1914 was a fairly successful one as regards the Sabbath Schools of the City of Peterborough. The secretary desires to thank so many of the secretaries of the different schools for their promptness in sending in reports. In this regard the Anglican denomination was easily the first as a denomination. Mr. R. C. Braund has been on the whole for several years the promptest among the different individuals reporting. There are still some procrastinating secretaries however and a few who are not careful to see that their reports are accurate. This means that the secretary of the city association has either to guess at the statistics or go to some other person who guesses at them, thus when the secretary of a school does not report carefully or has not the correct figures, there is small hope of statistics being correct.

MR. J. J. TURNER, Jun.
The New President.

My report is:—

Number reporting having cradle rolls, 12, enrollment 619, home department 5, enrollment 250. Total number of teachers and officers 514, total number of pupils in attendance 4571. Number of teen age classes (18 schools) 118, enrollment 1296.

King Bonverd II.

A Legend of a Lost Kingdom

By F. A. MITCHEL.

Since the dawn of history the map of Europe has been changing. Many years ago there was a nation the very location of which has been lost, but it is supposed to have occupied a part of Austria and a part of northern Italy. There is a legend connected with this country which has been handed down by word of mouth for many centuries. Traces of it have been found among German speaking people and among Italians.

There was a king of this country—so the story goes—who was at continual war with a people living to the east of his territory, supposed to have been Slavs, whose descendants now occupy the Balkans. He appears in different versions of the tradition under different names, but usually Bonverd. The name of the nation he governed was Thungaria, supposed by some to have been the origin of Hungary.

While King Bonverd was hard pressed by his enemies a son was born to him. There was a prophecy that the Serbs would overpower Thungaria, but that a Bonverd born at the time of the conquest would re-establish the kingdom and subject the conquerors. This prophecy, which reached the Serbs, filled them with a desire, should they succeed in fulfilling the first part of it, to nullify the second part by either killing the infant who was, when grown, to work their destruction or make him a captive.

At the birth of the heir to the throne (Bonverd II., if he lived) his mother was unable to nurse him, and a peasant woman who gave birth to a man child at the same time was called in to give suckle to the prince. She was assigned rooms in a wing of the palace and brought her own child with her.

The woman, whose name was Josepha, was dark and her child was of like complexion, while the heir apparent to the throne was fair, with blue eyes. The king, when Josepha and her son, who was called Herman, were brought to the palace, called upon his councilor to make an inspection of the two infants in order that the peasant boy could not be substituted for the prince. They reported to the king that, since one was light and the other dark, any one who had seen them, knowing which was the prince, would always be able to judge correctly between the two. This satisfied the king, and he made no objection to Josepha having her own son with her.

Meanwhile the Serbs were slowly approaching the capital of Thungaria, their king, Boris, being a great general and matched against a commander who was his inferior, for King Bonverd was not a warrior and was obliged to yield the command of his troops to another. This man risked all on one battle and was defeated, and the whole of Thungaria was open to the enemy, who had advanced rapidly on the capital. Indeed, they came as fast as the news that they were coming.

One morning Josepha heard a din below and, looking through a window, saw the street filled with the enemy's troops. The prince was asleep in his cradle, covered with drapery of the finest texture and bearing the royal arms.

Josepha's own son was in his own cradle, made of oak and unadorned. Hearing a noise in the corridor and believing that the Serbs had broken into the palace and would murder the prince, she laid him in her son's cradle and put her son in the place of the prince. Then, passionately embracing her offspring, she went into an adjoining room that she might not see him killed.

She had scarcely done so when the nursery door was thrown open and armed men entered. In a few minutes they were gone, and Josepha went back, expecting to see the body of her murdered son. The cradle was empty, and the prince was lying where she had placed him in the oaken cradle.

King Bonverd was killed fighting at the head of his bodyguard, and all his courtiers who outlived the taking of the city were scattered. Josepha, carrying the prince, who was supposed to be her child, escaped from the palace and made her way to her home in the country. She dared not let it be known that the babe was heir to the throne of Thungaria lest the fact reach the conquering king and he should be killed. She therefore kept her secret.

Twenty years passed. Thungaria was a province of the kingdom of Boris, governed by a viceroy. Bonverd was brought up by his foster mother under the name of Joseph Bernstein and unlike his father, manifested a predisposition for a military life. At an early age he enlisted in the army of King Boris in a corps stationed in Thungaria. Being a fine soldier, he was rapidly promoted till at twenty years of age he was made a captain.

A few years later a young man came to Thungaria and announced that he was Bonverd II., king of Thungaria. He declared that when the Serbs had conquered the country he had been taken by order of King Boris from his cradle in the palace and carried to the king, who had turned him over to one of his officers to be dispatched. The officer, not relishing the work of killing an infant, had turned him over to a common soldier, who in turn commissioned his wife to strangle him. The woman reported that she had done so, but instead had concealed him and afterward brought him up as her own child.

Great changes had taken place since the conquest of Thungaria. King Boris had died and had been succeeded by his son, Boris IV., who was a weakling. The young claimant to the throne of Thungaria called upon his people to rise and throw off the yoke. It was quite likely that he would have succeeded in putting himself at the head of an army at once had not several of King Bonverd's councilors, who had been commissioned to inspect the prince and his foster brother when they were babes, still lived. They at once visited the claimant to the throne and pronounced him an impostor. He was of dark complexion, while the true prince was fair.

Joseph Bernstein was at the time serving with the army and had risen to be colonel. He seldom saw his foster mother, and she had never revealed to him the secret of his birth, fearing that he would attempt to lead a revolt which would surely fail, and instead of gaining a crown he would lose his head. Bernstein heard of the pretender and espoused his cause, thinking it better that even a false pretender should lead the Thungarians to liberty than that they should remain subjects of their conqueror.

A secret meeting took place between the two men. Bernstein reported that the corps he commanded was largely composed of Thungarians and he could begin a revolt with it. The offer was accepted, and suddenly the viceroy and all the Serb civil officers of the government were arrested. The news spread rapidly, and the people sprang to arms. Not only was a sovereign at hand in the claimant, but a military chieftain in Bernstein. The army through a long term of years—a quarter of a century—had become largely Thungarian and only needed a leader. Bernstein therefore found himself at the head of an army almost immediately.

But a force composed entirely of Serbs was sent to put down the rebellion, and many battles were fought. At first it was a losing game for the Thungarians, but under Bernstein's leadership they held their own until gaining strength, they were able to meet the enemy under more advantageous circumstances. Finally when their general found himself in a position to strike he sent his adversaries back in a rout, dictating terms of peace in their capital which restored the independence of Thungaria.

When Bernstein returned with the treaty at the head of a victorious army one of the first persons he met standing at the foot of the steps leading up to the palace, where he was going to report to the pretender, was his foster mother.

"Hail King Bonverd!" she said kneeling before him.

"What do you mean, mother?" he asked.

Before the throng that were crowding upon the young victor she told the story of how she had been his nurse, how she had put her own son in his place when the Serbs broke into the palace and how she had taken him away and brought him up as her own son.

At that moment an old man who had been a member of King Bonverd's cabinet came forward to congratulate the man who had freed his country, arriving in time to hear Josepha's story. He remembered Josepha and, looking from her to the man she had saluted as king, dropped upon one knee and kissed his sovereign's hand. The crowd, recognizing in the old man one prominent as a minister of their last sovereign, rent the air with loud huzzas for King Bonverd II.

The claimant, as became a sovereign, was waiting in the palace to receive the homage of his general, when, hearing the shouts, he directed an attendant to go and learn what they meant. The man returned and said:

"Please your majesty, they have acclaimed General Bernstein king."

The pretender, rising from his seat, hurried out and appeared with clouded brow before the king and the group about him. Josepha threw her arms around the pretender's neck, exclaiming:

"My son, my son; I believed they had killed you! Happy day that both my children are restored to me: Salute your king!"

The proof that the blue eyed general was king of Thungaria was so complete that he who had believed himself king was convinced and gave his adhesion to the true sovereign. King Bonverd made him his prime minister and treated him as a brother. As for Josepha, the king had always believed that she was his mother and loved her as such. He insisted that she occupy quarters at the palace and be treated with the respect due a queen dowager.

When the Serbs heard the story of how their late king had failed in his attempt to thwart a prophecy it became a universal opinion that what fate had decreed it is useless to oppose.

They were very much dissatisfied with their own king, and when later King Bonverd, yielding to his subjects' clamor for revenge at their long subjection, marched at the head of an army to their country they declined to make any opposition. For had not it been foretold that he would conquer his father's conquerors? So Bonverd entered their capital, took possession of their government and made his foster brother their king. Since their new sovereign had been brought up among them they were well satisfied.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M.SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

SOME persons rank high in their ability to take care of themselves by reason of their nerve, which permits them to let their friends take entire care of them.

When a man feels that he is quite able to take care of himself he goes out and proceeds to get into all sorts of trouble.

The things we are going to do seldom bear the slightest relation to the things we execute.

When you hear a woman say she hasn't a thing to wear it is a sign that she expects to surprise you by the magnificence of her apparel.

Undoubtedly the wise came by their wisdom through a multitude of errors and mistakes and cannot feel that they are ever done with them.

A pessimist is a man who has a grouch against himself and wants to transfer the ownership.

It is a game thing to be a good loser, but most of us would rather be game on the other side.

Being satisfied is desirable, but it is not a condition that is attained by a wave of the hand.

The Scrappers.

Jim Jeffries looks a-field and sees
A chap who does not aim to please,
Who threatens he will come across
And show which color is the boss,
Who has a scheme cooked up to tag
The honors and the juicy swag,
And who his way the thing to fix
Will open up a box of tricks.

Jack Johnson, he's the one who looms
And all this heated air consumes.
And what is wafted to the ear
Of Jack upon the atmosphere?
Well, nothing much, but just the claim
That he will quite forget his name
And be so quickly made to quit
He will not know where he was hit.

Each claims to be the big surprise
As back and forth the language flies.
Each claims to have a punch on hand
By which the other will be canned,
And each is certain that his style
Will carry off the major pile
The while his victim will remain
Too broken hearted to explain.

And thus each slugger in advance
Holds pity for the other's chance.
While on the air their boasts are tossed,
The advertisement isn't lost,
For neither knows he has a cinch
The prize at one fell swoop to pinch,
But each keeps bragging day and night
That they may make more suckers bite.

Reassured.

When first the comet wandered pale
It gave us some concern.
We thought that it had lost its tail,
But it has tail to burn.
With what expanse is now in view
It wouldn't miss a mill or two.

A Woman, of Course.

"He is a smart man."

"What is smart about him?"

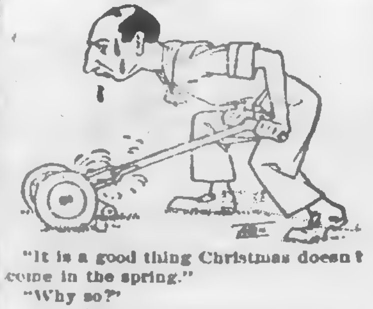
"He speaks many tongues."

"I know some one who can beat that."

"How many?"

"Just one."

Narrow Escape.



"It is a good thing Christmas doesn't come in the spring."

"Why so?"

"My wife would be sure to give me a lawn mower."

Couldn't.

"I have here a rain check."

"What?"

"Rain check."

"Then I wish you'd use it."

"Use it?"

"Yes; to check the rain."

Fooled.

"A fool and his money"—

"Oh, yes, I know all about that."

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—Export demand broader than ever whirled the price of wheat upward today after a break of 4 5-8c that was largely due to the deadlock over the so-called submarine war zone. WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 18.—May wheat opened at $1.58¼, dropped to $1.56¼, rallied to $1.58⅝, and closed at $1.58⅝. Export buying was the chief feature of the local market. All exporters bought futures, and there was a keen demand for cash. Offerings were very light tho. Receipts were 247 cars, as against 736 last year, and there were 370 cars in sight for today.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Feb. 18.—There was an increased demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today and as cables were stronger at a further advance in prices, a fair amount of business was done for March-April shipment and sales of No. 1 northern were made in London at 65s 6d, and No. 2 northern at 64s 6d, while bids from Avonmouth at 3d per quarter less were turned down. There is also a good enquiry for wheat for May-June shipment from this port at 1s 6d per quarter below the above prices, which exporters would not entertain, as they are not disposed to make sales so far ahead. There is no change in the condition of the local market for coarse grains, for which there is a steady demand for carlots. A firm feeling prevails in the flour market, with a steady trade passing for domestic account, and some sales of small lots of export patents were made for shipment to London at 46s 3d. Demand for millfeed is good and prices are firm.

Demand for butter is good and prices are firmly maintained at the recent advance in prices. Cheese is quiet but strong. The tone of the market for eggs is firmer on account of the increased demand for supplies and the smaller offerings of new laid.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 18.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.55⅞; No. 1 northern, $1.51⅞ to $1.55⅞; No. 2 do., $1.47⅞ to $1.52⅞. May, $1.51⅛.

U. S. Ship Bill Blocked.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Effectually blocked in their efforts to get the House ship purchase bill to a vote Democratic Senators yesterday agreed to take up appropriation bills and send the shipping measure to conference until Feb. 27, when it must take its chances of being filibustered to its death on March 4.

A Remarkable Stork.

The whale billed stork is found on a lake south of the White Nile. The lake has never been mapped and is bordered by extensive swamps. It is hard to tell where swamp ends and lake begins, for most of the water surface is covered with a dense mat of tangled vegetation. On this mat the whale billed stork builds its nest. It is a very rare bird and is known to the Arabs as the Father of the Shoe, because of its huge shoe shaped bill. It is of solitary habits, blackish gray in color, with wide spreading long toed feet adapted for standing on the quaking surface of a floating field of vegetation. Its habits are sluggish, and it lives mainly on fish. Colonel Roosevelt describes it as "hunting sedately in muddy shallows or standing motionless for hours, surrounded by reed beds or by long reaches of treacherous ooze."

"He gets a good mark in the toothbrush drill and stands first in the breathing class, but he doesn't seem able to learn arithmetic."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

SHE SPOILED HIS JOKE.

It Is No Wonder That Some Men Lose Their Tempers.

Busby—I see th' Turks have been kicking up th' sand around the Suez canal.

Mrs. B. (faintly interested)—Some religious ceremony?

Busby—No-o-o! It's war. They're fighting. The report from Berlin says they've licked th' British army to a frazzle. It looks as if the canal would fall into th' Turks' hands.

Mrs. B. (calmly)—I can't see what good it would do them.

Busby (leading up to his climax)—Why, they'd loot it.

Mrs. B. (innocently)—Of what?

Busby (triumphantly)—Of the hardware. They'd take the locks, of course. Ha, ha, ha!

A brief silence ensues.

Mrs. Busby (sweetly)—But there are no locks in the Suez canal.

And it wasn't any consolation to Busby to remember that he had no one but himself to blame.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Wide Range.

A young woman with an aspiration to shine in the chorus applied to Andreas Dippel, who has managed opera singers all his life, for a position in his company. "To sing in a chorus of mine," said Mr. Dippel, "you must have a good voice." "Oh, but I have one," replied the girl. Mr. Dippel led her to the piano and asked her to demonstrate her vocal powers. Sitting at the instrument and then swinging around, she smiled sweetly and asked, "Shall I sing 'The Chairs In the Parlor All Miss You' or something light?"—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

OTTAWA HAS NO HOLDOUTS

All Senators Pleased With Contracts — to Train at St. John's

OTTAWA, Feb. 19. — So far as the Ottawa Baseball Club is concerned, the holdout league has caused no worry whatever. In addition to Kubat, Smykal, Powers and Shocker, all of whom have come to terms, Pete Peterson, the big Warren, Penn., right-hander, has expressed himself as satisfied with his contract and will be ready for the bell. Rogers, an annual holdout, and Artie Lage are the only men who have balked so far.

It is likely at the conclusion of the hockey season Manager Frank Shaughnessy will go down to St. John's, Mich., and look over the ball park and town there with a view to holding spring practice in that centre. Manager Gardner, of the Hotel Sanita, Chatham, is anxious to have the Senators train there again this season, but unless the city authorities of Chatham can provide a skined diamond, there is no chance of going to that town. The Ottawas were treated handsomely by the people of Chatham both seasons they trained there, and the only drawback to returning another year is the lack of a good infield at the ball park. Two or three men pulled up lame last spring playing on a grass infield.

Then Faith Failed.

A Methodist bishop in the Northwest tells of a conversation he once had with a man touching certain difficulties of the latter's religious tenets.

"Bishop," said this naive Westerner, "I do not refuse to believe the story of the ark. I can accept the ark's great size, its odd shape, and the vast number of animals it contained; but when I am asked to believe that the children of Israel carried this unwieldy thing for forty years in the wilderness, I must confess that my faith breaks down."

NOT KEEN FOR ITEM.

"Newspapers ain't as keen for live sporting stories as they used to be," said a dejected-looking young man who hung around the portals of the office of a widely circulated publication.

"What makes you think so?" inquired an acquaintance who loitered near.

"I don't think so; I know it. I went into the office of the sporting editor upstairs a few minutes ago and said: 'Well, mister, I've walked a mile, run a mile, rowed a mile, swum a mile, and cycled a mile, and I've just finished the whole thing in one hour and six minutes,' and what do you suppose he said to that?"

"I dunno; what?"

"He said: 'Sit down; you must be tired.'"

Special meeting of the Boys' Cabinet tonight at 7.15 sharp.

A Dyak War Yell.

I was anxious to hear a Dyak war yell, and I asked the rajah to get a native to give vent to one of these sounds of gratification, heard when heads are taken by Dyaks without loss to themselves. A curious falsetto sound issued from his lips. It went higher and higher, louder and louder, something between the crowing of a cock and the whistle of a steam engine, and then it died down into a whisper. Two or three times he repeated this performance, which greatly interested me. It was not so terrible as I had imagined it must be, but the rajah explained that when heard in a chorus of thousands of men, all yelling at once, as he had heard it after successful skirmishes with the pirates, it was a most terrifying experience, and froze the blood in one's veins.—Wide World Magazine.

COMMENT

As You Like it

LOUIE SCHETTLER claims he is a free agent and can sign with any team he wishes. The Peterborough Ball Club say they have still a string on him. It appears that when Schettler signed last spring an arrangement was partially made whereby he was to become free if not drafted. It is understood that Curly Blount acted on behalf of the Peterborough Club when the arrangements were made. Schettler is a valuable man and the local club will fight to the last trench for him. Schettler has dreams of playing for Blount in Youngstown.

$2,500 IS A NICE tidy sum at any time and is more than that now, nevertheless Dan McCabe thinks it can be raised by public subscription. There is one thing certain, if the twenty-five hundred case notes are not guaranteed by fans we will take no daily ramble to Riverside Park this summer. The fans say they want baseball—here is an opportunity to see whether or not they are willing to make a little sacrifice to have it. The lists are now out and must be filled before next Wednesday. Get your name down alongside of a substantial figure.

KEEP YOUR EYE on that Intermediate team from Sarnia. Wiarton may look good but remember the Tunnel Town seven were thrown out last year and never had a chance to show their class. Both Wiarton and Sarnia are still in the running in the Northern League as well as the O. H. A. so the home-and-home games for semi-final honors in the O.H.A. will have a bearing on both titles. The first game is on Saturday night in Sarnia.

ONE BASEBALL FAN who was struck by the way Curly Blount combed his hair, remarked yesterday that if he was assured his esteemed friend Curly would be absent this summer, he would donate two weeks pay. Go ahead and make the donation. The "peppery" little leader is tied hard and fast to Youngstown.

EDDIE LAMY, who held down centre garden for the London team last season says he would rather play in London than any other city represented in minor leagues. Lamy expects to be back with Reisling if terms can be agreed upon.

Cupid's Sherlock Holmes.

A prominent alienist has presumed to put love on a scientific basis. He has issued a formula by which a doubting swain may ascertain without fail the name of his closest rival for "her" affections.

Here it is:

Carelessly hold "her" wrist, as if caressingly. Craftily place your forefinger on "her" pulse. Then name over in casual conversation the rivals you fear most. When you name the right one "her" pulse will jump scandalously. If it increases something like 100 beats you might as well quit the race.

To offset this mean betrayal the alienist has issued some hints to the fair sex on how to avoid nervousness. "Scorn gossip," he says, "and don't attend to other persons' business or worry over their troubles and you will be all right."

But he doesn't say a word as to how Dulcinea might have kept the fatal pulse jump from giving her away.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

IT often happens that when a girl marries her ideal the ideal doesn't stay married.

Good intentions are all right, but the great trouble with them is that they always stay intentions.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. William Westall of Millbrook are moving to Peterborough.

Mrs. G. P. Edwards, 7 Engleburn avenue, entertained about twenty of her friends at afternoon tea on Wednesday. A most enjoyable time was spent.

Mr. John Hore, Frobisher, Sask., called at the Review office this morning and renewed his subscription. Mr. Hore is visiting friends in the city and vicinity.

The visiting lady curlers from Belleville, Kingston and Toronto were entertained at a bridge party last evening at the home of Miss Morrow, Weller Street.

It was reported that Rev. R. C. Blagrave of Belleville had been invited to the rectorship of St. Luke's Church, and that he had declined the invitation. This statement was somewhat misleading, as Rev. Mr. Blagrave had been asked only that he permit his name to go before the meeting of St. Luke's Church officials.

Mrs. Alexander, vice-skip for Mrs. Rennie on one of the rinks representing the Toronto Granites at the Tankard competition at the curling rink, had the misfortune to slip on the ice yesterday while playing against Belleville and sprain her right wrist. Dr. Greer attended. The accident barred Mrs. Alexander from further competition although she remained and was an enthusiastic spectator today. Mrs. Bickford one of the spare curlers with the Toronto Vics subbed for Mrs. Alexander this morning against Kingston.

ings at Petawawa. Printed forms of tenders and contracts for military stores, clothing and necessaries were used by the department, containing the fair-wage clause. Much of the material purchased for the expeditionary force was supplied under contracts containing this clause. In some cases in order to save time the printed forms were dispensed with. In such cases the contract was not subject to the fair-wage clause. These exceptions were the result of unusual circumstances, not of any change in policy.

Sir Robert Borden, replying to Mr. Lemieux, said that the members of the first expeditionary force were supplied with cartridges. Those cartridges were not discarded by the British military authorities. General Hughes told Mr. Michaud that none of the horses purchased for the first contingent were sold at Quebec before the departure of the soldiers.

Mr. Oliver enquired what pensions disabled soldiers or the dependents of deceased members of the Canadian expeditionary forces would be entitled to. He was told by the Prime Minister that amendments to the existing law were under consideration and would be brought before the House in a few days.

The Minister of Militia said that no rifles were supplied by the Government to the Home Guard of Toronto and that rifles firing service ammunition were being reserved for the militia.

MUCH ACCOMPLISHED IN THREE YEARS BY CHORAL SOCIETY

The announcement that the Peterborough Choral Society will give their mid-winter miscellaneous concert next Tuesday in the Collegiate Institute recalls what a prodigious amount of work this society has achieved in the three years of its existence. This concert will make the seventh, four of which were given in the Grand Opera House, the others at the Collegiate Institute, by the kind permission of the Board of Education, who have done a great deal to help the society from the beginning. Had any person stated that in this city no less than three oratorio productions would be given in a year and a half, he would have been ridiculed. Yet it was done, "The Messiah" once and "Judas Maccabeaus" twice. The second production of "Judas Maccabeaus" was in aid of the Patriotic Fund in co-operation with J. J. Turner and Sons in lending the Opera House. The principal work this season is Elgar's "Banner of St. George." Others are the "Ode to Music," "Unseen Choir," by Stainer, and Balfe's "Gipsy Chorus," from "The Bohemian Girl." The "Banner of St. George" will be given in April next, only one number on Tuesday next, namely, the Epilogue. "It comes from the misty ages." The members of the society include singers from no less than ten of the city church choirs, and for that reason alone the organization deserves the hearty support of every citizen.

MORATORIUM INTRODUCED

Measure Applies Exclusively to Mortgage Payments

TORONTO, Feb. 19.—Three important Government bills were brought in at the opening of the Legislature yesterday. The Premier introduced a venue act amendment to allow loans of sums for seed grain purchase by settlers, Hon. I. B. Lucas brought down the moratorium, and the third dealt with the Toronto-Hamilton Railway.

The moratorium is confined entirely to real estate dealings. In no way does it relate to commercial paper or personal debts. All agreements of sale are included and can be dealt with by a simple application to the judge-in-chambers. Before proceedings can be taken to collect principal money this method must be followed, with the mortgagee applying. Insurance and interest will proceed in the usual way.

It will be retroactive, dating back to Aug. 4, or further back if sale occurred after that date. In case of interest default, action may be taken only for interest recovery and not for principal.

The debate on the speech from the throne was concluded yesterday and patriotic addresses from the representatives of both parties.

Although emphasizing the unity of thought and sentiment on occasion of a war session Mr. Rowell felt that the Ontario deficit was not traceable to the war. It was due to "the natural, inevitable result of treasury management in recent years." He made no amendment to the motion for adoption of the speech.

Taking up the points of Mr. Rowell, one by one, the Premier expressed appreciation of the lack of bitterness.

The war permitted of a national stock-taking. Adverse balances of trade were decreasing. Canadians should buy articles manufactured beneath the flag.

"If in Ontario we are not prepared to shoulder rifle and knapsack, we should be prepared to do all possible in the line of production," he said, amid universal applause.

V. A. Sinclair, of South Oxford, made an appeal for "a direct war tax assessed on every man through the municipality where he lived." Such a system, he declared, would be approved by all Ontario.

PARIS STATEMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 19. — (Afternoon Official Statement) — "Last night was calm. There were artillery combats of some violence in the valley of the Aisne and in the sector of Rheims. In the region of Perthes al positions conquered by us remain in our hands. Between the Argonne and the Meuse we captured a bomb thrower. In the Vosges we repulsed two infantry attacks to the north of Wisenbach."

Mr. Duncan Walker will be the chairman at the Canadian Club meeting in the Collegiate hall tonight, when Dr. Falconer will lecture. The meeting is called for 8.15.

GETS SECOND DECORATION

Winner of V. C. Gets Clasp to His Cross

LONDON, Feb. 19.—Lieut. Arthur Martin-Leake of the Royal Army Medical Corps has been awarded a clasp to the Victoria Cross, an extremely unusual honor.

Lieut. Martin-Leake won the Victoria Cross in the South African War and the clasp has been given him for "most conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty throughout the campaign, especially during the period from Oct. 29 to Nov. 8, near Zonnebeke, in rescuing, while exposed to a constant fire, a large number of wounded who were lying close to the enemy's trenches."

Lt.-Col. E. W. Alexander of the R. F. A. has been awarded the Victoria Cross for saving his guns at Elouges, Belgium, while under a flank attack, and for rescuing a wounded man while under a heavy fire.

Victoria Crosses are also awarded to Drummer Wm. Kenney, Lieut. J. A. O. Brooke (dead), Capt. J. F. Vallentin (dead), Lieut. F. A. Depass (dead), James MacKenzie, Henry Robertson, A. Acton, James Smith, Lieut. Neame, and M. Leary.

FOUGHT WITH SHOVEL.

British Soldier Killed Four Germans With Improvised Weapon.

LONDON, Feb. 19. — The Official eye-witness with the British forces on the continent describes as follows the re-capture by the British on Feb. 15 of the position south of the Ypres-Comines Canal, which the Germans had taken from them:

"During our bombardment previous to the assault the Germans took refuge in underground dugouts. Our assault was so well timed and sudden that when they emerged they found our infantry on top of them. Those who showed fight were bayoneted. Many surrendered, some crying for mercy and offering watches, money, cigars, and fruit in order to buy their lives.

"One German officer was bayoneted while telephoning presumably for reinforcements. Four Germans were killed by one of our men who was armed only with a shovel.

"Among the spoils of war captured was a large amount of dum-dum ammunition.

"Repeated references to the rise in prices and scarcity of foodstuffs, in letters found on the Germans, are significant."

MILESTONES

"Milestones," a play from England, which found much favor in New York when transplanted from British soil is to be the attraction at the Grand Opera House, Wednesday, Feb. 24th, night only. So much was it liked in the American metropolis that it ran out the season at the Liberty Theatre and it has been equally well received in Boston and Chicago.

"Milestones" is really a new species of the genus play. No penetrating analysis is required to reduce it to its component parts, three separate and distinct one-act plays. Each act is a rounded essay in the dramatic form, done with remarkable smoothness and naturalness. Keenly actual dialogue adroitly clothes deftly arranged plots that have naught to do with conventional endings. But there are separateness ends. In spirit, in characters, in atmosphere and setting the three one-act milestones are united into a new and fascinating dramatic unit. By means of it all the cumulative influences of past experiences, all the evolution that a quarter of a century effects in the individual and in the world, is made more vivid and convincing than ever before. Here, it is felt, is a true commentary on life. It gives not one phase, but several crucial phases in the lives of the same people in differents conditions.

The theme of each act, is as the theme of the whole play, "the younger generation." Advanced ideas clash against stationary ones. Youth runs counter to age. In one instance it triumphs. In another it succumbs. In a third the right of way is yielded it. Twenty-five years elapse between each act. The first is in 1860, the second in 1885, the third in 1912. By virtue of these leaps startling effects are achieved. The lovers in the first act are staid parents of the second and the trembling grandparents of the third.

The changes in attitude after each leap are fascinating studies, and impressive expressions of truth. Lives seem stretched full length before the audience. A single setting answers for all acts. Within the same four walls the little triumphs and tragedies take place. And still their victors linger about the scene of the events. Costumes of the 60's, the 80's and the present time are faithfully produced, and furniture and decorations as well, all in such excellent taste and harmony that they generate an atmosphere of their own.

SAN TOY MAY BE PRESENTED HERE

The musical play San Toy, a famous Daly production will probably be given here next fall by a company directed by Mr. R. J. Devey, who was responsible for the "Geisha," in the Earl Grey competition some years ago. The [illegible] of the "Yen How" and the dainty ladies' guard, "The Emperor's Own," "Motherland," and others will well bear repeating. The play was given years ago by the same conductor in England, but not as yet in Canada. Some years ago a professional company gave a performance here, but it is seldom that amateurs attempt such heavy work.

Indians Sent Their Share.

One of the most welcome subscriptions at the head office of the Canadian Red Cross Society recently was a check for $46 from the Indian Orange Lodge at Moraviantown. In his letter enclosing the money ex-Chief Tobias says: "I leave it to you to send it to the society that will appreciate it most as coming from an Indian Orange Lodge and their friends."

Although the various tribes of Indians in Canada are unable to take their places beside their fellow-citizens in the trenches, or undergo the hardships and trials that they will be called upon to go through, the many tribes throughout the Dominion may well follow the example of the Indian lodge of Moraviantown.

Railroad "Scout."

The Canadian Pacific Railroad has added to its staff a "scout," whose duty it will be to travel over the system and discover those employes who are especially worthy of advancement. Incidentally he will report those found wanting; but it is significant that his function primarily is not to make complaint but to make doubly sure that the deserving are recognized.

Ald. Max Lerner of London is seeking to have the municipal councils of Ontario memorialize the Government to adopt a forward colonization scheme.

Many Relatives at Front.

Madame Pierre Charton, aged 80, St. Denis street, Montreal, has 144 relatives engaged in fighting on the side of France in the war. Her late husband suffered imprisonment in the German town of Stettin, where for three weeks he was confined in an underground cell in 1870, being promoted in the French army on his release. One of Madame Charton's sons, Pierre, a professor at the Montreal Ecole Polytechnique, is a lieutenant in the French army and another is an officer with the Turcos. On August 10, when Pierre Charton left Montreal for France, the war experience his mother gained in 1870 stood her son in good stead, for Madame Charton had the foresight to provide her son with a special purse of unique design, in case he should be short of money. A local shoe maker was commissioned to make a pair of boots for Mr. Charton, and these had a special design. In the sole of each boot was one hundred dollars in gold.

A PERVERSION OF PATRIOTISM

Dr. Falconer Shows How the Patriotism of the German People Had Been Used and Misdirected

KAISER, A TOOL OF THE WAR PARTY

The Collegiate Assembly Hall was well filled last night where Dr. R. A. Falconer, President of the University of Toronto, addressed the assemblage on "A Perversion of Patriotism." The lecture dealt with Germany, and the speaker, after sketching the main points in the rise of Germany, sought to show how the patriotism of the German people had been used and misdirected so that the present terrible war had resulted. Dr. Falconer is a clear, forceful speaker; he marshalls his subject matter in a masterly manner and received very close attention to the very last word of his address. The lecture was under the auspices of the Canadian Club.

Of all virtues one of the greatest is that of patriotism because in it are gathered up so many emotions — memories of childhood, thoughts of home, affection of children, the heorism of our fathers—all the endearments of our human spirit. This noble virtue, so full of danger, so full of heroism is in danger of being counterfeited or having other extravagances which lead to opposite effects. To illustrate, the speaker likened patriotism to a beautiful garment that is used as a protection and an adornment, but that if the germs of some dread disease get lodged in its fold, the body is undermined, and the protection becomes a danger. Patriotism ought to be held out in the winds of the world so that it may be free from these germs. An enemy may hide behind it and use it or counterfeit it, so that we must be on our guard. In this position we see the German people led astray whose patriotism has become their doom.

A Disunited People.

When you go back to the beginning of the last century you will find Germany a disunited people, with its grand duchies and political antagonisms. Underlying these were certain aspirations when political union would be consumated. There was a school of younger men who looked for the time when their ideals of political consolidation and democracy would be realized.

At this time there was a great intellectual outburst. It was the time of Goethe, Schiller, Kant, Hegel, of great historians and scientists. There was political discontent, political dissatisfaction. The French Revolution had its influence and Britain's accomplishments were also noted. From 1840 on there were awakening movements that had in them the ideals of democracy. These were crushed by a king using the services of the most powerful statesman in Europe. The king was William of Prussia and the statesman was Bismark. They destroyed the aspirations of the younger men, and, riveting the military system on Germany crushed parliamentary desires. By blood and iron he welded Germany into an empire, into a unity, until you have the Empire from 1875 on.

Within the German Empire were many antagonisms. It was held together by dominant force. It was a great conception. The external production, the visible creation of Bismark so laid hold of the German mind and imagination that patriotism became perverted. The object of admiration became a corruption.

A Change Took Place.

The change took place between the '80's and '90's, but there were still memories or memorials of older days. There was the charm of the little town, the intellectual days when people lived the simple life. Even in those days there were complaints that Berlin was exercising too much power.

But lately a further change has been noticed and which began about five years ago. The speaker had studied in Germany in 1888 but when he went back there a year ago he noticed a new Hamburg and a new Germany. It was an industrial Germany, a Germany of great cities, up-to-date, regulated by a science we know little about. Intensity of purpose, foresight in detail were present and intellectual mind attrophied.

WOULD INSURE SEWER EMPLOYES

Ald. Green Makes Suggestion to Council

Ald. G. W. Green unearthed a "fresh from the factory idea" last evening at the meeting of the City Dads. It was to have all the employes, particularly those employed on the outfall sewer, insured. The chairman of the board of works stated that the Compensation Act does not apply to municipalities insofar as payment to funds is concerned, and in his opinion it would be a very wise move to have all the city employes covered by a blanket policy.

Ald. J. J. Duffus stated that he, as chairman of the fire, water and light committee, is working on the matter for the firemen. It was decided to have the city solicitor bring in a report to the board of works next Wednesday.

INDUCTION OF REV. F. J. SAWERS

Right Rev. J. Fielding Sweeny, M.A., D.D., Bishop of Toronto, officiated, assisted by Ven. George Warren, B. A., Archdeacon of Peterborough. The Anglican clergy of the district was present. Earlier in the day the Bishop was at Grafton to induct Rev. Mr. Lewis, late of Jamaica, as rector of St. George's Church, Grafton, and St. John's, Centreton.

NO CONVICTION IN LIQUOR CASES

Evidence at Lakefield Was not Sufficient

The town hall at Lakefield was crowded on Friday afternoon, when the cases against Garrett Spencer and Vincent Magee, under the Liquor License Act, for being found intoxicated in a local option municipality, were tried before Magistrate Langley. The case against Garrett Spencer was taken up first and after a number of witnesses had given their evidence, the Crown Attorney, Mr. G. W. Hatton, who acted for the prosecution, stated that he had no further evidence to offer and admitted that he could not ask for a conviction upon the evidence and the case was dismissed by the Magistrate.

In the case against Vincent Magee, the Magistrate also thought there was no evidence warranting a conviction and Mr. Hatton for the prosecutor, admitted that the evidence was not strong. After hearing what the lawyer had to say the Magistrate dismissed this case also, pointing out in a clear and concise judgment wherein the slight evidence there was against the defendant failed to bring the case within the wording of the Act and holding that the pool room at Darcey's hotel was not a public place in the meaning of the statute. Mr. C. R. Widdifield acted for the defendants.

REV. MR. BROWN INVITED.

EXPOSITION IS OPENED

Forty-one Foreign Nations Are Represented

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

San Francisco, Feb. 20.—The Panama-Pacific International Exposition opened today. Forty-one foreign nations and forty-three states and three territories of the American Union are represented.

The exposition stands today 100 per cent. complete, free of debt and with 41 foreign nations participating, of which 20 have built pavillions of their own. England, Germany, Austria and Russia, among the belligerents, are not officialy represented, although various of their commercial organizations are exhibiting. France, Italy and Japan are officially represented. Canada and Australia both have buildings.

The grounds lie on the water front, adjoining the United States military reservation known as the Presidio, facing San Francisco Bay, with the Golden Gate visible to the west.

Site of 635 Acres.

The site occupies 635 acres, of which 50 have been devoted to horticultural display. Liberal use of palms, shrubbery, vines and trees has been made to relieve and diversity the long facades of the exhibit palaces. At the far ends of the grounds are the athletic field and race track; at the near end lies the zone in which are grouped the amusement concessions.

Dominating the whole scheme is the colossal Tower of Jewels, 435 feet high, set in the central court of the Universe, whose Corinthian columns are taller than those of Saint Peter's at Rome. Each column is surmounted by the figure of a star, whose head dress is covered with "jewels," and from the tower itself depend 80,000 sparklets in all colors.

FLEW BRITISH FLAG THIS TIME

Lusitania at New York After Rough Trip

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

New York, Feb. 20. — The Lusitania arrived from Liverpool today after a rough trip, the vessel not being able to average over twenty knots for the voyage. She flew the British flag all the way over.

HEAVY LOSSES FOR FOE IN FEW DAYS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 20. — The afternoon statement says: "In Belgium the enemy bombarded Nieuport and the Dunes. His batteries were effectively countered by ours. Germans appear to have employed important forces in yesterday's attack against our trenches. To the east of Ypres, after intense bombardment of our positions, the Germans attacked with the bayonet, but were repulsed, and our artillery held by its fire, reserves which were to have supported the first line attack. German losses were very heavy.

"From the Lys to the Oise and on the Aisne, in the region of Berry-au-Bac, great artillery activity prevailed.

"It is confirmed that the enemy's losses in the campaign of the last few days have been considerable. According to statements of prisoners, a battalion has been destroyed."

GERMANY AND AUSTRIA COMPLAIN.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. — Germany and Austria, through their ambassadors here, complained to the state department today that submarines were being built in the United States for Britain and shipped in parts to Canada.

GERMANS MADE CAPTURE OF FRENCH HOSPITAL CORPS

PETROGRAD, Feb. 20. — Reports from Vilna, near the East Prussian frontier, received by the French hospital at Petrograd, tell of the capture by Germans of a French hospital corps with the exception of Manager Richard and Dr. Koppent, who were absent from the hospital. The entire corps, it is said, were taken prisoners. On a previous occasion, one doctor and several nurses, while bandaging wounded on the field, were surrounded by German cavalry and ordered to surrender, but a detachment of Cossacks arrived in time to effect their rescue.

PRZEYMSL AGAIN BOMBARDED.

PARIS, Feb. 20. — A despatch from Cracow says the Russians have begun to bombard Przeymsl with new heavy artillery and have driven the Austrians back along the Krosno-Jaslo-Gorlice line. The Austrians are reported to have sustained heavy losses near Dukla Pass.

SEAPLANES AND AEROS CO-OPERATE WITH FLEETS

Considerable Effect Produced on Two Forts and Two Others Were Frequently Hit at Long Range

FORTS ON EUROPEAN SIDE SILENCED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 20. — British and French fleets, it was officially announced here today, bomarded forts of the Dardanelles on Friday with considerable effect. The bombardment of the Dardanelles was renewed today, the announcement added, with seaplanes and aeroplanes co-operating.

The British Admiralty says yesterday at eight o'clock a British fleet of battleships and battle-cruisers, accompanied by a flotilla and aided by a strong French squadron, the whole under command of Vice-Admiral Carden, began an attack upon the forts at the entrance to the Dardanelles.

Forts at Capehelles and Kimkale were bombarded with deliberaate long range fire. Considerable effect was produced on two of the forts. Two others were frequently hit, but, being open works, it was difficult to estimate the damage. The forts, being outranged, were unable to reply.

ORDERED TO ENGAGE AT CLOSER RANGE.

At 2.45 in the afternoon a portion of the battleship force was ordered to close in and to engage at closer range with their secondary armaments. The forts on both sides of the entrance then opened fire and were engaged at moderate ranges by British battleships Vengeance, Cornwallis, and the French battleships Sufferna and Zouvet, supported by the battle-cruiser Inflexible and the battleship Agamemnon.

Forts on the European side were apparently silenced. One fort on the Asiatic side was still firing when operations were suspended owing to failing light.

CITY'S EVIDENCE NOW CONCLUDED

MR. SPENCE HAS NOT FORGOTTEN THE RECENT SLAM

The slam taken by a certain member of the Trades and Labor Council at Sanitary Inspector Spence has not blown over yet. While the identity of the party who made the allegation that the inspector's back yard was in a dirty condition, has not been discovered by Mr. Spence he intends to find out and unless some means is taken to have it amicably settled prosecution proceedings will result. To a reporter Mr. Spence said this morning that he had his suspicion as to the identity of the party who made the untruthful and malicious statement. He intended also to take steps to discover the name of the man who wrote the item which appeared in the newspapers.

"The assertions that I had the dirtiest back yard has gone all over the province and been printed in the Industrial Banner, which is the official banner of the Labor party," said the inspector. He was quite wrathy and determined and there may be trouble for some one yet. He added that the assertion that he was living outside the city, when his position was a public one, was absurd, in view of the fact that his duties required him to act in both the city and the country round about it.

No Definite Date for the Board of Arbitrators' Decision

The arbitration proceedings at the court house which have been in progress since two o'clock Monday afternoon came to a close at six thirty last evening and all that is to be done is to wait patiently until the arbitrators decide what is a fair valuation for the system of the Peterborough Light and Power Company. This may be in two weeks time, it may be a month and it may be two months. The arbitrators have all the arguments in hand, the prices placed upon the system and everything material to the arbitration and in the language of the street "it is up to them." If they agree that $100,000 is too much for the city to pay for the system they are empowered with authority to return to the city whatever in their opinion is excessive. On the other hand if they decide that the mentioned sum is inadequate and not a fair and equitable amount, they can name the amount to which the company is entitled. It is apparent the arbitrators have no small task on their hands and no small responsibility. Four valuations in all were compiled in connection with the system. The scrap valuation drawn up by the city amounted to $36,000, the

WOULD ABANDON THE INVASION OF EGYPT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ALEXANDRIA, Feb. 20. — Refugees brought here by the Tennessee state that the defeat of the Turks at the Suez Canal was more serious than had been thought. Djemal Pasha is discouraged, and is said to have declared his intention to abandon the invasion of Egypt unless a new army is forthcoming. Germans in Jaffa say that many German officers were killed.

ANOTHER NORWEGIAN VESSEL LOST

NAKSKOV, Denmark, Feb. 20. — The Norwegian steamer Bjarka struck a mine at 8 o'clock this morning and sank. Her crew was saved. This is the second disaster to Norwegian vessels since the German blockade took effect. The Bjarka was laden with coal and was on her way from Leith to Nakskov.

ST. JOHN, Feb. 20. — The South African liner Kwarra, which arrived here yesterday from Liverpool, reports sighting a German submarine two and a half miles away in St. George's Channel. A British patrol boat had warned the Kwarra half an hour before, and she changed her course and escaped.

ROME, Feb. 20. — Extreme parties in the Chamber of Deputies vainly tried at last night's meeting to force the Government to discuss the foreign policy of Italy. Serialists presented a proposal to discuss the budget of foreign affairs, but the motion was immediately defeated by a vote of 354 to 27.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 20. — The American steamer J. L. Luckenbach, from Boston for Bremen, arrived at Bremen today. The pilot who boarded the vessel at Ymulden was arrested, but later released on proving that he was a Dutchman.

CANADIANS OF MIAMI FORM CANADIAN CLUB

The Miami, Florida, Daily Metropolis, a copy of which has been received by the Review, has an item which reads:—

Sixteen former residents of Canada met in the Board of Trade rooms last night and perfected plans for the organization of a Canadian club, of which, it is believed, every Miamian or Miami visitor who has lived in Canada will become a member. W. J. Nesbitt, formerly of Peterborough, Ontario, was elected temporary chairman. Mrs. J. H. Northwood, who formerly resided at Chatham, Ontario, was chosen temporary secretary.

An organization committee was appointed consisting of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Nesbitt, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Northwood, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Law, West Toronto; E. R. Black of Guelph, Ed. T. Rae of Toronto, H. A. Stewart of London, Mrs. Anna L. Andrus, Whitby, Ontario, Miss Helen Vandevord, Toronto; and Mrs. M. E. Anderson, Cornwall. This committee will meet and prepare a constitution and by-laws, and on next Monday night will present the results of its labors to another general meeting of the new club.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1915

WHY DOESN'T FRANK HARRIS PROVE WHAT HE SAYS?

AN AMERICAN NEWSPAPER, the Evansville Journal-News, published an article recently which claimed that the rigorous censorship in England and France was due to the mediocrity of generals. The author of this article, Frank Harris, would hardly be described as a famous English author, although he is an author of repute, and has been editor of some prominent publications. He was educated in American and German universities, a fact that should not be overlooked in considering the bias of his article.

In a general way, there is much that is true in what he has written. Times of peace do not, as a rule, develop great generals. They are the product only of real war, in which their capacity is tried by the shock of actual battle, by stroke and counter stroke, and in all of which fortune and circumstance play a strange, flitting and important part. It is quite probable that a long term of peace would permit many men, ill-fitted to direct armies and without the capacity to seize the quick opportunity of a battle, to be at the head of a nation's forces. But this may not be true. There may be many a military genius in the army of a nation that has long been free from war. The way to find out the truth of this matter is by the reality of war.

So, when Mr. Harris gets down to details, one naturally looks for proven statements, and connected arguments. This characteristic his article wholly lacks. It is jumbled, assertive, extravagant, and untrue. Note the following paragraph:

> "But after all, it will be said the German army is suffering from the same disease. They, too, have established a censor, but no one who compares can doubt the fact that the German news is infinitely fuller and fairer than English or French news. The German papers have published full accounts of German defeats or checks. In consequence of frank criticism generals have been retired. Even the great name of Von Moltke has not protected him from condemnation."

We know from first-hand information that the German newspapers, while giving fairly full accounts of naval battles, have been very barren of military news. Owing to the fact that newspapers in Germany are forbidden to publish any article that is untrue, their war news is more censored and brief than that of Britain. A gentleman who returned recently from Dresden told us that the people of that city knew really nothing of what was taking place at the front, because the newspapers of that city were not allowed to publish reports. They contained naval news and plenty of violent declamatory editorials, but no military news worth mentioning.

Mr. Harris says:

> "From the beginning, the German leaders have shown initiative and attack."

That is true. Germany, in other words, has taken the offensive from the very beginning, even to starting the war and being the real cause of it. What Mr. Harris says of German efficiency is also true, but that German captains are superior to French and English has yet to be shown. Germany has taken the offensive, and her enormous casualties show at what a frightful cost. They also show that in the Spring Germany will not be able to face all her foes with first-line troops.

Again, Mr. Harris says:

> "The French came too late to Charleroi, the English too late to Mons, and both with ludicrously insufficient forces; they were both whipped immediately and beaten back; they couldn't even put up a decent fight or hold the Germans for a day anywhere. They were driven like sheep back and back almost to Paris.
>
> "Then, it is true, came a German check, which hasn't yet been explained, or rather, which has been explained, thanks to the censorship, altogether wrongly, and turned to praise of Joffre, French and company, who certainly never deserved the honour. If you doubt that, consider what they have done in the last two months. What has become of Joffre-French's celebrated offensive movement which was to take place early in December?"

Notice the assertion in these two paragraphs. He belittles the retreat from Mons and denies the explanation of the victory at the Marne. He doesn't prove a single statement — he doesn't even advance an argument in support of of a single one of them.

A little further on he says Kitchener "knows nothing about the Russians or their army." How does the writer know that? Why does he say it? What purpose is served by this mediocre style of argument? He says the first Russian armies are far the best, and that later armies will be stupid and untrained, but he thinks also that the German forces have a perennial spring of efficiency in them, and fails to regard the enormous losses of men Germany has already suffered, according to her own account, as any serious weakness in her battle lines.

There is no need to push an analysis of this "famous English author's" article any further. He has failed to establish what he set out to prove, that the censorship sheltered mediocrity in the British and French forces, for two or three reasons. In the first place, the Germans, with an army far superior in numbers, training and equipment, had the taking of Paris in four weeks as their objective, and in this they have been defeated badly. The rear-guard fighting of the British in the retreat from Mons, with an extending battle front, so disorganized the "efficient" forces of the Germans that they suffered a signal defeat at the Marne, and were forced to retreat. The flanking movement of the British and French in this retreat necessitated a general extension of the battle line, until the Germans could only "dig themselves in" and hold, with difficulty, during the winter their present lines of trenches. In addition, the attempts of the Germans to take Ostend or Calais have either been defeated or rendered of no practical use to them. Another reason is that there has been really no adverse criticism of French or Joffre in their own countries. The success they have attained leads to the conclusion that the military leaders of the French and British forces are anything but mediocre, that German military efficiency has its limit, and that Mr. Harris has written from a prejudiced point of view, possibly caused by pique at the effectiveness of the censorship. He has not written with the large view that has characterized the dignified utterances of many American newspapers. If a writer is to have any influence on public opinion, if he is to speak with authority to the extensive public served by daily newspapers, he should at least make some attempt to support his case with reasons.

Now mark, that while this writer has utterly failed to prove what he sought to prove, the war may reveal much mediocrity. It may be revealed to a considerable degree on the German side, but a discussion of this question does not concern us now.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

HENRY FORD, automobile manufacturer, has attained an international reputation because of the unique principles which he has introduced in connection with the management of his immense automobile manufacturing plant in Detroit. A year ago he announced a profit-sharing plan which involves the annual distribution to his employes of ten million dollars. Now he has announced that he would like to secure all the convicts from the prisons and penitentiaries of the country, as he believes that he can make men of them. Ford, who is the largest manufacturer of automobiles in the world, employs over sixteen thousand persons, and turns out one thousand automobiles a day. He was born in Michigan in 1863, and organized the Ford Motor Company in 1903.

IT IS INSTRUCTIVE to note that in the reviews of Canada's financial situation by Canadian bankers, the products of the forest are generally mentioned next after those of agriculture. In the view of these leaders, farm products are Canada's first resource and forest products her second. Canada has too much fertile land for forest products ever to oust those of the farm from first place. But, on the other hand, there is so much absolute forest land in Canada that unless we are wantonly wasteful and negligent in the handling of our forests, forest products should never be displaced from their position in the second place of Canada's resources.

A Chant of Love for England.

This "Chant of Love" was suggested by Ernst Lissauer's "Chant of Hate," familiar through the spirited version of Mrs. Archibald Henderson.

A song of hate is a song of Hell;
Some there be that sing it well.
Let them sing it loud and long,
We lift our hearts in a loftier song;
We lift our hearts to Heaven above,
Singing the glory of her we love—
England!

Glory of thought and glory of deed,
Glory of Hampden and Runnymede;
Glory of ships that sought for goals,
Glory of swords and glory of souls!
Glory of songs mounting as birds,
Glory immortal of magic words;
Glory of Milton, glory of Nelson,
Tragical glory of Gordon and Scott;
Glory of Shelley, glory of Sidney,
Glory transcendent that perishes not—
Hers is the glory; hers be the glory,
England!

Shatter her beauteous breast ye may;
The spirit of England none can slay!
Dash the bomb on the dome of St. Paul's—
Deem ye the game of the Admiral falls?
Pry the stone from the chancel floor—
Dream ye that Shakespeare shall live no more?
Where is the giant shot that kills
Wordsworth walking the old green hills?
Trample the red rose on the ground—
Keats is Beauty while earth spins round!
Bind her, grind her, burn her with fire,
Cast her ashes into the sea—
She shall escape, she shall aspire,
She shall arise to make men free;
She shall arise in a sacred scorn,
Lighting the lives that are yet unborn;
Spirit supernal, Splendour eternal,
England!

Benefits of Canadian Club.

(Orillia Packet.)

One of the benefits conferred by our Canadian Club is the opportunity it gives many to become better acquainted with our public men, while at the same time affording public men the chance to inform themselves more fully as to the resources and advantages of Orillia. The Hon. I. B. Lucas, before last Friday, was a stranger to many of us, and had never visited the town. A two-hours' drive gave him a fair idea of its extent, resources, and even prospects. What a delightful summer resort we have Mr. Lucas can as yet only guess; but he has partly promised to come again a few months hence, and make Orillia's better acquaintance, at the time of year when it offers attractions equalled by few small towns on the continent. Meantime, we can only hope that our visitor was anything like as favorably impressed by the home of his hosts as his hosts were by their guest. From this out the Attorney-General may count a large addition to his list of friends here.

KEEP DOWN THE DUST.

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—The press ought to start now to urge our Council to get ready at once to cope with the dust of spring, which carries by far more microbes and disease than does the dust of summer. Last year the dust became unbearable about the first of March, and continued at intermittent periods into May before anything was done to abate the nuisance. This neglect is an annual affair. One would suppose that the Council would profit by experience. They certainly afford a rich harvest for the doctors by their oft-repeated negligence. Consumption and kindred diseases have been traced to this source frequently. The contracts for watering the streets should be let at once, so as not to be an excuse for the delay. Other excuses have done duty, such as fear of the water tanks freezing, which does not occur at the watering troughs and other places, and again, that the watering carts need to be painted or repaired. Please get after them.

Yours, etc.,

B. PROMPT.

TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCIL.

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—Mr. Spence has taken offence at one paragraph among the notes published after our last meeting.

I presided at that meeting till called away early in the evening. My successor was chosen and the meeting finished.

We, representatives of the various labour organizations of the city, meet for the discussion of everything that pertains to the best interests of the workingmen. The question of the city refusing to give employment to men residing outside the city limits and Mr. Spence's present residence I would not have ruled as being out of order, but I do think that, regarding the subsequent remarks, a little more tact and delicacy should have been displayed, and I hereby tender my regrets, as president of the Trades and Labour Council of Peterborough, that this was not so.

Allow me to add in all fairness that Mr. Spence's assistants in our Sanitary Department hold him in high esteem.

Small Causes of War.

Nine hundred years ago a dispute between Modena and Bologna over a well bucket began a war which devastated Europe. A Chinese emperor once went to war over the breaking of a teapot; Sweden and Poland flew at each other's throats in 1654 because the King of Sweden discovered that his name in an official dispatch was followed by only two etceteras, while the King of Poland's had three. The spilling of a glass of water over the Marquis de Torey led to war between France and England, and a small boy, by throwing a pebble at the Duc de Guise, led to the massacre of Vassy and the thirty years' war.

Peruvian Sugar.

The enormous production of sugar cane to the acre is one of the surprises of Peru. Where it is grown the land is level and planting is an easy matter. When the cane reaches the height of two feet further attention in regard to cultivation is said to be unnecessary, and in from eighteen to twenty-four months maturity is reached. That the growth is luxurious may be seen from the fact that an average crop of forty tons an acre is obtained, while sixty and even seventy tons is not uncommon. In other sugar growing countries, including Cuba, twenty-five tons per acre are considered a good average, according to sugar experts.

BLOCKADE FITS IN WITH STORY BY CONAN DOYLE

Author Says Object of Story Was to Warn Public of Possible Danger

LONDON, Feb. 20. — "Neutral Observer's" statement in the Times that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's story, "Danger," which appeared in the Strand Magazine last July, suggested the idea to the Germans of a submarine lockade of England has aroused considerable interest here.

The story tells how the king or an imaginary state of Norland, while at war with Great Britain, found himself in an apparently hopeless position in consequence of his enemy's mighty naval power and was on the point of surrendering when one of his naval captains submitted a plan which he said would bring England to her knees in a few weeks.

Norland's fleet was gathered in a fortified harbor protected from attack by booms and piles. The captain was to have command of eight submarines with which he proposed to destroy England's food imports, reducing her to the verge of starvation. The plan was adopted and proved entirely successful.

Sir Arthur, in a statement to a reporter yesterday, said: "I need hardly say that it is very painful to me to think that anything I have written should be turned against my own country. The object of the story was to warn the public of a possible danger — which I saw overhanging this country and to show it how to avoid that danger.

"In the story I placed the incident of the submarine blockade some years hence. It was a story of the future, and my reason was that after studying the subject I concluded that the submarine at present was not capable of the results which I depict. But it is still my opinion that if this war had been delayed for five years, and if the sumarine during that time had gone on improving as rapidly as it has done in the past, England would have been placed in a most serious position, exactly as outlined in the story.

"I am quite sure, in the present circumstances that although we may possibly lose more ships, the German blockade can have no serious effect on the war."

PHARMACEUTICAL JOURNAL FOR FEBRUARY.

Two very important meetings have just taken place in Montreal — the Wholesale Drug Association of Canada and the Proprietary Trade Association of Canada. These meetings were both held for the purpose of considering the war taxes proposed, and which very seriously affect both the manufacturers of medicine and perfumes and the trade of the distributors—the wholesale druggists. A general meeting of the retail druggists has been called and will take place this week. A reconsideration has been asked of the government and a deputation will present the views of the trades interested at an early date.

The objections to the new measure of taxation as voiced in these meetings with unanimity are several in number. The proposed, it was shown, amounted to from 15 per cent. to 40 per cent. on the usual trade selling prices. The tax being imposed on the price of sale at retail to the public represented on that basis of calculation from 10 to 20 per cent.. No other business or industry was taxed to any such extent, and many important lines would actually face ruin if the measure was persisted in by the Government.

Instead of yielding for the war a large amount the prohibitory nature of the tax would defeat the object sought and ruin prosperous and legitimate business, enterprise in manufacturing.

The Minister of Finance will be approached on the basis of asking investigation in detail, it being claimed that the treatment of the manufacturers and dealers as well in the branch affected, is unfair and unjust. The goods involved, it can be shown, cannot stand any such change, and also have already been taxed for the same purpose in respect to all the crude material employed in manufacturing and producing same.

The general tariff advance of 7½ per cent. applies to the ingredients used and as well also certain advances enacted last year at the "War Session" of Parliament. Alcohol is one important item with many manufacturers who have to bear the Inland Revenue Tax of 2.96 per gallon on spirits. In principle it cannot be held as just to tax one and the same article under several headings. It is a tax on the poor and sick. The manufacturers cannot bear it on goods that can continue in sale. Medicines are the poor man's doctor. This attribute of Proprietary Medicine was recognized by the Government of the United States only recently. Perfumes were taxed by stamp but medicines were struck from the proposed tax list in recent revenue measure brought about through the present war affecting the income of that Government. It is hoped the Government will reconsider, and it is confidently expected this will be the case if the Minister will look into the details available which demonstrate that an injustice is being done by the action proposed and which cannot have had mature or careful consideration by the officers of department recommending.

THE ART OF LOVE

A Lecture on How to Secure a Husband

By F. A. MITCHEL.

Mrs. Matilda Robbins, a widow of fifty, who had buried four husbands, announced that she would give private lectures in the parlor of her home to young ladies on how to get husbands. A lecture would be given every Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

On the first afternoon a numerous audience were gathered in the lecturer's parlor.

Mrs. Robbins spoke as follows:

Young ladies, you have doubtless derived your ideas as to woman's part in a courtship from novels, and that is the reason why you are not married. The heroine of a novel is usually so modest that she doesn't dare say her soul's her own. There's more accomplished in this world in other fields besides matrimony by assurance than modesty and more accomplished by management than by assurance.

The best way to teach is by example. Therefore I shall put this lecture in the form of a story. But it's a real story, not an invention. The heroine didn't sit round and look pretty. She was up and doing. That's what we must all be in this world if we want to get on. Do you suppose a young fellow who wants a position whereby to start a fortune sits round and waits for it? No; he goes out and hunts for it. And when he gets it does he modestly wait for somebody to tell him to do things? Not if he wants to succeed. He does everything without being told and before it's wanted. That's the part of a young fallow starting out to fix himself in the world, and you young ladies should act on the same principle.

Now for my story of the way one young lady secured a husband.

Her name was Jones, Sarah Jones, just plain Sarah Jones, not Maltravers or Montmorency, like the heroines of novels, or Gwendolin or Jaquelin for a first name. A girl doesn't need a high sounding name to get a husband; she needs something that I'm going to tell you about. Sarah Jones the day she was eighteen sat down and did a job of thinking. She wasn't long about it, for she was an acting girl, and when she had got her thinking done she acted at once on her decision. That decision was that her place was in a home as a wife and the mother of children.

Sallie Jones didn't go at things blindly; she thought them out beforehand. She knew that she couldn't get married if restricted to the society of girls. So she joined a dancing class. She couldn't afford it, but she had to afford it, and whatever has to be done is done if the party to do it is of the right stuff. She had her eye fixed on that dancing class, and she joined without knowing where the money to pay her way was to come from. There were twenty young men members and twenty-five girls.

Miss Jones realised that there is safety in numbers but for the man she was after, not for her. She didn't go fooling about among the twenty men. She picked out a steady young fellow and made up her mind to land him. His name was Abel Rogers. Nothing romantic about his name either. Rogers didn't have anything except what he was getting together himself, but he was frugal and a hard worker.

The first thing Sallie did was to let Abel Rogers understand that she liked him. She didn't pout when he danced with some other girl more than with her or look troubled if he didn't dance with her at all. She smiled on him when he came back after a lack of attention just as pleasantly as if he hadn't neglected her.

This sort of work has been called angling, and so it is. A skillful fisherman if a fish doesn't bite right off wouldn't think of trying to jerk the hook into its gills, and when it does bite he doesn't try to haul it out of the water all at once. Some fish can be caught that way, but a gamy fish needs to be allowed to play itself out. So it is with a man. First get him on the hook, then play him.

We like those who like us, and Abel Rogers, being aware that Sallie liked him, was disposed to like her. There was nothing deceitful about this in Sallie. She really liked him or she wouldn't have tried to catch him. There is a difference in a girl showing a man that she likes him and showing him she wants him. Showing it would end uncertainty, and uncertainty is the line by which she must pull him in after getting the hook in his gills. Abel knew nothing about Sallie's feelings for him except that she liked him. She might have liked several other men and loved one other.

It wasn't long before Sallie found an opportunity to favor Abel above other men. He came one evening to the dancing class after an absence, having no partners engaged. Sallie turned down several names on her engagement card to give the dances to him. This was an excellent way of showing him her good will without indicating that she coveted his attention. Perhaps there are some among you who will not see the distinction I make here, but I assure you it is one of no little importance.

Abel felt not only that some return was due for this kindly act, but it gave him pleasure to make a return. He invited Sallie to go to drive with him. That was the time before automobiles came. I am not in favor of autos for courting purposes. There is too much rapid motion, and driver's attention must be constantly on his machine, to say nothing of his grip being on the steering wheel. Abel and Sallie drove out in a box buggy behind a lazy going horse. Everything pertaining to love in its early stages is zephyr-like, though I admit the climax or a brief period just before the climax may be in the nature of a hurricane. There was just a suspicion of perfume about Sallie, so delicate that it could only have come from articles that had been kept in sandalwood drawers or, more likely, in a mouchoir case. It was very entrancing to Abel, and as they rolled slowly over the smooth road, the reins lying loosely on the horse's back, Abel had nothing to think of except the girl beside him.

Sallie had by this time come to the most difficult part of her work. Every man doubtless thinks that some time he will be married and have a home. But marriage to him is like old age to all of us. It is—I mean it seems—far distant. The bachelor thinks of the present. Some men do not like to give up their liberty for the obligations of matrimony; some, who expect to do so in time, never find a convenient season. All men must be won. Only widowers or old bachelors, tired of their bachelorhood, marry intentionally.

Abel Rogers was looking forward to the day when, having accumulated a competence, he would settle down and take a wife. It was the business of Sallie Jones to break through this future intention and make it a present one. And here, again, girls' work shows a similarity to men's work. Many men who have good address and are excellent talkers fail in putting through schemes because they cannot bring the person on whom they are working to the point. Girls also often fail in landing a man whom they have got to the water's edge.

Mr. Rogers, having been brought thus far, bid fair to remain with the hook in his gills flopping about in the water. The timid girl, having thus far succeeded and being balked, would remain in statu quo. The rash girl would jerk the line, break it, and the fish would go swimming away merrily. The wise girl would use a landing net.

That is what Sallie Jones did. She used a landing net. But even a landing net may be used carelessly or at least injudiciously. Miss Jones studied out whatever she did. After a few months of dallying on the part of Mr. Rogers she set up a rival—not a real, bona fide rival, but one merely to excite a bit of suspicion. Indeed, by this time she was considered by the young men to belong to Abel Rogers, and it was not easy for her to secure a rival.

Abel did not seem very much frightened. At any rate, he showed no sign of being brought to terms. Perhaps he was thinking that he couldn't afford to marry or that, after all, it wouldn't be such a hardship to let Sallie Jones go to another.

The experiment having failed, Miss Jones resolved upon another. She became suddenly very gracious to Mr. Rogers. At the same time he noticed that whenever he asked her to go out with him she made some excuse. It did not occur to him that the excuse was not valid. He supposed he happened to ask her at times when she was engaged.

One evening Mr. Rogers called on Miss Jones and waited in the parlor while he was announced. On a lounge lay a piece of white satin, a long white veil and some orange blossoms. While the gentleman was inspecting them, a vague suspicion as to the reason for their being there breaking through into his brain, a maid entered hurriedly, gathered up the articles mentioned and, with a look at Rogers indicating that it had not been intended he should have seen them, carried them out of the room.

By this time it seemed to Mr. Rogers that he stood on the edge of a precipice and was about to topple over. When the maid re-entered with a message from Miss Jones asking to be excused, since she was very busy, he caught at the mantel for support.

Could it be possible that the girl he had been banging about so long was going to be married?

The proper thing for Mr. Rogers to do was to excuse the lady on whom he had called and go away. He did no such thing. He sent a message to her begging her to see him for only a few moments.

She came. To carry out her supposed plan she should be in sewing dress. She knew better. She wore the most becoming costume for ordinary wear she possessed. When she saw Mr. Rogers looking as if the bottom had dropped out of the universe she regarded him with a gaze of interested surprise.

"Oh, heavens!" he exclaimed frantically. "How could you have done it?"

"Done what?"

"You are about to be married?"

"I?"

"Yes. Don't deny it. I have seen the wedding dress, the veil, the orange blossoms."

"You have?"

"Yes. I suppose I should not reproach you, but it is maddening. After all my devotion— Who is the man? I demand to know!"

Young ladies, I have gone far enough in my illustration. This is not a love story; it is a lecture. I trust that I have made myself plain and that I may have been of benefit in bringing about for some of you that state which it is woman's part to fill. The next lecture will be given on next Friday afternoon at the same hour. Those who have not procured course tickets may procure them for $2 each. I bid you good evening.

AIRING BED CLOTHES.

Sunshine For Both Sides of the Mattress Is Necessary.

Many housekeepers think they air beds by throwing the bedclothes over the foot of the bed and the mattress over them, but this is simply airing the underside of the mattress and smothering the bedclothes.

Some persons also think that to air a bed properly it must lie this way about half the day, giving a very untidy appearance to the room.

The proper way to air a bed, if bedclothes are not removed from the bed and placed on chairs, is to throw them over the footboard across a chair placed to keep them off the floor and then lift the mattress in the middle, tilting it up so that air passes under and over it. One-half hour of this will thoroughly air a bed, the windows to be open all the time, of course.

Air and sunshine are the best purifiers on the market, and they are also the cheapest. If sufficiently used they are enough to meet the need of a healthy family.

Air the closets and wardrobes just as you do the room. They are full of clothes that have been worn all day, which need airing.

NOTHING CAN EQUAL BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. Alex. Butchard, Conn, Ont., writes: "My daughter has used Baby's Own Tablets for her baby and thinks there is nothing to equal them for little ones. All mothers who have used the Tablets say the same thing. They break up colds, regulate the bowels and stomach and keep the little ones healthy and happy. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Old Bags Like New.

Shabby leather bags, etc., may be improved in appearance by being rubbed over with well beaten white of egg and then polished with beeswax and turpentine, the final rubbing being given with a soft, clean cloth.

Save Odd Bits of Soap.

Keep a bowl or box in a convenient place and throw in all the odds and ends of soap. When sufficient quantity has been collected boil with water to a jelly. Set aside to cool. It is then ready for use.

Grease Spots on Floors.

So many women grieve because there are grease spots on their kitchen floors and water, with any amount of scrubbing, will not remove them. They should try alcohol to remove these spots.

Tight Lacing and the Health.

It is quite true that tight lacing of the waist is responsible for many cases of indigestion. The necessity for tight lacing is an ill proportioned body, usually due to neglect or overindulgence. The stomach rebels at being confined when performing its labors and announces its displeasure by not taking proper care of the food ingested, which results in discomfort and eventually indigestion.

For the Children

Czarevitch of Russia in Military Uniform.

© 1914, by American Press Association.

Here is the latest picture of Grand Duke Alexis of Russia; the czarevitch he is called. The title czarevitch means the same as crown prince in English and means that the boy is heir to the throne of Russia. Alexis is just past ten years of age and, of course, is too young to go to the war, although his latest photograph shows him clothed in military uniform. The grand duke has English blood in his veins, his mother being a daughter of Princess Alice of England. Alexis has four sisters, all of them older than himself, he being the baby of the family. As the photo shows, he is a handsome little fellow, but his health has never been robust.

Boy Scouts Patrol Sea Coast.

There are 250,000 boy scouts in England. Before war was declared 50,000 were mobilized. They have been at their duties ever since.

From the first day of danger seventy troops of sea scouts began coast patrol which will be permanent until the declaration of peace.

Today 1,300 sea scouts are stationed from John o' Groat's to Dover keeping watch and ward along the east coast. They are only boys, but they watch the North sea through daylight and dark.

Their job is to do their duty, to keep their mouths shut and their eyes open. They have won official recognition, the admiralty paying for their subsistence while they serve as volunteers.

Each patrol of six sea scouts is living with two coast guards in any handy shelter. Tents, boathouses and shacks furnish emergency stations. Off duty patrols are building themselves winter huts, the handy "men" fashioning sleeping boards, lockers and mess tables. The sea scouts cook for themselves.

Pebbles For Gems.

Among the many curious trades that rely upon cleverness in deception is that of the seaside lapidary or gem cutter, who trades in expensive gems for worthless pebbles. His business is successful at some of the English seaside resorts. The customers are shown gems which the cutter claims to have picked up on the shore and polished. Then they start out in search of gems and carry to the cutter pebbles which he convinces them are gems. They leave the pebbles to be cut, and he sends back, in return for the valueless pebbles, topazes, aquamarines and other inexpensive gems charging a price for cutting which gives him a fine profit on the transaction.

On the Defensive.

"Why," asked the simple stranger, "are people engaged in conducting a hotel so frequently distant or overbearing of manner?"

"Well," replied the clerk confidentially, "we're forced into a defensive attitude. There isn't a guest who doesn't honestly think he could improve on the way any hotel he stays at could be run."—Washington Star.

INSPECTING THE RANGE.

Timely Precaution That Will Insure Brisk Fires and Fuel Economy.

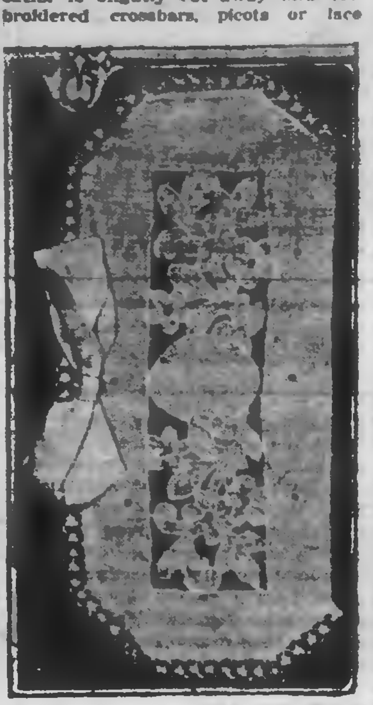
Have your kitchen range examined regularly, for upon it depends much of the cook's success. Chimneys, drafts and grates should be in perfect condition, for not only is this a time saving necessity, but it also economizes coal and wood.

Most apartments and many houses depend entirely upon the gas range for cooking purposes, and it should be thoroughly inspected from time to time. The various parts of a modern gas range can be replaced when broken or worn out, and this is of great advantage over the older makes that had to be discarded entirely when only partially worn out. All gas ranges are connected free of charge, which is another great saving.

LINEN GLOVE CASE.

Attractive Design In Roman Cutwork For Boudoir Fancy Work.

The old fashioned "cutwork" is popular again. It is carried out in many styles which differ slightly in processes. In all cases the plain foundation, whether of linen, scrim, lawn, silk or satin, is slightly cut away and embroidered crossbars, picots or lace stitches are worked into the opening. The outline is worked in buttonhole stitch or in overcasting.



GLOVE CASE IN CUTWORK.

In carrying out the work the pattern is stamped or traced on the material, the outline of the pattern worked and the inclosed material then carefully cut away. When completed the embroidery is usually mounted over a colored background.

A simple design in cutwork, carried out on white linen, is illustrated here. It is used as the decoration for a simple glove case and is mounted over pale blue satin.

VISIT OF NEW COMMISSIONER

To This City Next Saturday and Sunday

Final arrangements have been made for the greatest event in Salvation Army circles the city has ever seen. Commissioner Richards, the new leader of the Salvation Army forces in Canada, accompanied by Colonel Gaskin, chief secretary for the Dominion, and Brigadier Rawling, Major Arnold, and Captain Baker.

The Commissioner arrives on Saturday next and will be welcomed by the band and friends. The evening meetings will be of a semi-private character, and a Salvation Army welcome to their leader.

At the Sunday morning service at 11 o'clock the Commissioner will preach on "Holiness of Heart and Life."

The great public reception will take place in the Grand Opera House on Sunday afternoon. Mayor Buller will welcome the Commissioner and he will be supported by many of the leading citizens. The commissioner will give a special address.
sioner will give a special address.

At the Sunday night service the Commissioner will preach. All are cordially invited.

The bulletin concludes with articles on hog cholera and tuberculosis, written by the Veterinary Director-General and the Chief Meat Inspector respectively. This bulletin is generously illustrated and printed in sepia brown ink. Copies are available to those who aply for them to the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

Faces As Fair As An Orchid

Are Possible When Stuart's Calcium Wafers Are Used After Meals to Clean Up Skin Eruptions And Discolorations.

When a face is covered with blotches, liver spots, pimples, blackheads, etc., Stuart's Calcium Wafers will act like some magical charm. However, there is nothing magical about them. They are nature's own way of cleansing the human blood and preventing it from filling the surface of the body—the skin—with pimples and little skin eruptions.

"With a Face as Fair as a Day in June."

The abolishing of all skin disorders must begin with the blood. Lotions, salves, cosmetics, etc., will do no material good. The trouble comes from within and there the remedy must be applied.

If you really desire quick action and at the same time a common sense, natural, harmless blood purifier, then Stuarts Calcium Wafers is this remedy.

The correct and best blood purifier known to science is—Calcium Sulphide. This great cleanser is contained in proper quantities in Stuart's Calcium Wafers and that is why all blood troubles and skin blemishes rapidly disappear after their use.

An unsightly and pimply face due to impure blood is one of the most disgusting sights one can see, and yet all about us, upon the streets, in the theatre, when travelling, etc., we see these horrible results.

There is no need for this condition if you will take Stuart's Calcium Wafers daily and keep all salves, lotions, cosmetics and other harmful preparations from clogging the pores.

Every first-class druggist in this country carries Stuart's Calcium Wafers, which are pleasant to take, harmless, and may be obtained for 50 cents a box. A small sample package will be mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Bismark believed Germany should be strong within and looked askance on colonial development. She should be strong where she was, be on good terms with Russia and uphold monarchy against Parliament and democracy. The present kaiser dropped the pilot and placed other men in his place, who stressed 1, that Germany must have a fleet to protect her expanding commerce. 2. That hereafter Germany must not only be powerful within but listened to in the councils of the world at large. An aggrandizing aim brings out a great fleet—a world empire, that was justified by a mission of kultur, and Germanism should be dominant in the world.

The speaker said that the leader in the Reitchstag said, "We enter the war enthusiastically in order that Germany might fulfill her mission." Note the change now. The Germans are saying we are fighting for our lives. They are appealing in a childish way to neutral nations to be almost merciful to them. Patriotism has become corrupt. They know no law but force. The hand of patriotism is directed by force, a force directed by such a perverted patriotism that there is nothing like international law left.

How has it proceeded? It broke into Belgium. Every sign of civilized law swept away with no regard for the sanctities of modern life. That is where a perversion of patriotism has led them.

The press is censored and the common people do not know real movements. The speaker likened Germany to a Greek tragedy and said a similar catastrophe was taking place in Germany. How else can you explain their diplomacy? The war is waged for the stability of society, for the spirit of realities that makes one man the brother of another.

The causes were certain characteristics of the Prussian mind. They grow easily jealous, lack generosity and courtesy. Material property brings out vices to which we are subject unless restrained by a fine moral sense. After much effort the Prussian came on the scene but England was always a little way ahead.

Speaking of the present German Emperor, the speaker said that as Crown Prince he was unpopular because the people thought he wanted war, and when he came to the throne there was much cause and feeling for war, but still he kept the people out of war until the present time. While he had to bear much responsibility, it was noted that in the last few years he had changed, and that it is probable he had fallen completely under the influence of the military party which looked so jealously on England and the place Britain occupied in the world.

The speaker explained that Southern Germany produced the intellectual men and drew a fine comparison by saying the organizing Prussian influence, had spread over Germany like an ice age. He contrasted with it the French ideal, "The essence of civilization is in the moral element of human life, in the sweetening of manners, in the establishment of true human fraternity of nations set free." The ideal of France showed a nation reviving whose heroic vigor had surprised the world. She was an ally beside which we may be glad to stand.

A vote of thanks was moved by Sheriff Hall and Dr. Cameron. The meeting closed with The National Anthem.

SOLDIERS OF THE KING

A grand patriotic concert will be given in the opera house on Tuesday evening by the men of B Squadron, of the Mounted Rifles and 39th Battalion. So successful and entertaining were the concerts given by the two units that the men conceived the idea of holding a big concert and giving the boys a chance to entertain some of their friends. The opera house has been secured, and on Tuesday evening at the usual hour of 8.15 the curtain will go up for the opening chorus.

Lieut. Harry Rogers has been given the leading reins in the step and he has found Mr. Elwin of Marks Bros. Company, which concludes its engagement here tonight, also Mr. B. Spaz of the Royal Theatre, to assist him. Mr. Elwin will remain over and act in the capacity of stage manager. The entertainment will be given almost entirely by the men of the 39th Battalion and Mounted Rifles, and the program is to be of the highest order. A good sprinkling of first-class vaudeville will be presented. Mr. Spaz, who provided great entertainment at the concert of the Mounted Rifles a few evenings ago, has signified his willingness to assist. He has a quantity of songs, mostly patriotic, which he composed himself. These will be sold during the concert and half the proceeds given to the Peterborough Patriotic Fund. All the proceeds of the concert over and above expenses will be given to the Patriotic Fund.

Should word be received on Monday that the Mounted Rifles must leave that night, the concert will not be held, but if no word arrives, then the advance sale will be commenced. That a bumper crowd will turn out goes without saying. The talent is good, the cause better. There's no excuse for not marking Tuesday night down for the Patriotic Concert.

Members of the 39th Battalion will parade to Divine Service at the Salvation Army tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. The Temple Band will play them to the temple. Adjutant and Mrs. McElhiney and Envoy Brewer Brown will address the service.

Pte. Bagshaw, of the Lindsay overseas force, received notice yesterday from his sister in Derbyshire, Eng., that Walter Bagshaw was killed in action some days ago while fighting at the front.

Lieut. Bagshaw was an officer in the Royal Warwickshire Regiment, and went to France at the beginning of the war. He was serving his second term of seven years when killed.

Lieut. Bagshaw, according to the report, was blown to pieces by a shrapnel shell fired by the enemy. The only thing found to identify the soldier was a piece of paper on khaki. Upon one of the fragments was found his name.

Lieut. Bagshaw has two nephews serving in the Lindsay overseas force and another nephew is serving with the King's Royal Rifles in England, who went to the front in January.

* * *

"Johnnie Canuck's the Boy" is the title of a patriotic song, the words and music of which are by Jean Mulloy, wife of Trooper L. W. Mulloy, Kingston, the blind Canadian hero of the South African war. The song is just out, and will not doubt be taken to the heart of the 21st Battalion as its own. It has a rollicking chorus that goes with a swing and dash that is sure to make it popular. Compared with other Canadian patriotic songs that have been seen, "Johnnie Canuck's the Boy" is by far the best. The song is a gift to the Kingston Red Cross Society by Mrs. Mulloy.

DELEGATES MADE THEIR REPORTS

Organized Classes at St. James Church Had Banquet

The festive spirit reigned last night in St. James' Methodist Church hall where the organized classes affiliated with the church entertained the teachers, officers of the Sunday School, and the members of the Bible classes and guilds. By far from being the least enjoyable part of the reception was the serving of fine refreshments which were speedily consumed. The report of delegates to the Bible class convention held two weeks ago in Toronto were presented by the delegates who were Mrs. Mahood, Miss Barrie, Mr. Kitney, Mr. Kent, and Mr. Huston. A fine musical program was run off. Mr. A. E. Prest, superintendent of the Sunday School presided over the affair.

A vote of thanks extended to the delegates, was moved by Messrs. W. McLaren, and J. Kent.

VALIDATE BY-LAW

The special meeting of the Council last evening passed a resolution authorizing the city solicitor to take all steps necessary to validate debenture by-law 1865 and debentures issued thereunder, under authority of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board and that the fees, to be in the neighborhood of $60.00 be paid by the city treasurer. This was necessitated by the fact that bylaw 1865 was drawn up incorrectly.

OUTFALL SEWER.

Good progress has been made during the past week on the outfall sewer and the work is gradually pushing on toward Park Street. Water is found in abundance and the men are in for no small amount of trouble when the frost leaves the ground. Greater care must now be exercised in propping the sides of the trench to avoid constant caving in.

LAD SUSTAINED INJURY TO EYE

Boys Exploded Dynamite Fuse Cap

Arthur Job, a young boy living in Kirkfield, was brought to Nicholls Hospital suffering from an injured eye, sustained while playing with a dynamite fuse cap. With some other boys in Kirkfield, he was playing with the cap. He began pounding it with a hammer, causing it to explode, several of the fragments striking him in the face. One piece hit him in the corner of an eye. He left for his home in Kirkfield on Thursday. Whether he will lose the sight of the eye could not be determined prior to his leaving.

The sewer for Bethune Street, north of Smith Street, will be placed along Bethune Street to Aberdeen Avenue, along Aberdeen to the Chemong Road and along the Chemong Road to the point where Stewart St. and Reid Street intersects. This was decided upon at the council meeting last night and a recommendation to that effect will be sent to the Board of Health for its approval.

Why shouldn't this mean you, Sir or Madam—why not keep young with the young folk? Why not refresh your tired spirit all the rest of your days with the ever-youthful gaiety of music? And withal—play as though Liszt himself were at the keyboard—aided by the

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

Notes by Official Scribe

The usual bi-monthly meeting was held this week, with the customary good attendance of delegates. President Hartley occupied the chair.

Mr. Burnham, with characteristic attention to detail, wanted to know if the council hand any questions for the House, especially with reference to the Fair Wage and Alien Labor Bills.

Though the treasury of the council is suffering alike with others at present, yet a little could be spared to assist the Porcupine Miners who lost their Labor Temple during the recent fire.

Petitions for the abolition of the property qualification were received from Hamilton and a committee was appointed to interview G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., on this subject.

There is no defiance of Finance Minister White's proposals to raise the necessary for the war expenditure by raising postal rates in that the council will not be notified in the future for ordinary meetings, simply making the most of what they have in possession. Members will be notified in future only when special business is to be transacted.

Mr. Spence's solicitors wrote regarding the "personal" in the last Trades and Labor notes. This was left in the hands of the president who will act with his usual display of resourcefulness.

FRANK JAMES, THE HERO OF MANY DIME NOVELS IS NO MORE

Excelsior Springs, Mo., Feb. 20.—Frank James, brother of Jesse James, famous outlaw, died yesterday on the farm on which he was born 74 years ago.

Frank James, once asked how it was he became a bandit, said that it was the abuse received at the hands of the men who had killed his father—all through suspicion that they were harboring Southern soldiers. He said that he and Jesse "got" twenty-one of them and that God Almighty got the other.

After six detectives, as James called them, had thrown a bomb into their house, killing his younger brother and wounding his mother, the James boys dressed as cowboys and overtook the men. They asked them what they would do if they met the James boys.

"We would stick them on the end of our guns," the men replied.

"You are talking to Jesse James right now, and that is my brother, Frank, standing there," said Jesse. They pleaded for their lives, but the James boys told them that they had shown no mercy to their brother or their mother.

Of all their "work," Frank James considered the Northfield robbery the biggest. Two banks were "lifted" and more than $80,000 in cash taken. Three men lost their lives. Jim Younger was seriously injured and Frank James lost the most of his hand.

Jesse James was killed by Bob Ford in September of 1882, while hanging up a picture of himself and Frank in their house. Frank surrentered in October, 1882, and after two years was released on parole. Several years later, disguised as a cowboy, he met Bob Ford in a Kansas City dance hall and had his revenge.

For some years Frank James had worked as an engineer in lumber camps and as a berry picker.

THE ACUTE PAIN FROM NEURALGIA

Permanently Cured Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Neuralgia is not a disease—it is only a symptom, but a most painful one. It is the surest sign that your blood is weak, watery and impure, and that for this reason your nerves are literally starving. Bad blood is the sole cause of the piercing pains of neuralgia—good rich blood is the only cure. In this you have the reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure neuralgia. They are the only medicine that contain in the correct proportions the elements needed to make rich, red blood. This rich blood reaches the root of the trouble, soothes the jangled nerves, drives away the nagging, stabbing pain and braces up your health in other ways as well. Here is proof—Mr. C. J. Lee, Vatchell, Ont., says: "For several years I was troubled at intervals with neuralgia in the head and chest. The pain I suffered at times was most intense. I was continually doctoring for the trouble, but found nothing to give me permanent relief until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Thanks to this medicine my blood has been restored to a healthy condition and every symptom of the trouble has disappeared. I can therefore with confidence recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all who suffer from the fierce pains of neuralgia."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HOLD ANOTHER CONFERENCE

Foreign Minister Burian Hurries to Meet Bethmann-Hollweg

VIENNA, Feb. 20. — Last night's official statement says:

"Baron Stephan Burian, the Austrian Foreign Minister, started last night for the Austrian staff headquarters, where he will meet Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German Imperial Chancellor, to-day."

BARON BURIAN.

According to reports from Sofia, the incursion of Albanians into Serbian territory is pleasing to Serbia, as it gives her an excuse for operations in that quarter.

The Serbians, it is stated, are planning to employ the interval in Austrian-Balkan operations by pushing an advance towards the Adriatic. In this they will be supported by the Anglo-French fleet.

SALANDRA APPLAUDED

Premier of Italy Makes Covert Reference to War

ROME, Feb. 20.—Indirect allusion to the international situation was made by Premier Salandra in an address before the Chamber of Deputies in commemoration of the victims of the recent earthquake. "We keep intact," he said, "our undaunted faith in the immortal fatherland, which to-day more than ever asks from her sons the profound conviction that her fate is not comprised in the narrow circle of present interest, or even the life of one generation, but includes and connects those who were with those who will be, in all our memories of the past and in all our hopes and ideals for the future."

The Premier's address was loudly applauded by the members of the Chamber.

Loss of Zeppelins Confirmed.

BERLIN, Feb. 20.—(Via wireless to Sayville.)—Announcement of the loss of the German airships L-3 and L-4, in a heavy gale off southern Denmark, was made by the Overseas News Agency last night. It was stated that the crews of the ships were saved, with the exception of four men who are missing.

A despatch from Copenhagen on Thursday night said that the Zeppelin L-3 exploded on Fano Island, off the southwest coast of Jutland, Wednesday, and that another airship, commanded by Capt. Count Platen, sank ten miles north of Jutland Thursday.

To Destroy Mines.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 20.—Scandinavian naval officers at a joint meeting in Christiania yesterday, agreed upon steps necessary for the destruction of mines that are imperilling Scandinavian shipping in Scandinavian waters. Their decision was then presented to the Cabinets at Copenhagen, Christiania and Stockholm.

To Identify Ships.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20. — The suggestion of Germany in the latest note to the U. S. that means be found for identifying and safeguarding American ships venturing into the war zone is understood to have been taken up at yesterday's Cabinet meeting. It was agreed, however, that the American Government has no authority to order ships to adopt such measures as taken in Holland and the Scandinavian countries, which include the painting of the nationality of the ship in large letters on each side.

GERMANS NOW PRESSING HARD TOWARD WARSAW

Offensive Towards Nieman River Has Been Abandoned in Favor of Efforts to Get a Base Near Novo Georgievsk —Experts Believe Fortress There Will Impede Their Advance.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 20. — In the north the Germans have now practically abandoned their movement towards the Nieman river, and are sharply engaged in battles both in the moor land north of the Augustowo Forest and on the Ossowiec road. Throughout this eastern region the Germans are believed to have only five or six army corps, which are operating separately in raids upon points where they hope to harass their adversaries. This position is now much less serious than the new developments in North Poland. Here the Germans have moved very great forces from Sierpec southward, and from Plock eastward along the road toward Plonsk, where their head column is in fighting contact with the Russian cavalry moving north of Novo Georgievsk. The enemy is grasping stubbornly at this position, evidently with the aim of seeking a base for an attack northwest of Warsaw, similar to their old entrenchments around the Bzura and the Rawka.

Their effort in the north is impeded enormously by the Narew river and the impassable swamps on its right bank, but the fighting in the bare country beyond threatens to develop into great battles engaging some hundreds of thousands of men. The new operations from Sierpec are intensifying.

Now that the Germans have abandoned their attempt at threatening Warsaw from the Nieman lines, their incessant attacks on the eastern Carpathian passes are beginning to slacken through loss of men and the absence of reinforcements.

The Austrian forces at the extreme east of the line are far more numerous than the strategic situation demands. Their demonstrations continue to be largely political as regards Roumania and are possibly effective in that sense. The movement of the Russian southeastern column across the Pruth to the right bank has been necessitated by an approaching thaw which, at this season floods rivers over a very wide area and would cut the army off for some weeks from the other Carpathian columns if it remained on the Bukowina side.

If, as is believed in the Russian capital, Field Marshal von Hindenburg is trying to reach Warsaw by an advance on the north bank of the Vistula, he can hardly succeed unless he has enormous forces at his disposal.

"The route," a correspondent asserts, "is protected by the Russian fortress of Novo Georgievsk, reputed to be the strongest in the world, while further north the Germans must deal with Ossowiec, which stayed their first advance from East Prussia.

"Military circles consider that the withdrawal of the Russians from Bukowina was dictated by necessity, as when the ice melted in the river the Russians would have been cut off from the opposite bank of the Pruth and faced by superior forces of the enemy."

The Russian Headquarters Staff, in a statement referring to a recent Austrian official statement, declare that the Austrians' assertions that they captured 29,000 Russian prisoners are not true. As an example, the Headquarters Staff cites the Austrian claim that they captured 12,000 Russians during the retreat in Bukowina. This number, it is stated, exceeds the total number of Russians engaged on this front, and the actual Russian losses were seven officers and 1,000 soldiers killed, wounded and missing.

REPRISALS PROMISED

Britain Will Make all Food for Germany, Contraband

LONDON, Feb. 20. — The British Government announced yesterday that it had decided that the cargo of the American steamer Wilhelmina should be held for the decision of the prize court.

This announcement was made by Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary. It seems to make clear the purpose of Great Britain to declare all foodstuffs for Germany contraband, as well as to foreshadow other reprisals. In his note, Sir Edward Grey, after reviewing the German methods of warfare and denouncing them as absolute violations of all international usages, says:

"If, therefore, his Majesty's Government should hereafter feel constrained to declare foodstuffs absolute contraband, or to take other measures for interfering with German trade by way of reprisals, they confidently expect that such action will not be challenged on the part of the neutral states by appeals to laws and usages of war whose validity rests on their forming an integral part of that system of international doctrine which as a whole their enemy frankly boasts the intention to disregard, so long as such neutral states cannot compel the German Government to abandon methods of warfare which have not in recent history been regarded as having the sanction of either law or humanity."

BOMBED OSTEND

Aviator Made Daring Raid and Got Home Safely

PARIS, Feb. 20.—A daring flight made the night of Feb. 8 by the aviator ——, who threw down six projectiles in the vicinity of Ostend, is recounted in a note given out by the War Office yesterday afternoon.

The aviator left his station at 9.40 p.m., in a violent west wind. His first projectile landed on what appeared to be a number of munition and supply wagons near Middlekerke.

The airman then flew to Ostend, and let fall three bombs on the Casino building. The violence of these detonations caused consternation among the enemy, who flashed searchlights on the departing aviator. Later two more bombs were hurled on a barracks to the west of Ostend.

Searchlights found the French airman soon after this, and German machine guns were fired at him, but without success. During his return flight the Frenchman's machine touched the waves along the coast line.

J. C. Dixon of Maryborough was elected president of the North Wellington Liberal Association.

Hamilton board of control decided to restore the old water rates, with certain slight exceptions, and through this will secure between $25,000 and $30,000 more revenue. The tax rate will be 21 mills.

NOW OR NEVER FOR THE KAISER

Must Win in East or Abandon the War

LONDON, Feb. 20. — The Times, discussing the situation on the eastern battlefront, said yesterday morning: "The need to seek an early decision is now more incumbent upon the Germans than ever. They are drawing upon their last two million men so far as the best estimates can show, and if they do not win successes soon, they can never hope to gain them.

"Their recent advance across the frontiers of East Prussia is an effective and apparently unforeseen stroke, as Russia has quite frankly acknowledged. We may discount to some extent their claim to victory, which probably belongs to the same category as the stories of impending starvation.

"When all is said, however, it is plain that the Germans have very vigorously cleared their flanks, have achieved substantial success of unknown dimensions, and are pressing forward into Russian territory. They are aiming at the fortress of Kovno, and possibly at Grodno also, and what is far more important from their point of view, are cutting the main line from Petrograd to Warsaw. The line is further and perhaps even more seriously menaced by the simultaneous advance into Poland in the neighborhood of Ostrolenka from points south of the Mazurian Lake region. Should the railway be reached and held by either advance Warsaw would be in grave danger.

"The moral for the western allies, and in simple language, that whatever may happen during the next few weeks Russia has her hands full."

RAIDERS ARE NOW INTERNED

Zeppelin Crews in Denmark Are "Baby Killers" of King's Lynn

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 20.—The officers and men survivors of the Zeppelins L-3 and L-4, which were destroyed during the gale of Wednesday night, left Jutland yesterday morning for Odense, a concentration camp, where they arrived yesterday afternoon. They were guarded by 20 soldiers. They will be quartered in the Odense barracks, where they will remain during the war.

It was learned that the interned survivors of both of the wrecked Zeppelins participated in the recent bombardment of King's Lynn and other English coast towns.

The German Government in an official statement yesterday admits the loss of both vessels.

Miss Lydia Crow, Brantford, who went to England in December last to bring to Canada 25 Belgian orphan children, has returned home unaccompanied. England is caring for the Belgian orphans.

County Constable A. B. Tufford, of Beamsville, has been suspended from duty for drunkenness and other unseemly conduct.

PRINCE ARTHUR OF CONNAUGHT

In the list of military awards approved by the King for services rendered in the field appear the names of the following officers with Canadian associations whose names were cabled yesterday as mentioned in Sir John French's despatches:

Major Cory and Major Davidson, D.S.O., promoted to be Brevet Lieut.-Colonels; Lt.-Col. E. J. Duffus, a native of Halifax, attached to the 8th Brigade, Col. Nanton and H. R. H. Prince Arthur of Connaught to be Companions of the Bath, and Lord Brooke, who commanded the second Canadian brigade at Petawawa military camp eighteen months ago, is made a C.M.G.

RULERS WERE IN COMMUNICATION

Poincare and King George Exchanged Letters

LONDON, Feb. 20. — Correspondence between President Poincare of France and King George of England just before the outbreak of the war was published here yesterday. In a letter, dated July 31, President Poincare expressed the opinion that "war would be inevitable if Germany were convinced that the British Government would not intervene." On the other hand, he said, "there would be the greatest chance that peace would remain unbroken" if Germany were convinced that the British Government would intervene.

King George, in replying, thanked President Poincare for the frankness with which the latter had expressed himself, and added:

"I am personally using my best endeavors with the Emperors of Russia and Germany toward finding some solution by which actual military operations may at any rate be postponed and time thus given for calm discussion between the powers. I intend to prosecute these efforts without intermission so long as any hope remains for an amicable settlement."

ALL ATTACKS ARE FOILED

Germans Strive to Retrieve Losses of Past Few Days

DECISIVE SET BACKS

PARIS, Feb. 20. — Desperately striving to regain lost ground, the Germans spent an active day and night making attacks on positions newly-won by the allies, and the French War Office last night reported the decisive repulse of these attacks in several places. No less than five attempts were made by the enemy to recapture their lost trenches in the Champagne district between evening and morning, but these efforts were beaten back, and further ground gained in the victorious following up of the French soldiery. Fighting is being continued briskly in this section.

The Germans attempted to take some French posts in the Argonne by main force, but they were beaten again and one of their blockhouses was blown up and its site occupied.

On the heights of the Meuse the same story was repeated. Three strong counter-attacks to recover lost trenches failed, the enemy's columns melting away under the fire of the French artillery.

East of Ypres an attack was repulsed on some allied trenches. It was made by a German column five companies in breadth. The Germans also tried to make an attack on the French positions near Rochincourt, to the north of Arras. This move was stopped at the outset by heavy gunfire.

The attempts of the Germans to secure a foothold on a hill near Bonhomme Pass in the Vosges were partially successful when a whole regiment of 3,000 men was employed, but a company and a half of French troops, about 375 strong, were turned loose on the enemy and he was thrown out in the morning. The Germans made violent efforts to recapture this position, but the French have tenaciously held on to it.

The Germans were also defeated in an attack on the Sudel farm.

GENERALS RETIRED.

Six French Officers Laid Aside In Favor of Younger Men.

PARIS, Feb. 20.—The Headquarters Staff announces that six generals of division have been retired to the reserve, the best known being Gen. Michel, formerly Governor of Paris. Among the newly-appointed generals De Mitry was mentioned in the orders of the day of Feb. 4 for showing brilliant conduct, courage and resourcefulness throughout the combats of October and November, to the success of which he greatly contributed. Twelve brigadier-generals have also been retired to the reserve, while one, Gen. Garquy, has been simply retired. Among the colonial troops two generals of a division have retired to the reserve.

It is noteworthy that this announcement, unlike the one issued on Dec. 22, makes no attempt to soften the blow by saying that health or personal reasons are responsible for the retirements.

FOUR YEARS OF FREEDOM NOW PRISON

Dynamiting of Los Angeles Times' Building is Recalled

SEATTLE, WASH., Feb. 20. — David Caplan, last of the men wanted at Los Angeles, Calif., in connection with the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building in the Fall of 1910, was arrested last night near Rolling Bay, Rainbridge Island, 12 miles from Seattle. Caplan, according to Walter R. Thayer, manager of the Seattle branch of the William J. Burns detective agency, admitted his identity. He was placed in jail under an armed guard.

For two years he has ben living under the name of Frank Moller, on a small chicken ranch back of Rolling Bay, and also conducted a barber shop. He was found through information gathered by William J. Burns after the arrest of Schmidt last Saturday in New York. He was in bed when the officers burst into his cabin, telling him that he was recognized as Caplan. "That's me; I'm glad it's over," Caplan said, and added that he was "willing to go back to Los Angeles and face the music."

"Besides several letters and other documents implicating several San Francisco men in Caplan's activities, we found three sticks of 80 per cent. dynamite similar to that bought near Richmond, Calif., and used to destroy the Times," said Thayer. "Caplan has aged somewhat since we lost trace of him four years ago. His hair has turned gray and he looked to be in good health. He has a wife Mrs. Florence Caplan, and two children, living in Chicago.

Had Plenty of Money.

Caplan said that for two years before buying his property at Rolling Bay he had been roaming about the world, having gone to London, Paris and other European cities. Caplan's bank book shows that he has been well supplied with money from outside sources. Valuable evidence connecting these sources with the dynamite conspiracy was found among Caplan's papers.

"Our New York office has also discovered evidence connecting J. B. McNamara, Caplan and Schmidt with the explosions which damaged the Lyon building in Seattle in 1910, just before the Times explosion. The three men, according to the evidence we have gathered, were sitting in the railway station in Seattle waiting for a train at the hour the explosion occurred."

Germany Plays Last Card.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 20. — The first admission that the present blockade is Germany's last card in the great war comes from Vice-Admiral Kirchoff of the active service of the German navy. Writing in the Hamburger Fremdenblatt he declares that there is no question that the blockade must be made extremely effective. He admits that Germany now has sufficient war materials, and that her present great aim is to bring such a feeling of uneasiness and insecurity that no human nerve can long stand the strain, and so bring directly home to the allies the dangers that are now impending.

The Cover Off

Here's the admission made (in an advertisement) by one of the heaviest coffee advertisers of the country. Read it. Think it over. Read it again, and let the truth sink in.

"Great continental savants, like Virchow, Hueppe, Lehmen, Eylenburg, von Leyden, Mendel, Fraenzel, as well as physiologists, doctors and food experts of our own country as Prof. Robinson, Dr. Wiley, Dr. Woods Hutchinson, Prof. Allyn, Mr. Alfred Mc Cann and Dr. Goudiss have bestowed much attention on coffee and have recognized it as the cause of many cases of chronic caffeine poisoning.

Prof. Hueppe designates the symptoms as palpitations, tremor, fear, exultations, headaches, dizziness and insomnia.

Other scientists say that coffee drinking can be the cause of heart trouble, palpitations, dilatation of the heart and disease of the arteries (arteriosclerosis)."

Any coffee drinker who feels the onset of ill health and discomfort, and is in doubt as to the cause, can easily find out if coffee has anything to do with it.

HORSE BLANKET FOR COVERING

Sanitary Inspector Had to Reprimand Meat Vendor

GOOD MARKET TODAY

Sanitary Inspector Spence had occasion this morning to severely reprimand a vendor who hauled meat to the market wrapped in a horse blanket. This did not look good to the inspector whose warning will likely be heeded in future. It was not long 'ere the same meat reposed on a nice white sheet.

Today's market was good in every respect. Several marked differences in prices have occurred since last week. The cost of butter and eggs which prevailed a couple of weeks back have changed places and now eggs are 32 cents while butter went as high at 35 cents. CHICAGO, Feb. 19.—Despite strong and excited market conditions at Liverpool a fresh advance of 2 1-4c here in the price of wheat was more than wiped out. MONTREAL, Feb. 20. — Charles Savary, a hydrographical surveyor attached to the Naval Service Department at Ottawa, yesterday gave evidence in the C. P. R. suit against the Storstad owners for $3,000,000 for the sinking of the Empress of Ireland.

He said the British and American charts used in the inquiry at Quebec were incorrect. The hull of the Empress was approximately one mile from the spot shown on the British and American charts.

COL. VICTOR WILLIAMS BORN OF WARRIOR RACE

Commandant of Recent Camp at Valcartier is the Son of Colonel Arthur Williams, of Port Hope Who is Known as the Hero of Batoche, and Grandson of a Veteran of the War of 1812

On the crest of the lofty bluff that overlooks the waters of Lake Ontario to the westward of the town of Port Hope stand two or three fine old mansions, built in the English style and surrounded by spacious, wooded parks. They are to-day the property of wealthy Americans, but years ago, when they were first built, they formed the landed estates of a little group of aristocratic English settlers. Through propinquity and inter-marriage the families became closely associated. For years they occupied a foremost place not alone in Port Hope but in the country at large. Then in process of time changes came about. Some died, some migrated to other parts, until to-day practically none are left in the old town—a story familiar enough to the people of most of the smaller centres of Ontario.

To one of these old Port Hope families belongs Lieut.-Col. Victor Arthur Seymour Williams, whose name has become well-known to Canadians since the outbreak of the war. As adjutant-general at headquarters, as camp commandant at Valcartier, and now as a valued officer of the first contingent, who has already been under fire at the front, he has been for months prominently in the public eye. He was born forty-eight years ago at Penryn Park, the more westerly of the group of estates already referred to, and spent his boyhood and youth amid their pleasant surroundings.

The Williams family was founded in Canada by John Tucker Williams, an officer of the Royal Navy, who was sent out during the war of 1812-15 to take command of a gunboat on Lake Ontario. After the war was over he decided to remain in Canada and accordingly settled at Port Hope. He was again active in a military way in 1837 when he took command of the Durham regiment, which had been raised to assist in quelling the rebellion of that year. When Port Hope was given its first town council he was elected mayor, and later he was elected member of Parliament for the riding of East Durham in the Parliament of United Canada.

His eldest son, and the father of Lieut.-Col. Victor Williams, was Arthur T. H. Williams, who was born in 1837. Colonel Arthur Williams is known to fame as the hero of Batoche, and a fine monument to his memory stands in the market square at Port Hope. A lawyer by profession, he served his town in many capacities. At confederation he was the first member elected by East Durham to the Provincial Legislature, and in 1878 he was returned to the House of Commons. He rose to be the commanding officer of the 46th Regiment, seeing service during the Fenian invasion and again during the Northwest rebellion.

The history of Canada contains the story of Col. Williams' gallant charge at Batoche, which practically ended the rebellion. He had his detractors, and what brave man since the world began, has not? But those who knew him best have only the highest praise for him as a gentleman and soldier. His death occurred shortly after the battle, not from wounds, but from illness brought on by the exposure, aggravated by the treatment he had received from jealous superior officers.

A worthy son of a worthy father is the present Colonel Williams. He is a graduate of the Royal Military College and a former inspector of the Northwest Mounted Police. In 1893 he was given a commission in the Royal Canadian Dragoons, rising by 1907 to be the commanding officer of the regiment. For a time he resided in Toronto as commandant of the Royal School of Cavalry, being later promoted to the post of adjutant-general at headquarters, where he was stationed at the outbreak of hostilities. He saw active service in South Africa, was twice mentioned in despatches and gained the Queen's medal with five clasps. A thorough-going soldier, he has behind him the training and tradition of two generations of sturdy, self-reliant Canadian forebears. Incidentally his mother was a daughter of the Hon. Benjamin Seymour, a member of the Senate, and another representative of the old Port Hope aristocracy.

Led Prisoners In Worship.

Davidson Ketchum, the Canadian and Trinity College undergraduate, who was interned in Berlin in August while pursuing his musical studies, is at last heard of through the report of the Berlin Anglican chaplain to his bishop under date of Dec. 2 as follows:

"I was allowed to take my first service for interned Englishmen at Ruhleben on Sunday last in a hall beneath the grandstand with 2,000 present. A Canadian member of our C.E.M.S. at St. George's had trained a magnificent choir of 30 to 40 men who led the singing and rendered the anthem, "Behold He Cometh" splendidly. The singing especially of "O Come, O Come Emmanuel" was quite thrilling. I am now to be allowed to take service in the camp every Sunday."

The camp at Ruhleben race course is now said to accommodate well over 6,000 of the interned. Other information had described this young Canadian as himself conducting the services before the chaplain was allowed entrance to the camp, speaking well for the leadership of the young man.

Strong Hack Saw Blades.

The layman watching a tiny hack saw blade working its way through a tough piece of steel is filled with wonder, for it seems like putting a tiny boy to do the task of a giant. The latest idea is that of making a saw which has a soft, flexible back with hard tempered teeth. At a test of the strength of this blade it was found that it would support two men, representing a total weight of 283 pounds, without breaking.

LUCK IN A BLUNDER.

A Story of Frederick the Great and a Frightened Ensign.

During the last evening of my stay at Friedrichsruhe Bismarck was at his best. He was in excellent spirits. After dinner we lit pipes, and well filled tankards of beer were handy. The prince seated himself in his long armchair, put his feet upon a leg rest, and evidently he was settled down for a good talk.

He asked me what I should like him to relate. I said, "Pray, sir, tell me any story that comes into your head." Puffing vigorously at his pipe, the following story was slowly developed:

"My grandfather served for three years under Frederick the Great and told me this anecdote: An ensign made a blunder during the maneuvers of troops at a review. The king, as was his wont when annoyed, fell into a violent rage and pursued the terrified ensign, stick in hand. The young soldier ran for very life and jumped a ditch, leaving the king upon the other side shaking his stick at him in a fury.

"Shortly after the escape of the ensign the colonel of the regiment came up to the king and said, 'Your majesty, the young man committed a blunder doubtless. I have just received his resignation from your majesty's service,' placing the document into the king's hands. 'I am sorry for it, for he was a good officer, but he can take no other step under the circumstances.'

"The king answered, 'Send him to me.' The ensign was sent for and came, trembling, lest this time the stripes should in reality fall upon his shoulders or, still worse, he might be sent to prison. Without any preface the king replied, 'Here is your captaincy, sir, which I endeavored to give you this morning, but you ran away so swiftly that my old legs could not catch you up.'"—Sir W. B. Casual Sympathy.

"Your daughter told me to come and ask your consent to our marriage," said the nervous young man.

"She did!" responded Mr. Cumrox. "And you came hustling right along, although you knew you'd probably find me in a bad humor. And you knew also that so long as Gladys and her ma had made up their minds my consent or refusal wouldn't make a particle of difference. Young man you're being put through your family discipline too early."

Watch Crystals.

A few factories in Europe make all the watch crystals used in the world. These comprise five in Lorraine, two in France, two in Switzerland, one in Alsace and one in Bohemia. The annual output is about 800,000 gross. Hand labor is employed to a great extent in making the crystals, and the wages paid are very small.

Old Dutch Legend

An old statue in the steeple near the bells at Sluis, in Holland, which was originally erected in honor of Jantje van Sluis, is worked by mechanical means, which cause it to strike the bell at every hour and a half with a hammer.

Jantje was a bellringer and watchman during the eighty years' war with Spain. On the night of June 12, 1606, Du Terrail, a Spanish captain, resolved to recover Sluis, the principal fortress of Zeeland, from Prince Maurice of Orange, who had conquered it two years previously.

When the clock struck nine it was arranged that the Spanish soldiers should sound a false alarm at one gate in order to draw the Dutch soldiers away from another, thus leaving a means of ingress for the enemy.

Providentially Jantje forgot to wind up the clock till late in the evening, and, being terribly afraid of ghosts, he did it so hastily that he damaged the works. Another story avers that he was intoxicated, the result of Sluis fair, which had been held on that afternoon.

Be that as it may, Terrail waited in vain to hear the familiar striking of the old clock, and thus the attack was put off till midnight. In the meantime the garrison had suspected something amiss and were on the alert. Consequently the Spaniards were repulsed with great loss.

Jantje had accidentally saved his town, and to honor him his fellow citizens erected the bell ringing statue to his perpetual memory.—London Tatler.

O'Leary a Mounted Policeman.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—Le.-Corpl Michael O'Leary, first battalion of the Irish Guards, who has been awarded the Victoria Cross, is a member of the Northwest Mounted Police, returning here as a reservist last August. The exploit for which he has just been distinguished occurred this month, when, forming one of a storming party which advanced against the enemy's barricades, he rushed to the front and himself killed five Germans who were holding the first barricade, after which he attacked the second barricade, about sixty yards further on, which he captured after killing three of the enemy and making prisoners of two more. O'Leary thus practically captured the enemy's position by himself and prevented the rest of the attacking party from being fired upon.

COLLINGWOOD IN SEMI-FINALS

Won Round With Port Colborne by 9 to 5

COLLINGWOOD, Feb. 20. — Collingwood intermediates entered the semi-finals last night by defeating Port Colborne by 5 goals to 3, winning the round by 9 to 5. The visitors played a very aggressive game and showed clever stickhandling and speed. There was not much to choose between the teams. The score was tied three times during the game. The locals led in the first period by 2 goals to 1, while the visitors tallied two in the second period and the locals one. The score remained three all until a few minutes before the final gong, when the locals braced up and scored two in short order. Shortly after the second period started, one of the visitors was hurt and went off for the balance of the game, Telfer going off to even up. For the visitors, Knoll, Erwin and German played a fine game, while McLeod, Walton and Belcher were probably best for the locals, Walton and Belcher each scoring two goals.

The line-up:

Port Colborne — Goal, Armstrong; point, German; cover, McDonald; rover, Erwin; centre, Knoll; right, Smith; left, Agnew.

Referee—Lou Marsh, Toronto.

Sand Pit Puzzles.

Nebraska's sand hill region offers one of the most unusual fields for scientific investigation in this country. In some places the wind begins its work on the very top of a hill. Gradually, while the outline of the hill remains intact, the hole goes down deeper until it reaches hardpan or rock, where water collects. The top of the excavation may be only a few yards across, and then the pit has the appearance of a great well. The air seems to go down into one of these holes with a sort of suction, and the day is never so calm but that some sand rises from the pit. It always piles out on the northeast side. The excavations are not confined to the hills. They may start on the level ground and then as in the other case, the hole will go down to water. The level land excavations may be of any size from a pond of many acres to a narrow pit three times as deep as it is wide. They are called, in western parlance, "blowouts."—Argonaut.

FLESTER—STOCKER.

A quiet wedding took place on Friday morning, February nineteenth, at twelve o'clock, in Minneapolis, at St. Matthews' Episcopal Church, when Miss Lilly Stocker, daughter of Mr. Walter Stocker of this city, was united in marriage to Mr. Wm. M. Flester of Winnipeg. The marriage was performed by the Rev. James Trimble, of Minneapolis, and the bride was accompanied by her father.

Mr. and Mrs. Flester will reside in Winnipeg, leaving Minneapolis Saturday evening.

Miss A. Dawson of the millinery department of Richard Hall and Son, Limited, is in New York, purchasing new spring millinery for the Hall Company.

Miss Eva Sourial, of Toronto, is the guest of Mrs. Bruce Law, Sherbrooke St., for a few weeks.

LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN.

A very interesting meeting of the executive of the above body was held yesterday afternoon with a splendid attendance. Early in the meeting Mr. Carson of the Y. M. C. A. was introduced and spoke on the subject of "Supervised Playgrounds." This is a branch of work which the ladies have been most anxious to take up, but lack of funds has always been a drawback. Mr. Carson however succeeded in re-arousing their interest in the subject, showing, besides many other important and interesting points, the added necessity and responsibility in time of war of keeping our boys and girls physically strong and fit. For the time being the committee on public health is combining with the committee on supervised playgrounds and they will go thoroughly into the matter of play grounds and see what can be done.

On March 9th an open meeting of the council will be held, at which Mrs. Willoughby Cummings, D.L.C., secretary of the National Council of Women, will speak on Women's Work in War Time.

C. P. R. TRAIN SERVICE.

Bobcaygeon Independent: Mr. Bottum received a copy of the decision arrived at by the Dominion Railway Commission on the appeal made by the citizens of Bobcaygeon regarding the reduction of train service. The order made by the board of commissioners is that the old service shall be resumed at the opeinng of navigation.

Expired When About to Board His Train

Mr. R. C. Braund has been notified of the sudden death at Smith's Falls of W. E. Braund, who owns a general store in Smith's Falls and Brockville. The deceased visited Smith's Falls on Thursday to see his niece who was ill in the hospital. On his return to board a train he fell dead.

Both Mr. R. C. Braund and the deceased came from the Braund family which originally came from Spain. About the time of the Spanish Armada the family became British subjects and settled in Devonshire, England.

Since then the Braund descendants have scattered to all parts of the world, being sailors, soldiers, fishermen and merchants.

CITY'S EVIDENCE

plant valuation to $85,000 and the company's valuation to $198,000, which represents the depreciated value of the bare physical property with an added value as a going concern to the city of $44,000.

It will be readily recognized therefore the wide difference in figures placed upon the system by the opposing parties.

Mr. Tilley's Arguments.

At three o'clock W. N. Tilley, representative of the company commenced his address to the arbitrators. He spoke for nearly two hours going over the whole business from the beginning reviewing the steps taken to arrive at the valuation figures. He laid special emphasis upon the point of compensation maintaining that the company should be compensated in view of the fact that the city was taking over a complete plant, connected up and carrying on business. In computing this compensation it should be done upon a basis other than just the plain buying and selling of an article. It must be remembered that there was no open market for the system. The arbitrators must find what was fair and equitable to all parties. In arriving at a finding the arbitrators must bear in mind what were the prevailing prices at the time the city had its scrap valuation made. The arbitrators could not disregard the fact that the prices of various of the fixtures on the system fluctuated and that on Mr. Jeffrey's admission the hydro had smashed the market prices for meters. It would be a monstrous oversight for the arbitrators to disregard that. There were many intangible values that must be taken into consideration and the fact that when they took over the plant it was connected up, in working order and when taken over would be immediately earning revenue.

He pointed out where the estimates of the city and the company differed and sought to show where the responsibility lay for these different figures.

Mr. M. K. Cowan, K. C., in a very able reply, presented up a fine case for the city. He referred to the enormous profits which the company had been earning in Peterborough, its gross revenue being just double its gross operating expenses. In the last ten years the gross profits of the company amounted to the enormous sum of $197,881. On these grounds he maintained that nothing should be taken into consideration by the arbitrators in the way of making allowance for compensation to the company for their deprivation of profits. Mr. Cowan then went on to define the principles of indemnity and compensation, quoting several cases where judgments had been handed down in Dominion and United States law courts. He held that the company should not be compensated and that the company were now back where they were in the beginning without their franchise. He figured that 50 per cent. of every dollar collected from the city went into the coffers of the company.

Mr. Strachan Johnston, who represented the bondholders of the company, also made a strong address, contending that the arbitrators should remember that they were entitled to indemnity for loss through the expropriation of the system by the city.

The Westinghouse Company of Hamilton has offered the use of its building in the west end of the city as quarters for the third contingent being mobilized there.

PETERBOROUGH OFFICERS ATTEND WEDDING OF CANADIAN GUNNER

Major Mills and Lieut. Matthews Were Among Guests at the Ceremony

A romantic wedding, the groom being a gunner in the artillery division of the first Canadian contingent, billeted at Devizes, and the bride a young American widow, who crossed the ocean for the ceremony, is told of in The Wiltshire Advertiser of January 14 as follows:

"One of the incidents of the week—probably the incident — happened on Tuesday, just after noon. It was nothing less than a wedding—a Canadian wedding, too. The principal figures in such an auspicious event rarely forget the circumstances, and it is risking nothing to say that so unusual were the circumstances of this little ceremony that it will be indelibly imprinted on the minds of the parties concerned.

No Ordinary Parade.

The gathering of a small party of N.C.O.'s and men of the Divisional Headquarters' Staff was the first indication that anything unusual was moving; they assembeld at the Long street end of the avenue leading to St. John's Church and the happy smiles that wreathed their faces told that it was no ordinary parade. Then some spied their little bags from which frail specks of confetti fell. That was enough. Civilians put their own, and, as it happened, the correct interpretation upon this ocular evidence of the impending event, and quite a knot of interested spectators gathered at a point in the street opposite the entrance to the avenue.

"Eventually the military party formed up and marched to the north door, on either side of which they formed a guard of honor to await the arrival of the parties. The bridegroom was Gunner Gilbert Tyndale-Lea, of the Headquarters staff, 1st Artillery Brigade. When in private life he is in business in New York City his private house being at Montclair, New Jersey. He is not a stranger to Wiltshire. He was for a year or so with the Rev. E. Anderson, about 1891-2, when the gentleman held the living of Berwick Basset; it was during the absence of the gunner's parents when his father was on military service. The bride was Mrs. Anne Barlow Osborne, a young widow from Philadelphia. She arrived in England the previous Wednesday, since when she resided in the Brittox.

Best Man From Revelstoke.

When the bridegroom arrived, shortly after 12.30, the guard of honor sprang to attention, and just after he and his best man (Mr. E. A. Boyle, of Revelstoke, British Columbia) passed into the church, the guard followed and took their seats to witness the ceremony, there being a good sprinkling of civilians also present. The presence of the guard of honor, composed of the bridegroom's more immediate friends, showed the esteem in which he was held by them, and this was even more strikingly demonstrated by the attendance of some of the principal officers. These latter included Lieut.-Col. E. W. R. Morrison, D.S.O. (the Commanding Officer of the Brigade), Lieut.-Col. W. O. H. Dodds, Major Mills, Captain Cosgrave, and Captain Kelly, of the Headquarters' Staff; besides Captain Anderson and Lieut. Matthews.

Soon after the officers' motor car had brought them to the entrance gate, the bride arrived also by automobile. She was accompanied by her cousin (Mr. Jack Clayton), who is well known in the journalistic profession as the New York correspondent of the New York Sun. He gave her away. She was attired in a dress of chiffon velvet, with saxe plush coat, black velvet hat, and also wore a set of dark fox furs. Marriage music sounded from within the church (Mr. H. H. Baker being at the organ) as the bride entered, and the congregation rose to meet her. The ceremony was performed by the Rector of Devizes (the Rev. P. W. Filleul), and Canon Almond, Chaplain with the Divisional Artillery.

Passed Through Soldiers.

The Rector took the preliminary part of the service, also giving the charge and the Blessing, but the actual ceremony was performed by Canon Almond. As the party left the altar rails for the vestry to sign the register, the "Wedding March" was played. The soldiers lined up inside the church for the wedding party to pass through the lines. The bride was presented with a bouquet of white chrysanthemums by Regimental Sergeant-Major Clifford after the ceremony. It was tied with streamers of red, white, and blue ribbon. Even before the bride and bridegroom left the church they were showered with confetti, and as they proceeded down the avenue to the waiting motor car the "lads" followed it at the double and there was a storm of confetti and rice, officers and men alike joining in this form of showing their esteem for the newly married pair. The shower was at its height as the young couple entered the automobile, which, however, was soon on the move. Unconsciously to the Gunner and his young wife, the magic words, "We are married," had appeared on the front of the car, while the ceremony was in progress, while attached to the rear were enough old shoes, tin cans, and such like to last more than an ordinary lifetime. Round after round of cheers went up in honor of the soldier and his newly-wedded wife as the car moved away, such as which few can remember as marking the celebration of a marriage at St. John's.

SUGGESTION BY ALD. JOHNSTON

Could City Solicitor Help Judge With Investigation

THE SCHOOL BOARD

A letter was read at the special session of the Council, held last evening, from Judge Huycke, stating his willingness to conduct the investigation into Board of Education matters and asking the Council to appoint a solicitor to conduct the prosecution. On the request of City Solicitor Gordon, who is extremely pressed for time these days, the matter was laid over till the next meeting of Council.

Ald. Johnston asked if the city solicitor could not act for the city and conduct the prosecution. In his mind the city solicitor should know the facts of the case rather well. The question remained unanswered, but it is Ald. Johnston's idea to champion that suggestion at the next meeting.

FOE MAKES ATTACK IN DEEP FORMATIONS AND SUFFER HEAVY LOSSES

Allies Positions Extended by Carrying Trench Between the Argonne and the Meuse

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 22. — The official statement given out today says: "There is nothing important to add to the official communication issued last night. Between the Argonne and the Meuse at the outskirts of the wood at Cheppy, we carried one of the enemy's trenches and extended our positions.

"At Leesprges we won some ground at one point and fell back slightly at another.

"Infantry fighting, in which the enemy had three regiments engaged, occurred in Alsace on both banks of the Fecht. Our advance portion fell back on our main line which we are strongly occupying. The enemy attacked, serried in deep formations, and as a result suffered heavy losses."

CONTRIBUTION FROM CITY ENGINEER IN CONTRACT RECORD

In a recent issue of the Contract Record, a weekly publication dealing with matters of interest to civil engineers, a symposium appeared in which the ideas of the leading engineers of Canada were voiced on "The possibilities of developing trade within Canada and the Empire."

The contribution of R. H. Parsons, city engineer, was:

"Two years ago we had need for paving blocks in the city of Peterborough. In order to get quick delivery it was necessary to go to the United States for them. There did not seem to be any manufacturers of first-class paving blocks in Canada. Surely somewhere in this great Dominion there are deposits of clay suitable for the manufacture of first-class blocks—if not in Canada, in the British Empire!

"The cities of Canada must purchase large numbers of these blocks every year. Why not spend this money with our own people, instead of sending it over to the United States? With the freight and duty against United States manufacturers, our own manufacturers should be able to compete with them and give us a first-class block."

LINDSAY COUPLE CELEBRATE THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

Lindsay, Feb. 22.—Mr. and Mrs. Denis Fitzpatrick celebrated their golden wedding at their country home near here Saturday. Mr. Fitzpatrick was born January 18, 1839, and Mrs. Fitzpatrick (nee Ellen Meehan) was born September 18, 1841.

The celebration took the form of a banquet. The bridesmaid and groomsman, now Mr. and Mrs. John P. Fitzpatrick of 63 Havelock Street, Toronto, the only living brother and sister of the bride and groom, were present, with about fifteen other couples who attended the wedding fifty years ago. After the banquet an address was read, the sons and daughters presenting their father and mother with a purse of gold.

There were ten children, nine of whom are living. One of the family, Denis V., now resides at home. Hillary is married and living not far distant. William L. is in Globe, Arizona, and Joseph J., in Bakersfield, California. Robert F. Fitzpatrick, the youngest son, lives in Toronto and is President and Manager of Fitzpatrick & O'Connell, Limited. There are four daughters: Mrs. H. M. Shaw of Perth, Misses Margaret and Mary, graduate nurses, and practising in Montclair, New Jersey, and Sister St. Joseph of St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough. Twelve out of fourteen grandchildren were present for the celebration.

Premier Asquith Says Governments Have Matter Under Consideration

COUNTER ACTION TO GERMAN POLICY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 22. — Replying to a question in the House of Commons this afternoon, Premier Asquith said: "The Allied Governments are considering what action it would be proper to take in the way of reprisals against the German policy of attacking and destroying British, Allied and neutral merchant vessels without warning and without an attempt being made to save the lives of civilians and innocent crews.

"Pending a decision, which I hope will very soon be announced, I cannot make any statement regarding the nature or scope of the measures to be taken."

MAIL BOAT ESCAPED ARMORED MERCHANTMAN

Five Shells Were Fired When She Ignored Order to Stop

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PLYMOUTH, England, Feb. 22. — The Western Daily Mercury says that when the Australian mail boat Ma-loja, with four hundred passengers on board, was entering the English Channel on Saturday afternoon, she was ordered to stop by an unknown armored merchantman. The mail boat ignored the order and made for Plymouth, whereupon the merchantman fired five shells at her. They all fell short, and the Ma-jola reached Plymouth safely.

OTONABEE YOUTHS PAID FINE OF $100 WITH COSTS

Also Bound Over to Keep Peace for One Year by Magistrate Dumble's Judgment

Redmond Assessed an Extra $26.50 for Damaging Cutter

Judgment was handed down by Police Magistrate Dumble today in the case of Michael Fitzgerald versus Louis Shaw and Harry Redmond, who were convicted of circulating scurrilous, filthy and obscene reading matter injurious to the good name of complainants. They were ordered to pay a fine of $100 and costs, amounting to $116.15, and agreed to be bound over to keep the peace on their own bonds of $1000 each, made up of two sureties of $500 each, said term to last for one year. Following was the magistrate's ruling:

Michael Fitzgerald versus Louis Shaw and Harry Redmond.

"The defendants are charged with having, on December, 1914, and February, 1915, without legal justification in excuse, published a defamatory libel likely to injure the reputation of Michael Fitzgerald and his wife, Catherine Fitzgerald, by exposing them to hatred, ridicule and contempt.

The defendants are young men of most respectable families, living in the neighborhood of the Fitzgerald family. The evidence showed that the offence consisted in posting in most conspicuous places along the highways scurrilous posters, written in plain writing and printing — the names of both Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald were on them; the language was filthy, and on some of the papers obscene pencil drawings were made. There were vile insinuations reflecting on both Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald. Besides the posters, numerous written and hand-printed papers were circulated, some directed to Mr. Fitzgerald, were sent through the Peterborough post office and some were dropped in the post boxes along the rural routes, so that they came to the hands of strangers; a lot of these papers were gathered up and brought to Mr. Fitzgerald by neighbors.

After the arrest of prisoners, they owned up and confessed they had written all the papers complained of and posted them up and sent some by mail.

The offence was long continued, so that the entire neighborhood was familiar with it.

There appears to me no justification whatever. There was dissimulation on the part of Redmond, who posed as innocent, and intimated that he was innocent, and he would make it hot for anyone who charged him as being the author. I find that both the defendants co-operated and jointly wrote and published the defamatory matter complained of. That it was defamatory to both Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald; that it was vulgar, coarse and obscene. The language and pictures were vile. I find both defendants guilty and adjudge that they do pay a fine of $100 and costs, amounting to $116.15, to be paid forthwith, and in default of payment they be imprisoned in the common gaol of the county of Peterborough for six months."

Led to Feuds.

In commenting upon the case the magistrate expressed his utter abhorrence of the whole proceedings. Such affairs sometimes created feuds and led to bloodshed. He regretted that the two young men nursed such bad feeling, and there was an amount of trickery and double dealing shown that was far from creditable. It was not too late for them to see their folly, or pull up and pursue a wiser course. He hoped there would be nothing further heard of the matter.

F. D. Kerr, on behalf of the prisoners, thanked the magistrate for his leniency. Both young men had asked him to tender Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald a public apology for their actions and to inform them that nothing derogatory to their standing or character was known to them. Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald were willing to have a minimum penalty inflicted.

Mr. Kerr felt that the bonding of the two young men was rather unwise but, as the magistrate entertained different views, his opinion prevailed.

Redmond Assessed $26.50.

In the case of Harry Redmond, who was convicted of throwing a stone and damaging a cutter belonging to complainant, His Worship fined him $10 and costs, including compensation, amounting to $26.50 altogether. The approximate fines, therefore, totalled $142.65. Louis Shaw was completely exonerated from complicity on the latter charge and was discharged.

NO TRACE OF BODY.

Although a sharp lookout has been kept, with the hope of recovering the body of the late Wm. Whittaker, who, to all indications, was drowned in the Otonabee River, during the night of January 4th or 5th, no success has been attained.

Dr. L. W. Johnstone, of Sydney Mines, was nominated to contest the riding of North Cape Breton and Victoria in the Conservative interest at the next Dominion election.

Bordeaux, Feb. 22.—The right leg of Madame Sarah Bernhardt was amputated this morning.

ONE HEIGHT STORMED ONE HUNDRED TIMES

Impossible to Draw True Picture of Situation in Carpathians

ENEMY CAPTURE STANISLAU

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 22. — An official statement issued last night at Petrograd says: In South Galicia the enemy have occupied Stanislau; southeast of Dukla the Russians have captured the heights, and in the past two days have taken one thousand prisoners.

Hungarian papers say no true picture can be drawn of the situation in the Carpathians, where a gigantic battle has been in progress for fifty days. Along a line of the mountains three hundred miles in length, there is one height which has been stormed one hundred times, and even now neither side can claim to hold it.

Travllers arriving in Holland from Germany say the spirits of the German people are being kept up by such tales as the surrender of the entire Russian general staff in East Prussia, of three entire Russian army corps, and the sinking of the British battle cruiser Lion, of which a fake photograph appeared in the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger.

Local Plumber Was Fined $20

At this morning's court, George A. Brenton of Peterborough came up on a charge of infraction of the local plumbing bylaw. It will be remembered that the accused appeared in court to answer a similar charge, but the case was withdrawn. Since then it appears that Brenton proceeded with his plumbing contract, and another information was laid against him by Sanitary Inspector Douglas. At this morning's session the accused was fined $20 and $3.45 costs. The accused was represented by Mr. L. V. O'Connor, while Mr. A. M. Fulton represented the town.—Lindsay Post.

VIENNA DEMANDS HUNGARY'S GRAIN

LONDON, Feb. 22.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Vienna says that the burgomaster of Vienna and the president of the Vienna Chamber of Commerce yesterday visited the Austrian Prime Minister and insisted that measures be taken to provide sufficient grain and flour to meet the city's needs.

"They said they thought," the correspondent adds, "that Hungary should be compelled to supplement Austria's inadequate supply of grain, and that all supplies from both countries should be treated as a common stock. The Prime Minister assured them that the Cabinet was perfecting a plan to relieve the situation.

"The people seems indignant over what they style Hungary's manifest reluctance to share with Austria her surplus grain."

Becker Seeks Third Trial.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22. — Counsel for Charles Becker, now in the death house at Sing Sing, for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, served notice Saturday upon District Attorney Perkins that he would move in the Supreme Court on Feb. 25 for a new trial for Becker. The affidavit, made in Philadelphia, by James Marshall, repudiating testimony given by him at Becker's second trial, counsel said, was to be the basis of the notice.

Presentation to Volunteer

A very pleasant time was spent at Gilmour Memorial Church when the young men of the church presented Norman A. Young, eldest son of Mr. Alexander Young, of the fourth line of Smith, with a Bible and a pair of military brushes. Mr. Young has enlisted with the 8th Mounted Rifles. After a short program of speeches and songs, refreshments were served by the ladies and all sang "He's a jolly good fellow," and wished him a safe return.

WITHDRAWAL OF RUSSIANS IS OFFICIALLY EXPLAINED

Swift Turning Movement Exposed Flank of Army Corps, Which Was Much Cut up

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 22. — The official explanation of the withdrawal of the Russians from East Prussia, after describing the concentration of Germans by means of their strategic railways, which the Russians were unable to successfully oppose, states that the right wing of the tenth army, to escape being surrounded, made a swift turning movement in the direction of Kovno. This movement opposed the flank of the army corps next in order, which was consequently much cut up, only broken portions escaping.

BERLIN STATEMENT ON CAPTURES.

BERLIN, Feb. 22. — A German official statement says the pursuit after the winter battle in the Mazurian district has ended. The total captures have been increased to seven generals, more than one hundred thousand men, fifty cannon and incalculable quantites of other material.

DUTY OF CANADIANS TOWARD IMMIGRANTS

Practice of Using Foreigners for Low, Selfish and Monetary Purposes Denounced by H. H. Stevens M.P.

"It is the duty of the people of Canada to raise a standard of national life that will give every man an opportunity of making good."

Lofty and stirring sentiments of this nature were freely uttered yesterday afternoon by H. H. Stevens, M.P., of Vancouver, who held the undivided attention of hundreds of men whom he addressed in the Empire theatre on "Canada's Duty to Her Immigrants." Mr. Stevens was in Peterborough some years ago and addressed the Canadian Club on that occasion. He spent many years of his boyhood here and received a public school education. Since then he has made a name for himself in the west whither he went twenty-one years ago. Few public men in the Dominion have made such a study of the immigration question as he and today he is looked upon as one of the leading authorities on the problem.

Mr. Stevens is vigorously opposed to foreign immigration into this country or any other country unless the newcomers are capable of being assimilated, and are willing to adopt the customs and life of the people who live therein. This thing of having a foreign quarter was radically wrong. If foreigners or immigrants could not fit in and be assimilated they should be shut out. Such a thing as a radical subdivision in a country was bound to result otherwise. The colonization of foreigners was exemplified in the west where whole colonies of Galicians, Doukhobors, Ruthenians, Roumanians, and Germans could be found, carrying on the life, customs, and habits, and living up to the traditions of the countries from which they came and which were not consistent with those held dear by Canada. Even in Eastern Canada there was too much of the foreign element or foreign quarter being set up. In the city of Toronto forty thousand were hived in one section of the city.

Must be Assimilated.

In dealing with these people Canadians should be careful. It was a tremendous problem to assimilate them and Canada should beware lest she squander her citizenship upon such people. Mr. Stevens did not wish to be understood as speaking disparagingly of these immigrants. They were welcome and were wanted as long as they could be made into good and useful citizens. It was the duty of Canadians to see that every one of these men got a square deal. The responsibility was ours.

Canada's Possibilities.

Before getting down to his subject Mr. Stevens led up to it by referring to the rich resources and great possibilities that lay in the Dominion of Canada. Her natural resources were being reserved and the administration of her law was second to none in the world. There were two views entertained by many in regard to the peopling of Canada and one was as

FELL FROM TRAIN

John Seeney of Havelock in Critical Condition Due to Injuries and Exposure

John Seeney, an employe of the C. P. R., residing at Havelock, was brought to the city last evening and taken to Nicholls Hospital where he lies in a serious condition, due to injuries received Saturday night, when he fell from the C. P. R. midnight train.

His injuries consist of broken bones, internal injuries and bruises. His feet and hands were frozen. He lay on the side of the track during the night and some part of yesterday, before he was discovered by sectionmen. He fell from the train when it was between Norwood and Havelock.

Dr. Cameron attended the man Sunday night but could do very little as his condition was then precarious, the patient also being unconscious. Little hope was held out today for his recovery.

Seeney is a married man with three sons. Members of his family came to the city this morning.

Late this afternoon, the patient was reported as being a little better. He is conscious.

ONE CASE HAS BEEN SETTLED

As the Pressick vs. Cordova Mines case has been settled, there will be but two civil cases to be tried at the Supreme Court which opens tomorrow. Benjamin Clute is suing the G. T. R. for $1500 as compensation for the loss of a foot while the case of Bank of Toronto vs. Brownscombe, Hay, Bell and Ferguson will also be gone on with. The one criminal case is that of Edgar Grose charged with murder.

O. H. A. FINAL POSTPONED.

As Rankin, McCamus and Murphy of St. Michael's are on the sick list, the final home-and-home game between the Irishmen and Victorias will not be played tonight. It has been postponed till next Monday.

As His Worship is in Kingston today, attendig the Military Carnival, he may, perchance, bring home a new flag for the customs house.

THE GLOBE AND THE C. N. R.

THE GLOBE tries to pull Laurier free from the C. N. R. by saying he never sanctioned or granted any money to the building of the C. N. R. through British Columbia. That is true. Laurier did not have time enough. He gave M. and M. all they wanted for other sections, and before he could help them build the mountain sections he was turned out of office. But the damage had already been done by granting them huge sums for their eastern and prairie sections. The Globe can't get away from the C. N. R., neither can Laurier nor the Canadian people.

HAS ENLISTED.

MR. J. P. LAYCOCK, M. A., whose name has been familiar to readers of the Daily Review by means of several fine articles he contributed to it on imperial subjects, has enlisted in the Second Contingent of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, and will shortly go to the front. Mr. Laycock was a brilliant student of Queen's University, having taken his master's degree, the university medal in Colonial History, and an essay prize in Political Science in the year of his graduation, 1912. He was the Queen's research student in the Dominion Archives in 1912, and, in company with Professor Grant, has produced a volume of documents on the Clergy Reserves, for the Champlain Society. He is writing, besides, an exhaustive treatment of that subject, and a treatise also on Immigration. His literary work will now have to be foregone for drill, marching and musketry practice. Mr. Laycock is one among a relatively large number that have gone from Queen's University to uphold the integrity of the Empire. Some are with the First Contingent, and others are in the second and third. Mr. Laycock does not look for the end of the war before a year and a half, and in the meantime he is going to do his part. Canadian university students and graduates have responded nobly to the call of duty, and Canada is proud of her university men who are in the ranks of her defenders.

THE NEEDS OF A MODERN ARMY.

SUPPLYING the needs of a modern army is one of the biggest tasks and one that many people do not consider. The idea that all men who enlist go to the firing line and handle only a sword or bayonet is erroneous in that it overlooks the other vast army necessary to provision the actual fighters. A modern army is really a fighting city in which men do all the work and which can be moved quickly from place to place. The only women in connection with it are the nurses. Preparing the meals for even a division of 20,000 men is a very big job. The bread alone required means a small army of bakers and men to look after stores of flour and fuel. Then there are all the other vast stores of material that have to be transported to the firing lines, such as ammunition, repair parts, barbed wire and trenching apparatus. The vastness of the work of maintaining a modern army may be gained by the fact that during one month the supplies furnished by the British ordnance department included 450 miles of telephone wire, 530,000 sand bags and 10,000 pounds of shoe blacking, while in ten days the ordnance department supplied 120,000 fur waistcoats and 300,000 flannel belts. The average weekly issue of ointment for feet is five tons.

The complexity of the work is illustrated by the fact that the index of the stores include 50,000 separate kinds of articles. Most of these still are obtained from England, but some are being manufactured by the ordnance department in its own workshops in France.

GOOD ROADS.

THE CAMPAIGN for good roads being carried on throughout Canada is only part of the general awakening of the people to the causes which have led to the enormous increase in the prices of the necessaries of life. That the transportation problem is all-important for the farmer-producer is without question. That he may at all seasons reach his markets at a minimum of time and expense is a necessary factor in the making of reasonable prices for his products. For the consumer, good roads have an advantage in the fact that by enabling the farmers to reach the markets in greater numbers, the supplies of produce will be larger and competition will be keener. A further consequence of this larger attendance will be that more attention will be paid to the condition of the produce offered by those displaying it for sale.

In the present campaign for increased production, good roads will play an important part. Motor transportation is being rapidly developed and utilized by the farmers. By this means greater distances can be covered, and farmers at a considerable distance from markets,—with the advent of better roads, will be able to bring their produce to the consumer in larger quantities and at less expense.

FOR THE FARMERS' BENEFIT.

THE DOMINION Government, says a weekly newspaper, has at last developed a species of "practical politics" which has won the approval of even so bitter an opponent as the Winnipeg Free Press, a paper which usually regards anything emanating from the Conservatives at Ottawa as fraught with destruction, and which looks upon Sir Robert Borden and his colleagues as a set of piratical cut-throats who ought to be driven into the sea.

The particular departure which has won the approval of the Free Press is the publicity campaign about to be conducted by the Department of Agriculture, and which has for its object the enlightenment of Canadian farmers on how they may best increase their production to meet the new needs created by the war. The campaign includes a generous use of newspaper advertising space (in which it is understood that the Winnipeg Free Press will share), meetings for farmers to be held in the various agricultural centres which will be addressed by economic and crop experts, and a free distribution of helpful literature. The general scheme has been planned by the Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, and will doubtless result in a great deal of benefit to the farmers and to the country in general. Like the campaign now being organized by the Minister of Public Works, the Hon. Robert Rogers, to help the Canadian manufacturers to a realization of the wonderful opportunities opened up by the war, Mr Burrell's campaign shows that the ministers at Ottawa are not giving their time wholly to scheming about how to keep in power nor to providing opportunities for the faithful to loot the public treasury, as some of their critics, particularly the Winnipeg Free Press, would have the people believe.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

MR. CHARLES M. SCHWAB, who is said to have secured contracts from the Allies amounting to $40,000,000, is one of the best-known steel men in the United States. He was born at Williamsburg, Pa., in 1862. As a boy he drove a stage between two towns in rural Pennsylvania, but abandoned that to enter the service of the Carnegie Company as a stake driver with an engineering squad. He made rapid progress and became chief engineer, assistant manager, and finally superintendent of the Homestead Steel Works. He eventually became president of the Carnegie Steel Company, and later president of the United States Steel Corporation, a position he held for two years. He left that corporation in 1903 and founded the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, which is now proving to be the greatest competitor United States Steel Corporation has.

VISITORS to the Capital at the time of the inspection of the British Columbia regiments, on their recent arrival, say that the B. C. regiments are the finest-looking body of troops yet seen there. The engineers formed their escort. They are not so stalwart and workmanlike in appearance. The large proportion of the western men continue to be British and American reservists. The native Canadian population is not warlike.

SPEAKING of the financial issue, Mr. Rudyard Kipling remarked recently: "The most useful thing that a civilian can do in these busy days is to speak as little as possible, and, if he feels moved to write, to confine his efforts to his cheque book." We have tried this, but the banks, however, fail to appreciate our efforts.

THE GERMANS say they have captured 64,000 prisoners in East Prussia. No wonder the Germans fear for their food supply.

AFTER ALL, the criticism of Hon. W. T. White's budget is not damaging.

A Few Great Things.

(Edith Thomas.)

A few great things our mortal essence bound,
And in its primal health man's being keep;
Such are light, breath, and food, and drink,
and sleep;
As though not lapped in mystery profound
With these the thankful life fulfills her round,
Happy, whose senses glow, whose pulses leap—
The gypsy on the heath's wide, windy sweep—
The youth absorbed in dreams — the victor crowned!

A few great things the soul of man sustain;
These are its breath of life, its food, its rest;
Some few to love us (one to love us best),
And faith in God no trouble can distrain;
Or proud, or lowly, they who entertain
These goodly things shall be of all possessed.

The Mines of Spain.

(Chicago Journal.)

More than one-third of the quicksilver produced in the world last year came from the mines of Spain. Those mines were worked centuries before Christ, and they seem good for centuries more. Other quicksilver supplies are discovered, exploited for a time, and exhausted, but no bottom has been found to the veins of Spanish cinnabar.

Many high authorities hold that other mineral resources of Spain are quite as splendid in proportion as her supremacy in the production of mercury. Spanish iron ore is sometimes shipped to the United States, yet the mines are said to be worked in very clumsy, ineffective fashion. It is even claimed that the coal supplies of the peninsula are superior to those of any other part of the continent, but these, again, are managed in a careless, indolent, unscientific manner.

The Question of Flags.

(Chicago Tribune.)

A warship may use whatever flag it pleases to conceal its identity.

We may protest that the use of the American flag is distasteful to this country, but the international usage which permits a destroyer to fly another flag for the purpose of destruction hardly may forbid a non-combatant to use one to escape destruction.

Go to the Government.

(Kincardine Review.)

There never was a time when self-reliance was more needed than now, but the tendency is for the individual to go to the municipality for assistance; the municipality to the province, and the province to the Dominion. "Go to the Government about it," is the advice most frequently given. The Government is doing the best it can, but its resources are not inexhaustible.

REPORT IS UNSUPPORTED

Berlin Rejoices Over Story of Sinking British Transport

LONDON, Feb. 22.—A report from Berlin of the sinking of the British transport with troops and an accompanying steamer is without confirmation from official sources here. Berlin advices say that all the morning papers featured the report in first page headlines, together with reports of the sinking of other vessels by submarines or mines. Although accounts of the sinking of various other steamers by German submarines or by mines have been passed promptly by British censors, there was no intimation in the London despatches of the destruction of a transport.

Ordered To Sow Wheat.

VENICE, Feb. 22.—(Via London.)—The appeal issued to farmers last Thursday by the Austrian Minister of Agriculture, in which he urged them not to leave a single plot of ground anywhere uncultivated, was followed yesterday by a peremptory decree by the Austrian Government ordering land owners to sow immediately every available part of their ground with spring wheat.

Italy Is Prepared For War.

ROME, Feb. 22.—The proceedings in the Italian Chamber of Deputies Saturday were comparatively peaceful, owing probably to the general belief among the deputies that the Government has done everything in its power to prepare for eventualities.

MUST HAVE A TICKET

Bread and Flour Cannot be Bought in Berlin

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—Bread or flour will not be obtainable here after to-day except upon the presentation of bread tickets, the distribution of which has been ended.

Proprietors of the largest restaurants in the city, with dozens of establishments, announce they have succeeded in making bread containing neither wheat, oats nor barley flour, which can be served their customers without the necessity of presenting bread tickets. The ingredients used in baking these loaves have been kept secret, but they are believed to be mainly rice flour and potatoes.

Artillery Superiority Grows.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—An official eyewitness' account of the recent fighting in France and Belgium was given out Saturday by the French War Department. The writer says:

"During the past ten days detestable weather, continuous rains in some parts and violent snow squalls in others and thick fog have hindered the operations nearly everywhere on the western front.

"Our artillery has been brilliant, and the enemy was unable to equal our fire. The French superiority in ammunition and supplies is being more and more confirmed."

Roumania To Stay Neutral.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 22—(Via London.)—The Russian Minister to Roumania, M. Poklevsky-Kozell, in a report to the Russian Foreign Minister, M. Sazonoff, says that, according to such information as he has been able to gather, Roumania will continue her present policy of armed and watchful neutrality, taking sides neither for nor against Russia and her allies.

"Russia should not rely upon the co-operation of Roumania," says the Roumanian Minister.

SAFETY FIRST IN DOMINION PARKS

At the request of the Dominion Parks Branch, the E. B. Eddy Company has recently put into effect a very excellent precautionary measure against forest fires. This company is now printing in striking colors and attractive design on their match boxes an effective fire notice, warning the public not to throw away burning matches, especially in the woods. It is a well-known fact that many forest fires are due to carelessness in handling matches.

It is recognized that the best way to get people to realize the danger with matches and fire is to have the necessity of care constantly impressed upon them. It is thought that if a person sees a fire warning notice every time he takes a match from a box, the exercise of care with fire will gradually become a habit with him.

Up to the present time, however, the match itself has also been at fault. If an ordinary match is lighted and allowed to burn from one end to the other, the flame then extinguished, it will be observed that the burned portion remains a live coal for nearly a minute after the flame is almost a minute after the flame is out. The E. B. Eddy Company are undertaking to correct this fault by impregnating their matches so that when the flame is out the match is dead. Some of their matches are now treated in this way, and it is the intention to have all their matches impregnated as soon as machinery can be installed for the purpose.

Other industrial companies are also co-operating with the Dominion Parks Branch in the campaign against destructive fires. Last spring the Canadian Pacific and other railways placed fire warning notices in their smoking cars, and last fall inserted them in their menu cards. Arrangements are also being made with the manager in chief of the C. P. R. hotels to have very neat and attractive fire memoranda placed in the guest rooms of hotels operated by the company.

Oriental Jeweled Watch.

Jeweled clocks are comparatively rare, but jeweled watches are somewhat common. The nawab of Rampur possesses a watch which is valued at over £18,000. The lower case is cut from a single topaz, the upper from an emerald, and a diamond ground very thin serves for the glass. This watch, which was put together by a Simla jeweler, shows the seconds, minutes, quarter hours, half hours, hours, days, weeks, months, seasons, years and leap years up to A. D. 9999.

Poison Ivy.

Poison ivy contains prussic acid. This is found principally in the young leaves and buds; in older leaves there is very little of it. In three and a half ounces of young leaves there is about a quarter of a grain of the acid. As with other plants in which prussic acid is found, the poisonous substance does not exist in its perfect form, but develops as soon as the leaves are bruised, a chemical action being set up through the union of an enzyme with glucosid.

A Common Failing.

A couple of visitors from a rural district were in the strangers' gallery in the House of Commons trying to recognize their member on the floor.

"I can't distinguish him," said one, after a hopeless visual observation.

"Of course not," was the honest reply. "He can't even distinguish himself."—London Tit-Bits.

The following history of a STRAIGHT LIFE POLICY with profits reserved for 20 years is interesting:

Pol. No. 27619. Amount: $1000. Premium $20.95. Age, 30

Total premiums paid from 1st February, 1890, to February, 1910 (20 years) $419.00

The premiums were then permanently reduced by the accumulated profits to $10.20 per year; this he paid for the past five years .. 51.00

Total cost in 25 years 470.00

Now his profits for the past five years reduce the premium to $2.00 per year.

Had this man taken a Non-Participating Straight Life he would have paid during the same period 475.00

and would still have to pay $19.00 per year as long as he lives, while his participating policy has not only cost him less in the aggregate, but his future premium is only $2.00 per year, subject to further reductions, as compared with $19.00 per year on the Non-Participating plan.

BANKRUPTCY IN THE COURT OF LOVE

By MILLARD MALTBIE.

"Bella," said Mr. Dudley to his daughter on the 31st of December, handing her a birthday present and giving her a kiss, "don't you think that a girl of nineteen is old enough to settle down and take some thought for the future?"

"I certainly do, papa."

"Today you begin a new year in your life, and tomorrow you begin a new year of the calendar. Suppose you do some thinking as to your actions during the past few years, make up your mind as to what is necessary in your case and form such resolutions as may seem essential to your future happiness."

"Tell me what you think necessary."

"The main thing I have in mind is this: The most important event in a woman's life—so I consider it—is her marriage—that is, if she is to be a wife. I have noticed in you an unfortunate propensity to regard those things which are preliminaries—in this country, where people usually marry for love—to the union of a man and woman, with the consequent rearing of a family, very much as you would consider a game of tennis.

"This, my daughter, is all wrong. Love is nearer akin to divinity than any other part of our nature. It is serious—very serious. I, your mother, your brothers and sisters, we who form a group so closely cemented, are held together by this one element in the composition of life—love."

"Oh, papa, how beautifully you talk!"

A shadow passed over the father's face, realizing from this remark that he had not produced the impression he desired. He was turning away disappointed when his daughter caught his hand.

"Really, papa, explain what you mean, and I will do what you wish me to do."

"Well, then, to come down to plain language, stop flirting."

"Oh, that's what you are driving at!"

"Yes. Tomorrow morning when you wake up refreshed after a good sleep think over your treatment of worthy and worthless young men, which is based merely on your fancy, and make a resolution that if you have any encouragement to bestow upon any one of them it will be given to some one who should you marry him—and you are now at a marriageable age—will make you a worthy husband, one you can be proud of before the world."

Bella sat musing.

"A penny for your thoughts," said her father.

"I was thinking that tomorrow morning will be a better time to make such resolutions than now."

"Why so?"

"Well, tonight I go to the Seymours to see the old year out and the new year in."

"What has that to do with resolutions?"

"Why, Jimmy Halliday will be there, and yesterday, just because I accepted a rose from Tom Erskine, he passed me on the street, pretending he didn't see me."

"Well?"

"Why, papa, you don't think I'm going to stand that, do you?"

"Do you care especially for Halliday?"

"Care for him! Of course not."

"Then why should you trouble yourself about him?"

"Oh, papa, how stupid you are! You don't understand such things at all. I will give Jimmy tonight as good as he has given me. Tomorrow morning I will make your resolutions"—

"My resolutions!"

"I mean that I will reform as you desire."

Her father, who adored her, gave her another kiss and left her, feeling that his words had been without effect. Not so Bella. She had really been impressed, but not for such general reasons as had been mentioned by her father.

Far down in the bottom of her heart was a soft spot into which a certain quiet, reserved young man, Edward Corwin by name, had settled himself without asking her permission. She had treated him in accordance with her usual methods, with the result that he had locked himself up—to speak figuratively—and all her efforts to get at him had signally failed.

Miss Dudley passed the evening of the 31st of December at Seymours', danced the cotillion with Tom Erskine, failed to favor Jimmy Halliday, smiled on Elliott Tracks and sat out a figure with Fred Swords, when she made up a spat with him, throwing him into ecstasies. Then, when all were assembled about a round table feasting the new year in, she exchanged bonbons with Bob Sparkles, reviving a hope that had nearly died out. As for Edward Corwin, he was not present.

On New Year's morning Bella awoke and, looking at a tiny clock on a bracket, saw that it was 11 o'clock. Then she remembered her New Year's resolutions, and a troubled expression passed over her young face. New Year's morning was not so good a time for reform as she had supposed. A flower lay on a table that she had accepted graciously from Erskine, and she had agreed to go out with him for a ride at 3 in the afternoon. Halliday had been brought to his senses—so she considered it—and had received permission to call at 4 for the purpose of making a humble apology. Sparkles was due in the evening to say something very particular, but since Swords was also expected she did not see how he would have an opportunity.

Bella was very much ashamed of herself. It was easy for her to make resolutions, but how was she to keep them? Keeping resolutions is largely dependent upon freedom from temptation. But she had provided temptations that would beset her all the afternoon and evening of New Year's day. To make matters worse, she remembered several other engagements she had made with young men the day before the evening spent with the Seymours.

The word bankruptcy is usually considered to pertain to financial matters. Nevertheless there are a great many kinds of bankruptcy. There is social bankruptcy, where one is swamped with invitations; there is bankruptcy in one having assumed more duties than he can attend to. Miss Dudley's bankruptcy was that she had permitted too many young men to believe that there was a possibility for each of winning her. It occurred to her that the first resolution she should make was to apply for a discharge in the court of love. After such discharge she might make her resolutions not to become further involved.

Suddenly an idea occurred to her. She would simply "fail." She had heard of merchants failing, which she understood to mean that they simply lay down and let the throng of creditors pour over them. She would cut all her engagements—every one of them.

But how escape them? Flight occurred to her—ignominious flight. But flight alone was repugnant to her nature. Then she considered keeping her appointment with one of her suitors. No; that wouldn't do at all. Next came an idea of making a brand new engagement. She lay for some time turning this last proposition over in her mind, then made one fundamental resolution upon which a superstructure of good intent should be based.

It was 12 o'clock noon on New Year's day. Edward Corwin, lawyer, had been spending the morning in his room at home over an intricate case that he was obliged to work out and was thinking about luncheon when there came a ring at the telephone.

"Mr. Corwin?" came a woman's voice.

"Yes, I am Corwin. Who is it?"

"Bella Dudley."

"Oh, Miss Dudley! Happy New Year!"

"Same to you."

There was a brief pause, after which Miss Dudley proceeded: "This is a fine, sunshiny day. I suppose you are free on a holiday? It seems a pity to stay in the house with nothing to do. I wish they would revive calling."

"I am disengaged for the afternoon."

"How would you like to drive me in the runabout?"

"Very much. But I am surprised that you have no engagement for the day."

"If I told you that I have a lot of them and propose to break them all for you you wouldn't believe me?"

"And if you told me you had had no opportunity to make them I wouldn't believe you."

"True. Therefore never mind my engagements. Come at 3 o'clock and we'll have a spin."

"I'll be with you, most assuredly."

"One moment, please."

"A dozen, if you like."

"I would prefer to dine somewhere. Suppose we go to Summerset and dine at the Antlers. That would suit me if it will not be too cold for you coming back at night. Summerset is thirty miles, you know."

"I'll stand the cold."

"Very well. Summerset it is, with dinner at the Antlers, 3 o'clock. We'll go round by Turnersville."

"That will be fine. Goodby."

"Goodby."

* * * * * * *

"Bella," said Mr. Dudley on the morning of the 2d of January, "didn't you find it cold riding last night?"

"We had plenty of robes."

"What time did you get home?"

"About 10 o'clock."

"Several young men called in the afternoon," said Mrs. Dudley, "and two in the evening. They all seemed disappointed in not finding you."

"Did they, mamma. Please pour my coffee."

When the family rose from the breakfast table Bella told her father that she had something to say to him and, taking his hand, affectionately led him into the library.

"Papa," she said, "I've reformed."

"How long will the reformation last?"

"Always. I'm engaged."

"Engaged?"

"Yes, engaged."

"For how long?"

"Forever."

"To whom?"

"Mr. Corwin."

The father embraced her.

"Do you believe the engagement will stick?" asked Bella.

"Yes," said the father.

"Why this man more than the others?"

"The others were Tom, Dick and Harry. This is Mr. Corwin. But how did you figure it out so quickly, sweetheart?"

"I concluded to go into bankrutcy in the court of love. But, realizing that I would get in the same fix again, I concluded to marry the man I really want and remove temptation."

However, that had the same result as bankruptcy, for marriage gives a clearance for all outstanding love debts.

Woman's World

Charming Wife of the New Ambassador to France.

MRS. WILLIAM G. SHARP.

As wife of the American representative in France Mrs. Myron T. Herrick endeared herself to the French by her kindness to the wounded and the needy. Her husband has been succeeded as ambassador by Mr. William Graves Sharp of Ohio, whose wife, so far as the Parisians are concerned, is an unknown quantity.

However, Mrs. Sharp is well known in Washington, where her husband spent a number of years as a member of congress. She is a charming and cultured woman, a member of many of the leading women's clubs in her home town of Elyria, O., progressive in her ideas and with a decided interest in art and science.

Mrs. Sharp was before her marriage Miss Hallie Clough. She is descended from a brother of Nathan Hale and is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution. As an artist she won praise before she married. Her family has engrossed her time to the exclusion of art since then. She is the mother of five children, all of them of the school age. She has put these into good schools to continue their studies while she is abroad. Her eldest daughter, who is in Oberlin college, has talent as a musician.

Modish Mourning Hat.

There's much chic about the mourning hat here pictured. The shape is attractive and along the lines featured for spring. It is fashioned of crape and adorned with ornaments of jet. A short veil falls over the face.

Regrets For Afternoon Tea.

If unable to accept an invitation for afternoon tea your visiting card, mailed to arrive on the day of the tea or sent by a messenger or some friend who attends, is all the regrets required for an afternoon tea. If the hostess happens to be a very dear friend who would be expecting you, you could send a personal note explaining why you could not be present, and you could tell her how sorry you were to miss the tea.

BEAUTY DON'TS.

Don't wash the face with soap and water before going out in the cold.

Don't fail to dry the hands thoroughly and rub in some softening lotion every time the hands are bathed.

Don't wear tight shoes, as they impede the circulation and make the feet cold.

Don't wear a veil more than two or three times without washing it.

Don't cut finger nails; file them.

Don't go out for at least two hours after a hot bath.

Don't put your feet very near the heat when very cold.

CANADIAN PATRIOTIC FUND

At the Teachers' Institute of Inspectorate No. 2 Northumberland and Durham, held in October, a resolution was passed setting apart Friday, Nov. 21st, as Patriotic Day throughout the schools of the inspectorate. At the same time the teachers agreed to give one per cent. of their salaries to the fund. The day was duly observed, and the teachers are meeting their pledge in a very commendable manner. As the teachers' contributions may be paid quarterly it is impossible to publish an itemized statement just at present; but at the close of the school year in June, one duly audited will be distributed among those entitled thereto. We have already placed to the credit of the Canadian Patriotic Fund at Ottawa, of which the Hon. W. T. White, Finance Minister, is the treasurer, and Lieut.-Col. N. F. MacLachlan, C.N.O., the County Treasurer, the sum of $1396.52 which is made up of the following donations.

MASONIC RECORD OF GEORGE WASHINGTON

Today the people of the United States are celebrating the anniversary of the birth of Geo. Washington. Saturday, February 20th, the Christian Science Monitor published the Masonic record of George Washington, giving the heretofore unpublished correspondence between him and Paul Revere. In the same connection appears a specially drawn picture of Washington, copied from a painting made from life in his later days by Williams of Philadelphia. The original of this picture is in Alexandria Lodge at Mount Vernon, and shows the first president of the United States in full Masonic regalia. It is considered a remarkable likeness.

The picture is drawn by a member of the Monitor staff, and the article is prepared by a thirty-third degree Mason who is also a member of the editorial staff.

Mr. R. J. Todd, 456 Aylmer Street, has a number of copies which he will be pleased to present to local Masons.

The sights of the rifles were set at normal and the rifles were juggled and each man had to fix his sight by the result of his sighting shot, which goes to show how well the men have improved.

SOLDIERS OF THE KING

The men of the 39th Battalion were present at the morning service at the Salvation Army Temple yesterday. The volunteers met at the Armouries and marched to the citadel to the strain of music rendered by the Salvation Army band. Addresses were made by Adjutant and Mrs. McElhiney, Envoy Brewer Brown and Sergt.-Major Blunt also spoke.

A report was current last evening upon the street that Floyd Plumton, of this city, who was a member of the first contingent from Canada, which is at the front in France, had been killed in action. Every effort made to verify the startling intelligence proved unavailing. Plumton is with the first contingent, being connected with the 34th artillery of this city. — Belleville Intelligencer.

Mr. Alex. Horn has received an interesting letter from Mr. A. H. Parson, a former Lindsay boy, who is now on active service in France with the Canadian branch of the Young Men's Christian Association; also a very interesting picture, a scene at the front.

The picture (an actual one from the front) shows a hot contest between the Canadians and the enemy, in which the forces wage a hand to hand battle. One Canadian is pictured pulling his bayonet out of a German soldier, while with the other hand he wields around in time to ward off an attack from the rear by punching an onrushing German a stiff uppercut in the jaw. — Lindsay Warder.

At a meeting held at the Mansion House, London, a few weeks back, for the purpose of raising funds to provide bands for the new units of the British army. Mr. Rudyard Kipling delivered a speech on the influence of regimental bands on military efficiency which has attracted much attention. Mr. Kipling, in the course of his speech, remarked that the new regiments were quite rightly born in silence, but that is no reason why they should walk in silence for the rest of their lives. At present, unfortunately, most of them are obliged to walk in silence, or to no better accompaniment than whistles, concertinas and other meritorious but inadequate instruments of music which they provide for themselves. In the beginning this did not matter so much. There were more urgent needs to be met; but now that the new armies are what they are, we, who cannot assist them by joining their ranks, owe it to them to provide them with more worthy music for their help and comfort and honor."

Speaking of the relationship of the band to the regiment, Mr. Kipling remarked: "No one—not even the adjutant—can say for certain where the soul of a battalion lives; but the expression of that soul is most often found in the band. It stands to reason that a body of 1,200 men whose lives are pledged to each other's keeping, must have some common means of expressing their thoughts and moods to themselves and to their world. The band can feel the mood and interpret the thought. A wise and sympathetic bandmaster — and most of them I have known have been that — can lift a battalion out of depression, cheer its sickness, and steady and recall it to itself in times of almost unendurable strain. You will remember a beautiful poem by Sir Henry Newbolt describing how a squadron of 'weary big dragoons' were led on to renewed effort by the strains of a penny whistle and a child's drum taken from a toyshop in a wrecked French town."

Everything is in readiness for the grand concert and entertainment to be given tomorrow night in the Grand Opera by the men of the 39th Battalion and Mounted Rifles. From the moment the curtain goes up on the opening chorus till the assemblage brings the function to a close by "God Save the King" there will not be a dull moment. The program will not be monotonous by too many patriotic songs as the committee in charge has put forth an extra effort to have a good sample of vaudeville presented.

Tickets were placed on sale today at the Opera House. The prices are 15c., 25c., 50c. and $1.00. The boys expect a move before the week is out so this will be their last big night. Show you appreciate their efforts by being present. All net proceeds will be given to the Peterborough Patriotic Fund.

The annual meeting of the County Orange Lodge of North Leeds at Toledo was addressed by Capt. A. W. Grey, recruiting officer for the third Canadian contingent. J. H. Polk of Newboyne was elected worshipful master.

FOREST IS CAPTURED

Frence Take Positions Near Perthes at Point of Bayonet

Unsuccessful Counter-Attack in Champagne District is Followed by Charge Which Results in Occupation of Entire German Position---Allies Make Other Gains Along the Front.

PARIS, Feb. 22.—The capture of a wood north of Perthes, in the Champagne district, together with the occupation of the entire German positions commanding this post, after an unsuccessful counter-attack of the enemy, was announced by the French War Office last night. The wood was occupied after the Germans had been exhausted by several unavailing attempts to drive the French soldiers from two miles and a half of trenches taken last week. Seizing an opportune moment the Frenchmen made a brilliant charge in pursuit of a column of Germans that had been severely broken up, and entered the bush, which they found had been strongly organized, with trenches and concealed redoubts.

Exasperated at losing such considerable ground, the enemy delivered a further onslaught, with the object of clearing the French troops out of their new positions. This was repelled with heavy slaughter, and a rapid charge gave into the hands of the French the whole of the German positions north and east of the wood.

Near Ypres the French also drove the Germans from parts of the trenches which they had recently retaken from the French. Attacks elsewhere were repulsed and several hundred men, including officers, were left dead on the field. The French losses were slight.

The French troops also followed up their recent progress, particularly north of Les Meils, in the Champagne region, where two machine guns and 100 prisoners were captured.

The seventh German counter-attack on Des Eparges, near Verdun, made in two days, completely failed, and the French hold fresh ground that was captured after beating back the sixth counter-attack, in which they took 200 prisoners, several officers, three machine guns and two trench mortars.

Elsewhere in the Argonne region the fighting has been desultory and of little consequence.

LONE RAID

Aviator Drops Bombs on Three Towns in Essex

LONDON, Feb. 22. — A German aero raider, with a bountiful supply of bombs, arrived within 30 miles of London in a daring single-handed raid last night before he was discovered by a British air scout. He fled toward the sea, dropping bombs on three towns in Essex, and finally eluding pursuit.

From the course taken by the raider it is believed that London was his objective and that the bombs were intended to have been hurled upon the metropolis.

Three bombs were dropped on Braintree, two of them failing to explode. The third did little damage.

Coggeshall was the target for a single bomb, which dropped in a garden and damaged a cottage, but no person was injured. One bomb was dropped at Colchester.

FIRED ON ITALIANS

Fishing Boat Reports Being Shelled by Austrian Craft

BARI, Italy, Feb. 22.—The fishing boat Gesu arrived yesterday from Antivari, Montenegro, and the members of her crew said that the Gesu and the fishing boat Saturno, when flying Italian flags, had been fired upon by two Austrian torpedo boats. This report has caused great popular excitement in Rome.

Members of the crew of the Gesu said that the vessel was anchored near Antivari, with the Saturno when the Austrian torpedo boats approached. The captains of the fishing vessels ordered their crews to land, and at the same time hoisted Italian flags.

The Austrians, according to this report, fired on the crews and then on the vessels, while Austrian aéroplanes dropped bombs. No one on either vessel was injured, but the Saturno was damaged so badly that she was unable to sail for home.

GERMANS DISCOURAGED.

Disasters To Zeppelins Put an End to Raids For the Present.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 22.—The disasters which have befallen the German air fleet off the coast of Denmark have revolutionized the plans of the German Admiralty Staff. The failure of the raids on the English coast also has modified Admiral von Pohl's blockade scheme.

The German Admiralty Staff has now declared that no more risks can be taken with the Zeppelins in the North Sea during the stormy season of the year.

One reason for the Zeppelin activity off the Danish coast since the disaster of last Wednesday is stated to be to prosecute a search for the missing four men of the Zeppelin L-4, who sprang into the sea when their ship caught fire.

The social whirl turns out many giddy things.

MOSLEMS URGE A MASSACRE

Ambassador Intervenes on Behalf of Christians

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Reuter's correspondent in Cairo learns from trustworthy sources in Palestine that the United States and Italian consuls there have found it expedient to warn the German general in command that great disaster is threatening non-Moslems as a result of the propaganda being organized by certain Turkish Government authorities, who are publishing pamphlets of a firebrand character and exciting the Moslems, urging them to massacre all non-Moslems by stoning them to death.

AMBASSADOR MORGENTHAU.

Thanks to the intervention of U. S. Ambassador Morgenthau at Constantinople, the Turkish Minister of the Interior has telegraphed to Jerusalem instructing the local Government to protect those against whom the threats of massacre have been directed.

The Turkish defeat on the Suez Canal is more disastrous than previously reported, it is indicated. Wounded Turks state that the disaster to the Turkish forces was complete, and that it had a very salutary effect on the minds of the sanguinary Turkish authorities.

THEIR FLANK THREATENED

Germans in Poland Imperilled by Cavalry Defeat

VON HINDENBERG NOW MAKING GREAT EFFORT

New Operations Will Tie up a Huge German Force

PETROGRAD, Feb. 22.—In northeast Poland the curtain is now considerably lifted and the scope of Von Hindenburg's last strategic manoeuvre is clearly outlined. His aim from the beginning has been to confine the Russians within the line of the Vistula throughout the entire course. His first attempt, directed from southwest Poland in October to press the Russians behind the great river, failed mainly because of a successful sortie by a strong Russian cavalry column from Novo Georgievsk, through Levitch, which undid in three days all the dearly paid for work of the huge German armies which had then been facing Bloni and Ivangorod. In a fortnight Von Hindenburg, in a determined effort again to tie his adversaries to the Vistula, has given his most serious attention to Novo Georgievsk and all the line of fortresses stretching northeast from the right bank of the Vistula and Pultusk, Ostrolenka, Lomza and Ossowiec. East of this last stronghold, where the Germans were defeated last October, they have apparently two or three corps which came from the south of the Mazurian Lakes, manoeuvring tentatively without much fighting in the direction of the road to Grodno.

They are not attempting now any speedy operations, and have left their flank threatened since the sharp defeat of the German cavalry on the Niemen, where all survivors of the Uhlan regiment which the Russians cut down are prisoners. The Germans have a larger army nearer Ossowiec which, however, they have not invested or even bombarded. Their other chief force in the northeast has moved on the road to Lomza and Berles. In pitched battles here the Russians generally are attacking along the marshy flat banks of Narew and Bebr. The Germans are believed to have nine corps in this region. Less is known of the battle area between Sierpec and Plonsk, where very great forces are now gathering. It is plain that despite any developments in the campaign in western Europe the Germans mean to bring yet more men into their eastern operations and to keep them here, but the position here is now evidently strongly covered.

A very great German army will be needed for the northern campaign. The present aggressive tactics of the Russians in the middle disposition has surprised the Germans who, although they have been using Prasnysz for most of the last three months as an observation point and base for cavalry reconnaissances, have prepared no earthworks for the pitched battle that the Russians are forcing on them. Prasnysz is serving as a hinge for two German wings, one stretching sixty miles southwest to the Vistula, the other spreading eighty miles northeast into the Augustowo forest. The Germans are very cautious along the left wing where their reserves are kept within a dozen miles of the East Prussian border.

It is calculated that the enemy has now about twenty corps employed in the Carpathians, of which about a quarter are Germans. Their determined attacks on the Wyszkow Pass have failed decisively, and the Russians are able to develop a strong offensive. The German strategists in the southern campaign are striving their utmost to impose the lines of the San river as the western boundary for the Russians, and have begun vigorous fighting supported by masses of heavy artillery along the Dunametz, but the Russians by the prompt seizure of Tarnow, with the control both of the roads and railways of western Galicia have anticipated and frustrated the bold plan for cutting between their western main army and its co-operating columns in the Carpathian passes. Two sorties from Przemysl were promptly beaten back, and the blockade is maintained complete.

NO LOSSES ON SUNDAY

Sabbath Free From Disasters to British Ships

AMERICAN SHIP SUNK

Steamer Evelyn With Cotton Cargo Strikes Mine

LONDON, Feb. 22.—So far as is known here, no British ships were sunk by German submarines or mines yesterday. Two British vessels fell victims to the enemy's submarines in the Irish Sea Saturday, one in the morning and the other at night. In the latter case the crew were given five minutes in which to leave their ship; in the other instance no warning was given and three of the crew were killed by the explosion of the torpedo and a fourth man was drowned in jumping for the boats.

The submarines up to the present have demonstrated their ability only to attack slow steamers or those lying at anchor, as a number of liners have passed to and fro in the Irish Sea, where the German craft have been at work, without being approached. In fact, with respect to Liverpool and other west coast ports, the arrivals and departures have been above the Saturday and Sunday average, according to Lloyds' list.

The American steamer Evelyn, which sailed from New York on Jan. 29 with a cargo of cotton for Bremen, struck a mine Saturday of Borkum Island, in the North Sea, says a Bremen despatch. The vessel sank. Her captain and 27 of her crew were saved.

Ambassador Page received yesterday a cable from Secretary Bryan at Washington, asking that he ascertain all facts concerning the occurrence and give every care to the crew if landed within his jurisdiction. Secretary Bryan repeated a cablegram received from American Consul Fee at Bremen as follows:

"Steamer Evelyn, Captain Smith, agents Bull & Co., New York, blown up early Firday at Borkum. Crew saved. Ship and cargo lost."

A similar cablegram was sent by Secretary Bryan to Ambassador Gerard at Berlin.

The nationality of the mine which destroyed the Evelyn has not been established.

The Evelyn is the first American vessel to meet with disaster as a result of the sea war of the European nations. She did not sink within the zone included in the German admiralty's decree of Feb. 4, which went into effect on Thursday. Borkum Island lies directly off the German coast, at the mouth of Ems river, and is German territory. The crew of twenty-five men were probably rescued.

The small Irish coasting steamer Downshire was sunk Saturday night by a German submarine off Calf of Man, an island in the Irish Sea. The Germans gave the crew five minutes in which to leave their ship. The crew landed at Dundrum, County Down, Ireland.

The submarine which sank the Downshire was the U-12. The Germans fired three shots at the steamer before her captain hove to. After the crew of the Downshire had taken to the boats the Germans placed a bomb amidships of the steamer and exploded it, and the Downshire sank in a few minutes.

First to sight a German submarine and then to see the track of a torpedo making its way toward their ship was the experience of the crew of the British steamer Cambank, which was sunk Saturday morning in the Irish Sea off Linas Point. The survivors of the disaster arrived in their home port here yesterday. The third engineer and two firemen were killed in the explosion and another member of the crew was drowned when he tried to jump into a boat. In all, 20 persons were saved from the wreck.

The submarine came into view, according to the stories told by the men of the Cambank, while the crew of the steamer were preparing the boats for an emergency. Then the torpedo was observed. The ship was standing still at the time and the torpedo struck it squarely amidships, close to the stokehold. In less than fifteen minutes the bow of the vessel seemed to fall away and then the ship broke in two and sank. Those of the crew who were able to make the boats drifted for three hours before they were picked up.

After discharging the torpedo which sank the Cambank the submarine quickly submerged herself. The crew of the Cambank say the submarine unsuccessfully chased other boats in the vicinity where the Cambank was destroyed.

GENEVA, Feb. 22. — Austria will follow Germany's lead in its treatment of neutral shipping in the Adriatic, although possessing few submarines, says a despatch from Innsbruck.

Holland Puts on Screws.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 22.—A decree prohibiting the exportation of copper, copper-wire, driving belts and leather for belts is expected to be promulgated immediately by the Netherlands Government.

To Make Prisoners Farm.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 22.—The Department of Agriculture at Petrograd, upon which devolves the duty of making dispositions of war prisoners, resolved Saturday to apportion those of Slavic origin—Poles, Ruthenians, Bohemians, Croatians and Slovak—among farms for what is termed free labor. On the farms these prisoners will not be under guard. Germans, Austrians and Hungarians will be used in road-building and canal construction. Wages will be paid, from which will be deducted the cost of their clothing and of maintaining a guard over them.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 20.—Wheat sold on the Winnipeg market for May, $1.57½ to $1.58½, July from $1.57⅜ to $1.58⅜.

The market opened easier for wheat to the extent of ½c on each month. Oats were ⅛c lower at the opening and flax ⅛c lower. Wheat generally was fairly steady and some holders realized, being unwilling to carry over the week-end in the face of holidays in the south.

Exporters were, however, buyers of futures, which assisted in holding prices about at par.

Oats were extremely quiet, nothing being sold of this cereal for export. Flax was steady, only a few cars changing hands.

Inspections Friday 347 cars, against 150 last year, and in sight today 300 cars.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Feb. 20.—There was no improvement for Manitoba spring wheat from abroad and business was quiet. The feature of the trade is the good demand for American corn from outside sources and quite an active business is doing in carlots for shipment from Chicago. In oats the feeling is firm with a fair trade passing in local grades, but the demand for Canadian Western is limited. Flour is quiet but the undertone to the market is firm. Millfeed active and prices firm owing to the lighter offerings. Butter firm ½c higher. Receipts for the week 853 packages, against 388 last week. Cheese in fair demand. Receipts for week were 140 boxes. Demand for eggs good. Receipts for week 3145 cases, compared with 4356 for the same week last year.

MR BOWSER RIDES OUT

And, of Course, Something Happened to Him

By M. QUAD

When the cook came back from the butcher shop with the steak for dinner she said to Mrs. Bowser:

"An old woman in the shop told my fortune."

"How foolish!"

"But I'm all in a tremble for fear it will come true."

"What did she say?"

"That the man I worked for would come home tonight and blow the house up."

"Maggie, you are a very silly girl. Mr. Bowser will probably sit and read all the evening."

"But if he don't?"

"I will take care of him."

When Mr. Bowser reached home at the usual hour there was the broadest, blandest and Juneist sort of a smile on his face, and before Mrs. Bowser could ask him a question he called out in a cheery voice:

"Hey, old girl, but weren't you saying last night that you'd like to make a trip to Europe?"

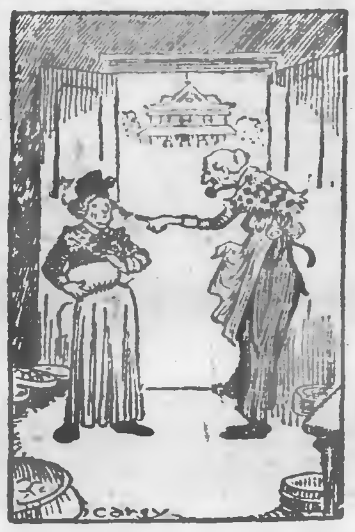
"Yes, I'd like to go," she replied, "but you know"—

"Then get on your bonnet and we'll start," he chuckled as he chucked her under the chin.

"What—what has happened?" she asked as she looked at him in a puzzled way.

He didn't answer, but laughed as he went waltzing up and down with the family cat close at his heels.

Dinner was half over before Mr. Bowser's secret came out. He hadn't discovered a new fall tonic nor bought anything new in rat traps. For a month or more, without giving himself away by as much as a wink, he had been quietly investigating the merits of the horseless carriage. He hadn't jumped to conclusions. It was only after weighing the pros and cons several times over that he had made up his mind that a horseless carriage was a good thing. It saved horses. It saved harness and horseshoes. It saved oats and currycomb and horse blankets. A horseless carriage never had the colic or poll evil. There were just exactly 100 reasons why a horseless carriage was better than a live horse and a detached carriage.



"AN OLD WOMAN IN THE SHOP TOLD MY FORTUNE."

"Well, what of all this? Why, I'm going to buy a horseless carriage, of course."

"You don't mean it!"

"Why not? We have long wanted a horse and carriage. We need the fresh air and the recreation it will give us. More than a dozen doctors have told me that if I didn't get out more my lungs would go."

"But I'd never dare ride in a horseless carriage!" she protested. "Please give up the idea. Your lungs are all right, and I'm sure"—

"Mrs. Bowser," he interrupted, "we are to have a horseless carriage. That is, a friend of mine who owns one and can be induced to part with it is coming around here with the vehicle in about an hour. We are to try it, and if pleased in every respect I shall give him my check."

"And you are to manage the vehicle?"

"I am to manage. I haven't said a word about it, but I've been out with the carriage on three different occasions. I can manage it to perfection. I can drive it 10,000 miles and never graze a thing. It's a bright moonlight night, and we'll take a ten mile spin and have lots of fun over it. Better get yourself ready."

"I—I don't think I'll go, and I wish you would give this thing up. If you will I'll never say another word about your other fads."

"Other fads!" shouted Mr. Bowser, as he fired up in an instant. "Woman, I've heard enough about the fad business. One would think me a fool to hear you talk. If it's a fad to buy a $750 horseless carriage for $500, then it's a fad to buy meat for dinner. If you don't want to go along with me this evening, then you can stay at home."

"But I don't want you to go either," she protested. "A horseless carriage is a dangerous thing to fiddle with. You can't have had much experience, and I feel certain there will be an accident. Don't be angry with me, and don't run any foolish risks."

"Mrs. Bowser," he said, after a long look at her, "I've lived for forty years without a guardian and I object to one now. I shall try this horseless carriage this evening. I shall buy it. I shall make daily use of it. There is no need of any quarrelling. You can take your outings in a rocking chair and die of consumption."

At that moment the vehicle arrived and Mr. Bowser went out to meet it. When the owner inquired why Mrs. Bowser had not appeared he was told that she was not feeling well. He seemed a bit relieved at the news and added:

"I guess you had better take me along with you this evening. I don't think anything will get out of order, but you'll have more confidence in yourself if I'm along."

"Oh, I've plenty of confidence," replied Mr. Bowser. "I'm just going to scoot up and down in front of the house for awhile. Mrs. Bowser is a little bit shy of the carriage, but when she looks out of the window and sees me gliding along she'll get over her nervousness."

"You are sure you've got the hang of it?"

"Perfectly sure. It's as easy as spinning a top."

"Look out when you cross the car tracks up there, and take due notice of the brick pile down the street. I wouldn't make the speed over four miles an hour."

Mr. Bowser mounted to the seat with all the confidence of a man starting to drive a pig out of the garden. As he started the vehicle up he noticed Mrs. Bowser and the family cat taking a peep at him from a front window, and there was exultation in his heart. He'd make that carriage get up and hump itself or run the four wheels up a tree. He made the first block in tolerably good shape, though taking up most of the street, and then he put on steam to beat a street car at the crossing. As he did so he just missed an old woman with a market basket who was crossing the street, and as he crossed the tracks he made such a close shave of being run down by the car that the motorman had five years added to his age in ten seconds. He yelled at Mr. Bowser, and the conductor seconded his efforts as the rear end of the car came along, but as the horseless carriage was taking a short cut over the sidewalk and around a lamppost their profane greetings were unheeded. Five minutes later the vehicle drew up in front of the Bowser mansion in good shape, but the owner of the horseless carriage anxiously remarked:

"If I were you I'd go a little slow. This thing wasn't built to climb trees or jump fences."

"Don't worry about me," replied Mr. Bowser as he set off down the street. But there was cause to worry before he had gone half a block. A man was carrying a ladder across the street, and the vehicle hit the ladder and slewed the whole United States around and piled it in a heap and run over it. The man with the ladder got up and swore. He swore in English, French and German, but Mr. Bowser was a block and a half away and turning around for the spin home. He knew that Mrs. Bowser and the cat would be looking, and he pulled the throttle wide open and cut a dash. The big brick pile was only half a block away and occupying half the street. He saw it, and he aimed to miss it by ten feet, but five seconds later there was a yell and a crash, which brought out a hundred people in no time. The horseless had tried its best to climb the brick pile, but had succeeded in getting only halfway up. They found a tangle of wheels, spokes, splinters, rods and levers, and in the midst of the tangle was Mr. Bowser. He wasn't saying a word. Indeed, it was two hours before he said anything. By that time the doctor had patched him up, the police had driven the crowd away, and Mrs. Bowser and the family cat had figured out how it all came about.

"Has—has anything happened?" asked Mr. Bowser as he looked around in a puzzled way.

"Nothing much," quietly replied Mrs. Bowser. "You've simply been taking a ride in a horseless carriage."

"And why—why am I in bed and all bandaged up?"

"Oh, you are just resting and getting ready for the next fad."

Then Mr. Bowser closed his eyes with a sigh. Mrs. Bowser turned down the gas a little, and the cat went downstairs to look for mice and get the smell of arnica and camphor out of her nostrils.

IF RING PRECEDENTS COUNT JESS WILLARD SHOULD WIN

John L. Sullivan and Bob Fitzsimmons Lost Title Before They Reached Johnson's Age — He Will be 37 Next Month

New York, Feb. 22.—If ring precedents count for anything, age and wagering odds should prove a theoretical handicap to Jack Johnson in his coming contest with Jess Willard for the world's heavyweight championship. Pugilistic records show that no former champion of modern times has been able to successfully defend his title after reaching the age of 37, which in Johnson's case will occur on March 31. With the exception of the negro, the present day champions in all classes range around twenty-five years of age.

Sullivan Was 34.

Beginning with John L. Sullivan, who lost his title to James B. Corbett, the records show that Sullivan was 34 years of age when the Californian defeated him at New Orleans on Sept. 7, 1892, in twenty-one rounds. Corbett was 26 years of age, and the odds were 3 to 1 against him on the day of the battle. At the age of 31 Corbett fell before Fitzsimmons at Carson City, Nev., on on March 17, 1897, with the betting 100 to 65 in his favor.

"Bob" Was 37.

Fitzsimmons reigned as champion from that date until June 9, 1899, when Jim Jeffries defeated him at Coney Island, New York, in eleven rounds. Fitzsimmons aws 37 years of age, against Jeffries' 24, and the betting was 100 to 60, with Fitzsimmons the favorite. There has always been controversy as to whether Jeffries ever relinquished his title, but the fact stands out that Johnson claimed the championship as a result of defeating Tommy Burns. Jeffries retired from the ring at the age of 29 and made his disastrous return on July 4, 1910, when he was 35. Johnson was three years younger, but again the champion was the favorite, the betting was 2 to 1 on Jeffries to defeat the negro. The collapse of Jeffries in the 15th round is part of pugilistic history.

Odds for Champions.

In these four championship battles, covering a period of eighteen years, four titleholders—Sullivan, Corbett, Fitzsimmons and Jeffries—were dethroned in turn with the average odds in their favor a trifle more than 2 to 1. The average number of rounds was fifteen and one-fourth, and the average age of the champions at the time of defeat was 34½ years, while the average age of the victors was 29¾ years. At the present time Johnson is within a few weeks of 37 years of age and in the early wagering on the coming contest he has been quoted as high as a 3 to 1 favorite. Willard is a few months over 27. The question that is puzzling ring followers is, therefore, whether pugilistic precedence is to be observed or the negro title holder prove an exception to the rule of the ring?

"IRON MAN" McGINNITY STEPS OFF THE DIAMOND

Joe McGinnity, the "Iron Man" of baseball and the famous discoverer of "Old Sal," is finished at last. In his prime he was as popular as Mathewson today, and "Old Sal" was as well known as "Miss Fadeaway."

He has disposed of his interest in the Tacoma, Wash., club, and will retire. Joe will be forty-two years of age March 19. Last year, at the age of forty-one, he pitched in forty-six games of ball, finished forty-one of them, and won twenty, truly an "Iron Man" to the last.

Joe's career extended over twenty years—eleven of them he played in the big leagues. All told he has won 415 games, and, next to Cy Young, has won more games than any other pitcher who ever lived. His greatest triumphhs were achieved while a member of the Giants. In 1904, the "Iron Man" topped the pinnacle of his success, pitching forty-three games and winning thirty-five of them. In 1903 he hurled his good right arm through fifty contests, and won thirty-one of them.

Was With Baltimore.

McGinnity broke into the majors in 1899 as a member of the famous Baltimore National League Club. Later he played with Brooklyn (and helped them win the pennant), then he went to New York in 1902. He obtained his release from the Giants in 1909 and became manager of the Newark club in the International league. In 1913 he bought an interest in the Tacoma team in the Northwestern league.

Soon Became Known.

When Joe discovered and perfected "Old Sal" he soon became known as one of the greatest pitchers. It was his most effective ball, and batters by the score were mowed down by him. In pitching this ball he held it as if for an out curve. But he pitched it with a deep underhand movement, so his fingers almost touched the earth of the pitching mound.

It was aimed just below the batter's shoulders, so that starting from the ground it rose at least five feet and was going up when it reached him. At the same time the pitched had twisted his wrist in a peculiar way, so the ball also curved up. It was the nearest thing to an up-curve ever tried.

Batters struck under and few of them ever solved it. While most pitchers know how McGinnity threw "Old Sal," none succeeded with it as he did.

In fact, one of the writers on the Times has gone violently insane and pounded out the following: "So far this season American hockey teams have shown to better advantage in the games played than the Canadian combinations. Only one seven from across the border has won in this city, Ottawa College defeating the Crescent Athletic Club. The St. Nicks have beaten three fast Canadian teams and Yale recently scored over McGill. This has caused New York hockey followers to believe that it will not be long before the average American team will be able to beat the average Canadian seven. Many fans are of the opinion that the St. Nicks, Amateur Hockey League champions, are capable of beating any amateur team in the Dominion at the present time."

MAPLE LEAFS AND HUSTLERS WON OPENERS

Interesting Games in Newly Organized League at Y.M.CA.

The new basket ball league was officially opened by two hard and well played games at the "Y" on Saturday night, and give every indication that there is going to be some good sport in store for players and spectators alike before the league closes.

The Beavers under Capt. Dobbin and the Maple Leafs under Capt. Richardson were the first attraction and it was a battle royal from start to finish. Both the veteran captains are leading teams made up of new material, as far as the men being together is concerned, and several of the players made their debut in basket ball so far as an organised team is concerned. This can also be said of the Hustlers under Bill Heaslip and the Collegiate under Hunter Lewis, but Saturday night's performance shows that all of these teams will have to be reckoned with before the season is over. Both games were nip and tuck all the way neither team having a lead at any time which would allow them to let up.

In the first game between the Beavers and Hustlers, Thackery a new man playing for the first time in the league, was high score with ten points to his credit. H. Lees being next on his team. While Smith was high man for Maple Leafs with 12 points, H. B. Cowan and Horsfield with four points each. Dunsford, another new man, played a sterling game at defence, and will prove a tower of strength to his team.

The final score of game, Maple Leafs 22, Beavers 18.

Second Game.

The Hustler-Collegiate game was a grand hustle from start to finish with little scoring on either side. Captain Heaslip for the Hustlers was the most successful in finding the basket, while Harstone did the pioneer work for Collegiate. This is the Collegiate boys' first appearance in a league this year and they made a most creditable showing, as they are not represented a full strength because of the fact that some of their best men are with teams that they played with in the first league, and preferred to stay with those teams. Hunter Lewis played a star defence game, as did his mate, Eastwood. The forwards also worked well. For the Hustlers Jones did some phenomenal shooting from the centre of the floor. Score at end of first half 6-4 in favor of Collegiate. Final score, Hustlers 14, Collegiate 10.

The teams:—

Beavers—H. Lees, Thackeray, Dobbin, capt.; Gilchrist, A. Flowers.

Maple Leafs — Cowan, Horsfield, Smith, Richardson, Dunsford.

Hustlers—Heaslip, Lang, Jones, V. Lewis, McKinley.

Collegiate—Green, Harstone, Stuare, Eastwood, H. Lewis.

MAY BELL MARKS HOME FOR REST

Company is Through for This Season

"Ten Nights in a Barroom," one of the oldest plays in the May A. Bell Marks repertoire was presented to a capacity house at the Grand, Saturday night. While strong from an ethical standpoint, its delineation was weak at some stages noticeably the climaxes. However the company did their best in their respective roles, and endeavored to interpret the piece as powerfully as their histrionic resources would permit. The audience did not appear in a particularly critical mood, and every act received its fair share of applause.

The specialties were all good.

"Ten Nights in a Barroom is the only vehicle in which May A. Bell Marks does not have a part. She goes to her home in Perth for a rest, the companys engagement in Peterborough having closed their season.

THE DUTY OF CANADIANS

wrong as the other. The first was that which maintained that this country should be peopled as quickly as possible regardless of the character of customs of those brought in. The second was the propaganda that Canada should exclude almost everyone and conserve the country's resources for those now living within its confines. With either of these extremes he had little sympathy. By far the most important object should be to build character in these people now populating it, and that was where the responsibility of Canadians came in.

The People Should Say.

Mr. Stevens laid down certain principles which had to be upheld in connection with the problem of immigration. The first was, that the people occupying a given territory or country should have the privilege of determining who should enter that territory. Therefore Canada was the sole authority to determine who or who should not come into Canada. The other principle was that of the possibilities of assimilation to which reference has already been made.

Politics and Immigration.

Mr. Stevens vigorously denounced the practice all to common of using the foreigner for low, selfish, and monetary purposes; for the use politicians made of them not so much in this country as in the communities across the line. Many foreigners were brought in as immigrants and sacrificed on the altar of creed.

Address Was Appreciated.

Frequest bursts of applause occurred as Mr. Stevens forced home some particularly telling and strong argument and his stirring address was heartily enjoyed and was full of profit and instruction. He was introduced to the gathering by Mr. Jos. Wearing in a very neat speech who stated that he was not ashamed to say that he himself came to this country as an immigrant and better still he came third class.

Mr. Douglas Carlisle contributed a patriotic solo in manly voice. Mr. Asa Huycke presided at the piano. The address was under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association who were delighted with the success which attended it.

One peculiarity about hard work is it is connected with everything under the sun.

SCOTCH NUMBERS AT MUSICALE

There must be many lovers of Scotch music in the city, judging from the very large audence who attended the twilight musicale Scotch program on Saturday afternoon in the Conservatory of Music Hall. There were few seats vacant when the program commenced.

The latter consisted of orchestra numbers, readings, solos, and last, but not least, the bagpipes. Every selection received an encore. Miss Helen MacLaren was the soloist, her charming numbers being accompanied by a most acceptable and pleasing accent. Mis MacLaren is soloist at St. Andrew's Church. Her first number was "The Hundred Pipers," and the second "Bonnie Sweet Bessie, the Maid of Dundee."

Miss Mathers contributed two readings in her delightful manner, which won hearty applause and encores. Mr. Yeamans gave a couple of bagpipe selections that proved very popular. The Conservatory Orchestra gave "The Thistle," a practically new number, and "Rob Roy," two popular numbers, contributed as usual in their usual snappy and accurate manner, under the leadership of Mr. R. Gliddon. The accompanists were Miss Hazel Dean of the Conservatory staff and Miss Pearl McKee. The next and fifth twilight will be held March 13th, when an all-Irish program will be supplied

MISSIONARY ADDRESS AT ST. JAMES' CHURCH

Owing to illness Mrs. (Dr.) F. C. Stephenson of Toronto was not present at St. James Methodist Church yesterday to speak on missionary work. Her place, however, was taken by Mrs. (Dr.) Kilbourne, of Toronto, who up till last June labored with Canadian Methodist missionaries in endeavoring to convert to the gospel of Christ the heathen inhabitants of the Chinese Empire. In her remarks to the congregation of St. James Church yesterday morning Mrs. Kilbourne brought the Chinese people closer to them. The vivid explanations of their ways and manners proved not only interesting but also educating, inasmuch as she gave her listeners a much clearer idea as to the wants of that great race of people.

The time and opportunity to assist and convert the people of China is right now. China is grasping and yearning for civilization; the Chinese people are beginning to look for religion and education. There is an unsettled feeling in the Chinese Empire. The recent revolution which resulted in changing the form of government came before China was ready for it, and there is now a strange feeling of unrest there. The people are looking for greater changes and take readily to receiving the ways, customs and religion of Christians.

Mrs. Kilbourne spoke of the great value the educated Chinese were to the missionaries, and also referred to the effort being put forth by Canadian Methodis missionaries to educate the children. The work of the hospitals is also bringing good results. Every patient treated by Canadian doctors and cured means considerable, because it gives the natives more confidence in them. While the patients are being treated the spiritual side is not forgotten. Whether the patient can or cannot read, he is given a Bible. If he cannot read it, someone at his home can. In this way the gospel reaches many homes.

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. N. Clarry, the service was taken by Mr. L. W. Petley.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

Saturday afternoon the junior school boys had the time of their lives at Jackson Park. The boys made a fine toboggan slide in the park and to see them shoot through the trees and across the creek on their toboggans was a hair raising sight. Scouting games were also played and the boys had a fine afternoon in the fresh air.

At five o'clock the boys returned to the building where a bean supper was waiting for them. After supper the boys played games for an hour. The boys claim it was was one of the best times they have had in their department.

Tonight the junior Collegiate class will have a social evening. After playing games the boys will have a bean supper, at 8.30.

The attendance at the Saturday morning Bible Classes is increasing. Twenty-five boys were at Bible Study Saturday morning.

MOTION PICTURES TO-NIGHT

In George St. Methodist Church

Tonight and tomorrow evening at 8 p.m. Dr. F. C. Stephenson, Secretary of the Forward Movement for Missions in the Methodist Church will show moving pictures of mission scenes in China, Japan and our Canadian West in George St. Methodist Church.

These films were obtained under the direct supervision of Dr. Stephenson at large cost. They convey a vivid, personal view of the work being accomplished in these mission fields and have been in much demand for imparting missionary information.

Dr. Stephenson has been brought here by and for the young people of Peterborough at considerable expense and all, young and old, will find it well worth while. Come and bring the children. There is no admission charge but a free will offering.

SEE GAME AT LINDSAY.

A large number of Peterborough fans have signified their intention of going to Lindsay tonight for the first semi-final between Toronto Varsity and Lindsay. "Gamey" Stratton is on right wing for Varsity.

REV. F. A. FOSTER TOOK SERVICES

Referred to Death of Rev. T. J. Mansell

There were large congregations on hand in Charlotte St. Methodist Church yesterday to hear Rev. F. A. Foster of Colborne. At the evening service Mr. Foster referred feelingly to the sudden death of the late Rev. T. J. Mansell, one year ago. His text was from I Corinthians 6-9, "Ye are not your own for ye are bought with a price." His subject was "The authority of Christ," and he applied this subject in asking questions as "Is it proper that Jesus Christ shall control my life?" He quoted the answer of Martin Luther, Paul and Christ to this question and said Christ was the Master and Lord of human life and had a right to our possessions and the power of our minds and bodies. We are but stewards in this life. He said he was speaking to a privileged congregation having the advantages of free schools, and the liberty of Canada. Yet how much did they know of the world's great need? Have we read our standard work on the great missionary problem? Do you fold your arms and say let them mind their own business? We cannot turn the heathen down. We must send the message to them. He spoke of the power of prayer and the great need for missionaries and closed by emphasizing three points: The increased power over sin, success in doing things, and the Divine equipment making one abl to do things.

The organ music and Miss Ada Richardson's rendering of "Show Me the Way O Lord," were highly appreciated.

A WIN FOR BOTH PARTIES

Bishop Fallon' Had Right to Divide Parish, Rome Finds

Montreal, Feb. 22. — The action taken against Mgr. Fallon, Bishop of London, by one of the priests, Rev. Father L. A. Beaudoin, parish priest of Notre Dame du Lac, Walkerville, Ont., has been decided by Rome, the judgment which has been received here being partly against the contentions of the Bishop and partly against the position taken by the parish priest.

The case arose out of Bishop Fallonn's action in taking away part of Abbe Beaudoin't parish and adding it to another. The tribunal De la Rota, the Roman Catholic ecclesiastical court, has decided that his Lordship of London was within his rights in dividing the parish, but on account of the part detached from Abbe Beaudoin's jurisdiction having contained a school on which the parish priest had spent some twelve to fourteen thousand dollars, the latter is now awarded the sum of $7,000. The statement is made by those acquainted with the case that the Bishop must pay part of the imdemnity imposed by Rome, while the remainder will come from the parish which benefited by the separation.

In the hearing of the case before the tribunal De la Rota counsel for Bishop Fallon had nothing to allege against the character of Abbe Beaudoin, but claimed that the priest was lacking in administrative ability, was an agitator, and was incompetent as a minister.

A number of priests in Bishop Fallon's diocese incurred his enmity by giving Father Beaudoin a certificate of character, claiming that he spoke English well, did not discriminate against his English parishioners, and had objected to his Lordship's authority only when he forbade the teaching of French to French-Canadians. The priests who gave this certificate were disciplined by Bishop Fallon, and they have appealed to the Sacred Congregation to "intervene in order to protect them from unjust persecution."

Old Roman Furnaces.

For the heating of their houses the Romans used a form of furnace known as the hypocaust, which was placed in a chamber beneath the floor and the heated air was made to circulate around the walls and under the floor by means of hollow tubes or a hollow lining, and was also by way of pipes transported to other rooms.

To remove the spots on a whitewashed ceiling rub spot with a mixture of starch and water of the consistency of cream. Let the mixture dry on the ceiling, then rub off with a soft flannel cloth, first laying a newspaper on the floor to protect the carpet from the white dust.

SAYS HUSBAND HAS FAILED TO SUPPORT HER

Was Treated Cruelly Because She Couldn't Keep Him in Cigarettes

Mrs. D. McDonald, young, rather pretty, and well dressed, told a story in police court this morning that showed up domestic strife and discord in all its sordidness. She had her husband up for neglecting to provide for her and a three-year-old child, which she attributed to laziness on his part.

Her story was to the effect that he didn't work; that he had been drinking lately; that he had slapped her face, and, lastly, she had left him and gone to work to support herself, and was rewarded weekly with the magnificent wage of $1.50. Much of her story would not make delectable reading, so it is withheld.

It appears that her husband, who is a baker, has not been employed steadily for a long time, and the evidence was inclined to show him incapable of application to industry for any length of time. His wife said he treated her cruelly at times, because she couldn't keep him in cigarettes. They are not living together at present, she having "gone back to mother" and he to the abode of his mother.

Mr. Widdifield, who acted for the defendant, tried to produce evidence to show that complainant had not been true to her husband, but his witness contributed hearsay evidence which didn't prove of much value.

Adjutant McElhiney told of the two having applied to him at different times. He had given defendant a job at a wodpile, but the wood wasn't cut. The child is at present in the Children's Shelter.

Stanley M. Phoenix appeared for Mr. Goodwill in the interests of the Children's Aid Society.

The case was adjourned for two weeks, during which the two will endeavor to come to terms and McDonald to get work.

WHO WANTS THE COUNTY BRIDGE?

At the recent meeting of the County Council it was decided to build a bridge over the Otonabee at the end of the street railway track, but why this is to be done when there is the locks bridge nearby, the public have been given very little information. The council decided to do this if they could "pull the government's leg" for ten per cent. of the cost.

A copy of clause 16 of the Roads and Bridges Committee for the County, dealing with this matter which was passed, follows:—

"That the County contribute 40 per cent. of the total cost of a bridge at the end of the street railway adjoining Otonabee, providing the balance is provided from other sources, and that the county assume the maintenance of such bridge, and that Messrs. Warden, Deyell, Anderson, Fitzgerald, McIntosh and Forster act as a committee to have the matter carried into effect."

In order to test the feeling the people of the county in this regard The Review would like to have a few letters from people in the county and city as to the advisability of spending money on a bridge in the locality named. Let's see who wants the bridge.

"The Knitting Women."

The famous Mme. Defarge, of the wine shop in St. Antoine, who knitted the destiny of so many of the aristocrats of France into her grim pattern, and her sister Vengeances, who worked on implacably in sight of the guillotine, are recalled to-day when Paris is again knitting—even faster, if that is possible, than London. But now in every "loge de concierge," in every archway, and even in the few automobiles hurrying to the hospitals, the needles are flying with all good will for "les petits pioupious." The gay colored wools of the Parisians are in strange contrast to the sober natural shades in vogue for the British. Sunday is the great day, for then thousands of the poorer women can be seen approaching the offices of the Automobile Club in the Place de la Concorde, where "le petit poquet" with its pair of socks, woolen scarf and shirt is tenderly handed over for transport to the long lines across France.

THIS FLOCK OF EWES CAUGHT THE SPIRIT

Patriotism and production so much talked of in press and platform, must certainly have been caught by Mr Cleugh of Campbellford.

The Herald of that town says —

Talking about prolific sheep we think Mr. R. C. Cleugh has every other sheep breeder in Canada if not in the world beaten to a frazzle. Mr. Cleugh had a flock of five ewes. On Feb. 1st last, one ewe gave birth to twin lambs, on Feb. 8th, one week later, another gave birth to triplets, and on Feb. 15th another ewe presented Mr. Cleugh with no less than four lambs. So far as Mr. Cleugh can find out the like was never known before. The sheep were a Shropshire and Leicester cross. Strange to say all the lambs lived one of them being brought up on the bottle.

ANOTHER NORWEGIAN STEAMER IS LOST

London, Feb. 23, (C.P.)---The Norwegian steamer Regin from the Tyne for Bordeaux was sunk off Dover this morning by either a submarine or a mine. The crew of 22 men were saved. The Regin sank ten minutes after she was struck.

BRITISH ARE SUPERIOR IN ARTILLERY AND RIFLE FIRE

Enemy Exploded Mines and Destroyed British Trench, But New Line Was Occupied and Further Progress Prevented

FOE REPULSED AT LA BASSEE CANAL

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 23. — The British bi-weekly report given out today reads as follows:

"The enemy continues to show considerable activity. In the neighborhood of Ypres, several attacks and counter-attacks have occurred. At six o'clock in the morning of February 21 the enemy exploded an elaborate series of mines which destroyed one of our trenches.

"A new line was prepared a short distance in the rear, and was immediately occupied. Any attempts at further progress have been completely frustrated.

"Near Givenchy, our infantry after successful bombardment captured a trench of the enemy and blew it up.

"An attempted attack by the enemy along La Bassee Canal was easily repulsed by our artillery.

"To the south of the River Lys there has been an increase in artillery and rifle fire, in which our troops showed marked superiority.

"Along the remainder of the front there has been nothing more than artillery duels.

"Thick weather has handicapped the work of the air craft."

COLORS ARE PRESENTED TO 21ST BATTALION

First Day of Carnival in Honor of Troops at Kingston

Kingston, Ont., Feb. 23. — Four days' Winter carnival in honor of the troops mobilized here, and who are shortly to leave for overseas service, opened last night in the armouries with the presentation by the Kingston Veterans' Association of the King's and regimental colors to the 21st Infantry Battalion before a large gathering. The colors were consecrated by the Bishop of Kingston, assisted by the Dean of Ontario, and were presented by Mrs. Hughes, wife of the Minister of Militia, to Lieut.-Col. W. S. Hughes, brother of the Minister, and who commands the 21st. Afterwards addresses were delivered by Col. Hughes, Mayor Sutherland, W. F. Nickle, M.P., and Prof. L. W. Mulloy, of the Royal Military College, who as a trooper in the South African War lost his sight from a Boar bullet. Major Duff, A. D. C., represented the Governor-General at the ceremony. Mrs. Mulloy, a noted American soprano, rendered "Your King and Your Country Needs You," and her patriotic song. "Johnny Canuck's the Boy," dedicated to the 21st Battalion, was sung by Lieut. Black. Afterward the troops paraded to the market square on King Street, where five bands participated in a tattoo under the direction of Lieut. Light, bandmaster of the R. C. H. A.

Recruiting Progresses.

The recruiting for the third contingent is going along rapidly, and it is expected that in two weeks both the battalions of infantry and the two squadrons of cavalry will be at full strength. The 38th Battalion has now 772 accepted recruits and the 39th Battalion has 994. For the 38th Battalion McGill University is supplying two companies, totalling 480 men. This makes a total of 2,246 infantry recruits, about 200 less than the required number. This number will soon be secured, as there are a large number of volunteers who have not yet been examined.

MAYOR BULLER AT KINGSTON

"One of the finest bodies of soldiers in my command, and I wish I had a hundred more like them."

This was the report from the officer commanding the Canadians which His Worship Mayor Buller brought back from Kingson, where he attended the first day of the big carnival. Mayor Buller occupied a position on the platform with about fifteen other leading men, during the ceremony of presenting the colors to the 21st Battalion and 22nd Battery of the Canadian expeditionary force by the Kingston Veterans' Association. Mayor Buller said everything went off fine and he greatly enjoyed the occasion. He had a chat with a number of the Peterborough soldiers.

COURT WAS ADJOURNED

Mr. Justice Britton Will Preside at Wednesday's Sitting

ADDRESS TO JURY BY JUDGE HUYCKE

When the court crier called the sitting of the Supreme Court to order in the Court House this afternoon a few minutes after one o'clock he formally opened one of the most important assizes held in Peterborough in recent years. The sitting this spring has occasioned great interest principally because the criminal case of Edgar Grose charged with the murder of William O'Brien on December 24th, 1914, comes up. Not since 1910 has the charge of murder been read out against a man in Peterborough. At the spring assizes of that year Robert Henderson was sentenced by Mr. Justice Riddell to death by hanging for the murder of Margaret McPherson, on January 28 of the year 1910 at her home near Norwood. At the fall assizes the same year James Gorman faced the charge of murdering his mother. He was found guilty and sentenced by Chancellor Boyd to death by hanging but the sentence was commuted to life in penitentiary. Gorman was permitted to come home on account of ill health a little over a year ago and has since passed away.

Judge Was Absent.

Sir William Mulock was to preside at this sitting but as he is presiding at the Nerlich trial in Toronto, Judge Huycke performed his duties this afternoon. Mr. Justice Britton, it is expected, will be present to preside at the sitting tomorrow.

The grand jury is as follows:—

INQUIRY IS IN PROGRESS

Investigation Has to Do With the So-called Boot Scandal

COMMITTEE HEAR TWO WITNESSES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Feb. 23. — The special parliamentary committee appointed to probe the so-called boot scandal in connection with the first Canadian expeditionary force, launched the inquiry this morning.

Theodore Galipeau, of Montreal, was the first witness. Hon. Charles Murphy questioned Galipeau who is a wholesale shoe jobber, in regard to the fact that in January, a committee had brought in a report which contradicted a report made day before. On January sixth, boots were found "generally defective," whereas on January seven, it was reported they were generally "surprisingly well made," considering the short time available. What had caused the board to change its mind? asked Mr. Murphy.

The effect of Mr. Galipeau's answer was that the first report had been made on three hundred pairs of shoes first examined, whereas the last report had been based on all shoes furnished. Galipeau said further that in the second report due allowance had been made for insufficient time given for the manufacture of shoes. No paper he said had been found in the wearing portion of the sole but there was steel and paper in the shank, contrary to specification, though this part of the shoe, as Mr. Middleboro observed, would be employed in trench digging. No soldier who had actually worn the footwear complained of, had ever been examined by the committee.

Both are Germans.

A. E. Fripp and J. H. Burnham Move Resolution in House

LIBERALS OPPOSE

Special Committee Will Make Report at Early Date

OTTAWA, Feb. 23. — A sensational debate developed in the House last evening when the House met after dinner to consider the resolution moved and seconded by Messrs. Fripp (Ottawa) and Burnham (West Peterborough), to the effect that Canadian soldiers at the front, 21 years of age, should have provision made for them to vote, so that those who desired to vote might not be deprived of their franchise on account of absence commanded by the country and for the defence of it. Mr. Fripp introduced the resolution. At the close of his remarks, Clark (Liberal) M.P. for Red Deer) said that in view of the fact that the soldiers would know nothing whatever of the issues he would like to know how the mover proposed to provide for such a difficulty. Mr. Fripp said that he could not say, but Mr. Burnham, who followed, demanded to know by what right the Opposition proposed to demand requirements for the franchise that were not in the Act. As a matter of fact, there was no requirement in the Act that any elector in Canada should at any time know anything about the issues.

Hon. G. P. Graham questioned the propriety of the principle of the resolution. Hon. R. Rogers strongly supported it. Proulx (Liberal) opposed. Sir Robert Borden moved in amendment that the matter be referred to a special committee to report to the House at an early date on the feasibility of the proposal. This was carried, along with the original motion.

Considerable heat suddenly developed during the debate, and party sides were strongly marked. Government supporters are indignant that giving an opportunity to vote should be opposed by the Opposition, for the defenders of the country, in the event of an election before their return.

MAINTENANCE COST ON THE WATERWORKS SYSTEM

Superintendent Explains Increased Expenditures of Past Year

SOLICITOR REPORTS ON COMPENSATION ACT

At the meeting of the Utilities Commission yesterday afternoon Waterworks Superintendent Dobbin submitted a comparative statement of maintenance account in 1913 and 1914. The reasons for the larger increases are as follows:—

Mains and hydrants, $316.38.

One item of the maintenance of mains and hydrants for the year was $600 for the repair of the blow-out on the new 18 inch main at Bear's Creek. Also much extra work was entailed by the street saving operations. Many hydrants had to be dug up and moved out to the curb line and many valve boxes raised and lowered to suit grades.

Service Pipes, $186.76.

These items belong to the new offices on Simcoe Street.

The total for the dam, pump house, mains and hydrants, service pipes and wages, amounted to:—

1913	$13,533.31
1914	12,438.46
Decrease	$1,094.85

Compensation Act.

A letter was read from Solicitor E. H. D. Hall, regarding the operations of the Workmen's Compensation Act. Mr. Hall stated that the act does not apply to persons engaged in electrical work and not exposed to the hazards incident to the nature of the work carried on in the employment but practically to every one else in the employment of the commission and when personal injury by accident arising out of and in the course of the employment is caused to any such person, the commission will be liable to pay the compensation provided for in the Act unless the injury does not disable the employe for at least 7 days or it is attributable solely to his serious and wilful misconduct, unless the injury results in death or serious disablement and according to a letter of Chief Auditor Wm Neill to the commission, the commission is individually liable to pay for this compensation and should be protected by an accident policy.

A letter was read from the Royal Insurance Company re an accident policy but no action was taken.

CONDITION LITTLE CHANGED.

The condition of John Seeney of Havelock at Nicholls Hospital was reported to be precarious this morning, although he was in no immediate danger. He is about the same as yesterday, but it was impossible to tell whether he would recover or not.

Britain Asks for Mechanics

Mr. J. J. Hartley, president of the Trades and Labor Council received the following wire from Mr. Burnham this afternoon:—

J. J. Hartley,
President Labour Council,
Peterborough.

The Government has received a cable from the British Government asking for immediate information of number of competent mechanics available to go to Britain. Standard British wages paid, fares paid both ways, wire me at once for Peterborough.

J. H. BURNHAM.

Mr. Hartley informed the Review that as soon as he had any names to communicate to Mr. Burnham he would do so and if any mechanics wish to go they should make application to Mr. Hartley at once.

ENDEAVORED TO COMPLETE CATHEDRAL'S DESTRUCTION

Rheims Bombarded For Eleven Hours and Twenty Civilians Are Killed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 23. — (Afternoon Official Statement.)—"There is nothing of importance to add to last night's communication. West of Lombaertzyde the enemy made ready to deliver two infantry attacks, which, coming under our fire, could not be carried home.

"The bombardment of Rheims was extremely violent. It lasted for a period of six hours, followed by a period of five hours. Fifteen hundred shells were dropped in all quarters of the town.

"What remains of the cathedral was made a special target and suffered seriously. The interior of the vaulted roof, which had resisted until now, was burnt. About twenty houses were fired and twenty civilians killed.

"To the east of the Argonne, between Malincourt and the Meuse, our artillery found a German battery and blew up its ammunition waggons.

"Along the remaining part of the front there is nothing to report."

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1915

A SHACKLED PRESS.

ONE OF THE POINTS mentioned by Dr. Falconer, in his recent address in Peterborough, was that Germany has always had a muzzled press. Bismarck needed a censored press, and it has been so ever since. As a consequence, there has been no free criticism of the government's policy, and the people do not know what its real movements are. Public opinion is no power in the land in Germany, as it is in English-speaking countries. Those in authority do what seems good to them, and the people are influenced to support the government's policy by a press which is merely a megaphone for praising it.

The difference between a free press and a censored press is the difference between democracy and absolute government, between government by the people and by a military autocracy. It is the difference between honesty and, if not graft, at least a misuse of public funds. The diverting of so many millions of public money in Germany for war purposes, for an expensive system of espionage, for huge miliary and naval preparations that were undertaken, not for defenee, but for aggressive purposes, would not have been possible had Germany not shackled her newspapers.

One of the most influential newspapers in Germany was owned by the Krupps. It spouted patriotism of the sort that demanded armaments before everything else, and, as long as such a policy received public support, the Krupps were certain of their dividends. The deluded people knew not the selfish, exploitive principle behind the appeals to their patriotism, and, as a result, this terrible war has come about.

A free press believes in the right to say what it thinks, to condemn or praise public policy. Such a press was incompatible with the wishes of the German government, for such a course meant parliamentary reform, and this Bismarck and his successors had set their faces against. Dr. Falconer could hardly have chosen a phrase that would have expressed better the whole cause of this war, the plight of the German people, and the false guidance of their leaders, than does that of "A Perversion of Patriotism."

ALAS! FOR OTTAWA.

SMIFF of the Bobcaygeon Independent must be in league with Smiff of the Ottawa Free Press. At any rate, their names are strangely similar and not at all uncommon. Well, these Smiffs are advocating the cancellation of all trips to New York, and visiting Ottawa instead. The Ottawa man would like to see the natives from the wilds of Bobcaygeon and Hamilton run excursions to Ottawa, presumably, we imagine, to visit their brethren there.

This is a rather peculiar thing to advocate, when nearly everybody has had to curtail their living expenses. Outside of Ottawa, most Canadians haven't money for street car trips, let alone New York or Ottawa trips. If our Ottawa confrere wants to do Canada a real service, why does he not advocate a twenty per cent. reduction on the salaries of all civil servants? That would help the Finance Minister a whole lot, because he wouldn't need nearly so much for current expenses.

But, above all things, why advocate visiting Ottawa? Surely a place of sawmills and lumber Jacks could offer only a very few of the felicities of civilized life. The last time visitors from this big metropolis stopped off at Ottawa, they were not very successful, and seemed to think the less said about it the better. Then, it is so frightfully cold there — why, a man's breath has been known to freeze solid, and there have been cases where men choked to death because their drink turned to frazil ice before it passed the bars. Smiff says guides could be provided. We think guides ought to be provided in a place like Ottawa. Visitors there need them badly. And the street car system! That ride from the C. P. R. station reminds one of the ride from Hamilton to the Halfway House years ago when the male passengers helped to push the dummy engine up the hill.

But, if Canadians must travel, why not visit Peterborough? We have the biggest lift locks in the world, and a Salvation Army band that can "knock the spots off" anything in Ottawa. Then there are our beautiful parks, the smooth, placid waters of the Otonabee, and our fire department. It is true, we have not so many cemeteries as Ottawa, since Peterborough is not such a dead place, but still we have some nice ones.

It is our opinion that, in any event, there will not be an over-amount of travelling this year, either to New York or Ottawa. New York is bad enough, but Ottawa is the limit of financial degradation. When the money's all gone, people go to Ottawa. Alas! for Ottawa.

A YEAR AGO the Postmaster-General attempted a reform, which was not successful, to regulate newspaper postage. Parliament might well consider this question. The present rates which permit the dollar daily being carried in carload lots for almost nothing certainly should be amended.

BISHOP FALLON WAS RIGHT.

THE BISHOP of London, Mgr. Fallon, who has demonstrated his capacity to administer his diocese in an efficient manner, has won his case against Abbe Beaudoin, before the Rota. Bishop Fallon, the court decided, was within his rights in dividing the parish, but the priest was awarded $7,000 in lieu of money spent on a school.

In the hearing of the case before the tribunal of the Rota, counsel for Bishop Fallon had nothing to allege against the character of Abbe Beaudoin, but claimed that the priest was lacking in administrative ability, was an agitator, and was incompetent as a minister.

A number of priests in Bishop Fallon's diocese incurred censure by giving Father Beaudoin a certificate of character claiming that he spoke English well, did not discriminate against his English parishioners, and had only objected to His Lordship's authority when he forbade the teaching of French to French-Canadians.

Efficiency sometimes demands changes that are a little severe, but certainly a diocese ought to be administered in a progressive manner, and it appears that Bishop Fallon is going to secure it.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

ALDERMAN GREEN'S suggestion that the city insure its employees on the construction of the outfall sewer is timely. These men deserve the protection, and so does the city, from any possible accident. If an accident were to happen, it would save much time, worry, and money to the city and dependents if the protection of a blanket policy were available.

A CONTEMPORARY in Eastern Canada thinks so much of the Globe's editorials that it republishes them occasionally, and so little of the Globe that it fails to append the Globe's name thereto. All the pirates do not use submarines. Some get along with scissors.—Toronto Globe. Evidently the Globe is referring to some rascally Liberal newspaper. We wonder what one it is.

SOME SAY there is no virtue in carrying charms or trinkets. That may be so, but a report comes from the front that a man who carried a medal in his breast pocket was saved a perhaps fatal wound when a German bullet struck the medal. Possibly the German sniper was aiming at the medal.

WE OBSERVED in the news columns that a man tried to shoot a girl whom he thought was not true to him. Foolish fellow He should have been thankful. But some men are awfully slow in finding things out.

A CONTEMPORARY has an article about the June bride. Is this not just a little bit previous?

Chant Before Battle.

(Life, New York.)

By the grey smoke athwart the skies,
By the hot tears in mothers' eyes,
By the wee babes that cry for bread,
By our own wounded, by our dead,
We swear that there shall come a day
When Germany shall pay.

By Rheims' great towers that ages wrought,
By Brussels with starvation bought,
By the red ruins of Louvain,
By Liege and its bloody pain,
We swear that there shall come a day
When Germany shall pay.

By every outraged maid and wife,
By every child that felt the knife,
By every shot and shell we fling,
By Belgium's self, by Belgium's king,
We swear that there shall come a day
When Germany shall pay.

—Leolyn Louise Everett.

A Sin of Commission.

(New York Evening Post.)

Jenks had been invited to a Welshrabbit party by a number of Bohemian young ladies across the hall. The rabbit did not seem to be a complete success, a fact speedily recognized by the young woman presiding at the chafing dish. "Somehow," said she, "it doesn't taste just as Marie's did the other night. I thought I remembered the recipe, but I think I must have left something out."

Jenks, who is a sententious young man, tasted reflectively, and in the best Fletcherian manner.

"My dear young woman," said he, "there's nothing you could leave out that would make it taste like that. It's something you put in."

A Good War Story.

(Exchange.)

A cavalry officer at the front wrote home: "I heard a priceless story today. An officer's servant had ninety-six hours' leave in England. He went home to his 'guvnoor's place and was the lion of the servants' hall with his stories of hair-breadth escapes and desperate dashes into the jaws of death. Late on the night before he was to return to look after his master's second charger and pack pony the telephone bell rang, and the soldier-servant went to answer it. It was someone wanting to speak to his master's mother. "I'm sorry, madam, but her grace is already bedded down," was his reply.

A Problem That Presses.

(Christian Science Monitor.)

In Canada and in the United States it would appear to be wise to find occupations for the surplus labourers; it will be judicious, at least; for the day is coming, and it is to be devoutly hoped that it may come soon, when the great mass of Europeans now held from task, trade and profession will again be able to find opportunities in peaceful pursuits. It will be better, then, we think, if these opportunities shall not, to any great extent, have been pre-empted by strangers.

Quite Another Story.

(New York Herald.)

German protagonists who are crying out so loudly against the use of neutral flags by the British have maintained a discreet silence concerning the German use of neutral flags in laying the mines that have wrought destruction to so many neutral ships in the North Sea.

Powerful Fighting.

(Yonkers Statesman.)

"I see, Sam, that the English Government has placed two New York firms an order for 500,000 razors," said the storekeeper to his coloured servant.

"Well, boss, dat looks as if dere was to be some more powerful fighting over there," replied Sam.

Germany Should Remember.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

When it comes to bluffing, Germany should remember that while the United States has no centuries of diplomatic history behind it, the national indoor sport of the republic is poker.

IMMIGRATION.

Editor Review,

Sir,—A conspiracy and fraud are a suitable subject with which to break the Sabbath. In the University magazine Professor Woodsuvett says, "hus we face, an ananalous position. here are tens of thousands of unemployed and yet hundreds of thousands are being poured into the country. Surely we are curiously inconsistent." "Many of our laws are not modern." "The immigrant is no longr a negligible factor in political life." "We have taken long enough about assimilating the immigrants. To what are we to assimilate them? After what likeness are we to fashion them? Our own? Heaven forbid. We are not good enough. We Canadians need....a great and worthy ideal."

ONE of the indispensable qualifications of a husband is that he shall be able to hook up a new gown with neatness and dispatch after having hooked up the wherewithal to procure it.

Perhaps the disagreeableness of sight drafts is the reason why many people have developed a repugnance to drafts.

Working at Its Trade.

Summer's here in all its grandeur,
All its beauty, all its heat,
Spreading sunshine like molasses
Over all the dusty street,
Melting collars that were lately
Very white and fresh and pure,
Raising sweat upon the wealthy
And the faces of the poor.

E'er it loomed upon the landscape
Like a bakeshop overdone
We were sure it was the only
Cherished and anointed one.
In our bones we felt that never
Could a season be too hot
And that summer would be certain
Every day to touch the spot.

Now we have it as our steady,
Stopping with us all the while,
And at times we pause to wonder
If we really like its style,
If for it with more affection
Hearts would not in rapture throb
If the thing were not so very Conscientious on the job.

But since summer is in season
We must make the best of it,
Though at times we almost wonder
If it isn't a misfit.
It would surely be a beauty,
Like a shirt waist ready made,
If it wasn't so persistent
In the working at its trade.

Of Course.

"Do you have any idea of how much money your wife spends?"

"My wife?"

"Yes."

"I certainly have."

"How much?"

"Every cent she gets."

Hard Swearer.

"Our sheriff is an awfully profane man, mamma."

"The sheriff?"

"Yes."

"What makes you think so?"

"'Cause papa said he swore in every one of his deputies."

Explained.

"Father said it is the little things that count."

"The little things?"

"Yes."

"The children in the kindergarten probably."

How He Takes Them.

"Does your husband take his meals with relish, my good woman?"

"With relish?"

"Yes."

"Naw; he mostly takes them with beer."

The Reason.

"Why do some quiet women look so tired?"

"It wearies them so."

"What does?"

"Holding their tongues."

Do Less.

"He is always going to do something great."

"Yes, always going."

"And I notice that for all of his going he never arrives."

A Slip.

"He is a United States senator."

"What legislature did he buy?"

"I don't understand you."

"Beg pardon! What state does he come from?"

They Stay There.

That fishes as large in the sea there may be
As ever were caught is quite right,
But it is, as fishermen all must agree,
Some trouble to get them to bite.

Probably.

"Why wait till a man is dead before speaking good of him?"

"To preserve him from a swelled head."

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

An Intended Surprise

It Resulted in an Outcome Not Intended

By RUTH GRAHAM

There is a great difference between Europe and America in the arrangement of marriages. There the wherewithal to set up a nest in which to live and rear children is the principal part of making a match; here our girls are inclined to pay more attention to whether or not they love and are loved.

Genevieve Thorpe met no man whom she cared to marry until she met Howard Tisdale. Though Howard was twenty-five years old, he had not made any advancement in money making. Indeed, he was on a salary and a small salary, at that.

It did not appear that Genevieve had anything. She and her mother, a widow, lived very plainly, the daughter occupying a salaried position. Nevertheless when Howard showed by his manner that he was pleased with her she encouraged him. His attentions grew more pointed, but he did not propose because he saw no hope of being able to be married. He was wise enough to understand that the care of a family without an adequate income would be misery for all concerned. One day he said to Genevieve:

"You and I must part company. Heaven knows that it will be a hardship to me, but marriage is the inevitable result of an intimacy such as ours. I would gladly ask you to be my wife, but I have a salary of only $800 a year. You cannot be married and continue in your position—at least, I would not have you do so. It follows that our ways must part."

"Unless you love me well enough to take every risk, I admit you are right," was Genevieve's reply.

"Do you mean that you love me well enough to take all risks with me—to live on the miserable pittance which I am earning and which I have no assurance that I shall continue to earn, to pinch and struggle and see those dependent upon you and me suffering for want of comforts, even necessaries, that we cannot give them?"

"I mean to say that I wish to marry and be married for love or not at all."

"'When poverty comes in at the door love flies out of the window.'"

"True love begets energy to provide for its enjoyment and will endure anything."

There was a silence between them, which was broken by Howard:

"Very well, Genevieve, will you marry me?"

"I will."

Then followed a period of planning. Howard, who insisted on beginning married life with no other person under the same rooftree, was for renting two or three rooms in a cheap locality. Genevieve argued that they had better take a little house of their own, even if they rented a room or two to a lodger. Howard objected to this on the ground that they might not secure the lodger, and if they did a third person in such close contact with them would be apt to make trouble. He was in favor of keeping aloof from every one.

These debates lasted some time and were finally ended by Genevieve, who handed her lover the key to her desk in a sewing room on the second floor and told him to go upstairs, unlock the desk and look in an inside drawer on the right. Howard did as he had been bidden.

Genevieve had planned a very pleasant surprise. Some years before an aunt of hers, for whom she had been named, dying, had bequeathed to her savings amounting to about $8,000. The property had come to her in a deed for a small house and some passbooks in savings banks. These with a number of other papers, consisting of vouchers, etc., Genevieve had placed in the drawer of her desk and had never used principal or interest. She was at the time she received the legacy earning her own and her mother's living and intended to hold on to her nest egg in case she should marry.

Genevieve waited, expecting Howard to return, having found the evidence of her little fortune, with a radiant countenance and take her in his arms. She had long looked forward to this moment, expecting that it would be the happiest in her life. A time sufficient for Howard to discover the evidences of her fortune elapsed, and he did not return. She resolved to wait a little longer. Still she heard nothing from him. At last, wondering what could be delaying him, she ran upstairs to the room where she kept her fortune.

The desk was open. The contents of the drawer were spread out on it, but there was no one in the room.

"Howard!" she called, thinking that her lover was hiding from her.

There was no reply.

"Howard!" she called again with a tinge of anxiety in her voice.

The silence was unbroken. She opened a closet door, the only hiding place in the room, then went out into the hall and searched everywhere. There was a back staircase, and, descending it, she looked about on the main floor. A door opened from this rear staircase to the back yard, and it stood ajar. She remembered to have closed it not long before, and there was no one except herself in the house to open it.

Genevieve was terror stricken. Howard, instead of having returned to her after the glad surprise she had intended for him, had left her. Something momentous had happened. Was he gone for a short time or forever? The uncertainty was agonizing. Returning to the desk, she looked among the papers spread out upon it for some written word from him. There was nothing but the documents pertaining to her little fortune, and none of those was missing.

The day passed and Howard did not appear. The next morning brought the postman, but no letter from her lover. A week, a month went by and the mystery was unsolved.

Meanwhile Genevieve's mother had made a hypothetical explanation in the hope of drawing her daughter's mind from her trouble by ending the suspense. She said that Howard had entered upon the match loving another sweetheart and had disappeared without an explanation because he had not the courage to make one. Genevieve was not in the least moved by this theory. She believed that there was some mystery connected with her lover's disappearance which when explained would show that he had not acted unworthily.

A year passed, during which Genevieve hoped either for Howard's return or at least a solution of the mystery of his desertion of her. The postman never left a letter at the house that she did not receive it with a rapidly beating heart. The doorbell never rang but that she hoped Howard was about to enter. There was never a man's footstep on the floor above or below her but what she said to herself, "Is it he?"

Genevieve was not satisfied that Howard had not left some word or token for her that she had failed either to find or to recognize. Again and again she went through the desk, pried into every crack, hoping to find a slip of paper that had with the predisposition of inanimate things to hide fallen under cover. Nothing was discovered by these searches. But Genevieve in her hunt did something she had never done before—she examined those papers which had come to her after her aunt's death that did not pertain to the legacy.

By this she made a startling discovery—her aunt had been secretly married. There was an envelope containing several letters beginning "Dearest Genevieve" and ending "Your loving husband." Then suddenly there rushed in upon the girl's brain an explanation of the mystery. Howard had happened upon these letters.

What was more natural than that he should suppose he had discovered a secret implicating the girl he loved? She had sent him to look upon the evidence of her little fortune without being aware that this evidence of a marriage of one whose name she bore was among the papers. What was to be expected at such a discovery? Either that he would return to upbraid her or flee from her. The latter course was what she believed, from her knowledge of him, he would be the more likely to take.

And now what should she do? She did not believe that this secret marriage had ever been imparted to her mother, and she determined not to impart it now. But Howard! How could she find him to disabuse him of the mistake he had made? Alas, he might have gone to the other side of the globe; he might have succeeded in banishing her from his mind; he might have another love—a wife.

It did not require a long while for Genevieve to make up her mind that she was powerless to reach him.

Another year and still another another passed, neither of which was any more comfortable than the first. Indeed, when the desertion occurred there were occasional flashes of anger, which helped Genevieve temporarily to change from grief to anger; now there was the tantalizing sensation that she stood in a false position, yet was powerless to explain.

One morning she received an envelope addressed in Howard's handwriting. She tore it open and withdrew a check payable to her order for $500. But there was nothing more.

Hope sprang within her. Howard, despite his fancied discovery, still loved her. Why he had sent this money she did not know. She made every effort to discover his location from the bank on which the check was drawn, but failed. Then she asked the bank to return it to the maker. This it agreed to do, and another six months passed with no further news from the missing man.

One day a telegram came from Howard: "I am ill. Come to me."

He had broken down at last. Following the address at the head of the telegram she took a train and the next day reached the city wherein she was to find the man who had left her several years before. She found him in a hospital and on reaching his bedside threw herself down beside him and folded him in her arms.

"Have I been wrong?" he asked.

"Did you read the letters to Genevieve from her husband?"

"I did."

"Genevieve was my aunt."

"Oh, heavens!"

He trembled, and Genevieve, realizing that as an invalid he should be comforted, begged him to forget his blunder, that they had many years before them.

He had wealth enough to take measures to obliterate so far as it could be obliterated the terrible mistake he had made. On his recovery they went on a long wedding trip, with a view to mingling in new scenes by which to drive their mishap from their minds. In time they returned and lived in the house the wife had inherited from her aunt and which Genevieve had intended as a surprise for her lover when he had proposed to begin life in a couple of rooms.

It takes a blind man to see how it feels to be sightless.

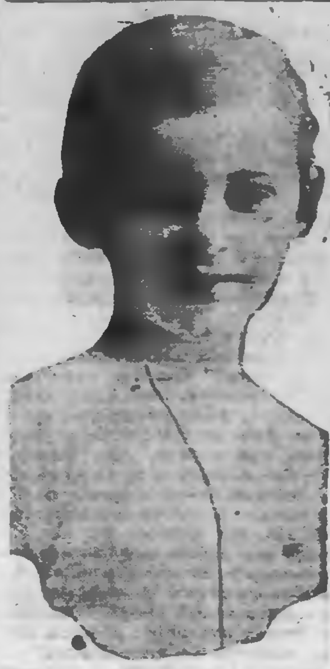
For Young Folks

Prince William, Son of the German Crown Prince.



The little boy here pictured is the oldest son of Frederick William, crown prince of Germany and the grandson of the kaiser. Because of the war in Europe the little boy does not see his father very often. Prince Frederick William is leading one of the German armies now fighting in France. Prince William Frederick was born July, 1906, so he will be nine years old on his next birthday. He has three younger brothers, Louis Ferdinand, Hubert and Frederick.

It seems rather queer to folks on this side of the world that two brothers should have the same Christian name, but that is a custom of royalty that has little favor in the greatest republic of the world. Some day, perhaps, William Frederick may come to be the ruler of the German people.

An Amusing Game.

In the game of "How Do You Like It?" one of the company leaves the room and the others fix up some word to be guessed by him when he returns. He then goes around asking each of the company "How do you like it?" It is better to select a word having a variety of meanings, as it is more difficult to guess. Suppose the word "stick" to be selected. One might answer that he liked it when he was out walking; another, when he was sealing a letter; another, when he met a savage dog, etc. If the questioner is unable to guess the word the first time he goes around again, asking, "When do you like it?" and, if not successful this time he asks, "Where do you like it?" Failing in three trials he must retire and let another word be selected. Succeeding, he must point out the person who gave the clew, who must pay a forfeit and go out to be puzzled in turn.

A Geographic Game.

A game which is entertaining as well as instructive is played as follows: There may be any number of players, and it will be enjoyed by people of all ages. Let the beginner give some geographical word—the name of a country, city, river or mountain. The next player continues with a name whose first letter is the last letter of the word given by the preceding player.

Thus suppose the first word given is Albany, the second must begin with Y—Yucatan, for instance. Number three must give a place whose initial letter is N and so on. When a player fails to have a name ready he is dropped from the game, and the one who can play the longest is, of course, the winner.

Riddle.

Without stirring from the room, where there are a number of chairs, seat yourself where it would be impossible for your mother to sit?

Answer: Seat yourself on your mother's lap.

The Ice Jewels.

The fairies were out in the storm last night,
For yesterday's barren trees
Now fill the valley with glittering light
As they toss in the morning breeze.
So hurry and let us explore
Where the paths of the woodland run—
With the jeweled branches a-sparkling o'er
At the touch of the morning sun!

And who are the fairies, you bid me tell,
That have done this wonderful thing?
Why the woodland fairies we know so well
In summer and fall and spring.
And how can the summer fays
Endure in a wintry storm?
Oh, the fairies are wise in all their ways
And, of course, know how to keep warm!

For weeks ago, when the cold winds drove
The flowers to their winter naps,
From the milkweed silk the fairies wove
The warmest of winter wraps.
On a moonlit autumn night,
In a circle under a tree,
They made them garments more soft and white
Than ever we mortals see.

And so last night—in the cold and the rain—
All dry and warm as you please,
To make the woodland pretty again
They hung the ice on the trees.
For the fairies never shirk,
But whether with ice and snow
Or flowers and leaves, they're always at work.
And aren't you glad that it's so?

—St. Nicholas.

A VETERAN WHO WAS WITH LORD ROBERTS

Laid Low With Rheumatism—But Cured By "Fruit-a-tives".

CHATHAM, ONT., APRIL 3rd, 1913.

"I am a veteran of the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny, volunteering from the Royal Artillery into the Royal Engineers, and served under Lord Roberts during the Indian Mutiny, and am a pensioneer of the British Government. Fierce hand-to-hand fighting and continual exposure left me a great sufferer from Rheumatism, so much so that my legs swelled up, making it impossible for me to walk.

"Fruit-a-tives". They cured me of both the Rheumatism and Constipation. In my regular employment, I walk thirty miles a day and enjoy perfect health".

THE SEWING BASKET.

Some Hints For Making the Needlewoman's Work More Convenient.

To prevent soft material from puckering when sewing it on the machine put strips of newspaper under it and sew through both material and paper.

When an unusually large hole has to be darned on house linen or woven underwear, it is a good plan to first tack a piece of net over the hole and then darn on the net. When finished cut away the rough edges of the net with a pair of small scissors.

Loose buttons, hooks and eyes, etc., are apt to get about in the workbasket. Collect them and thread hooks on one safety pin, eyes on another, buttons on another. Close each safety pin, and everything may be kept in place.

To make tucks in blouses, etc., lay the fronts together, stitch on machine with needle unthreaded, then fold by perforated line and stitch in usual manner.

Choose a shallow drawer in which to keep the sewing materials. Fit into it small cardboard boxes and fasten each with a drawing pin through the bottom. Then place in each box different kinds of sewing material—buttons, hooks, eyes, darning needles, safety pins, thimbles, etc.

The Popular Begonia.

The begonia in its many varieties is a perennially popular house plant. One of the best winter begonias is the exquisite Gloire de Lorraine, which produces an abundance of pink flowers above its attractive waxen green foliage. It will thrive in a temperature as low as 65 degrees F. The Gloire de Sceaux is another beautiful pink begonia. The Rex begonia is the most popular indoor foliage plant, if we except the Boston fern.

Cheesecloth Duster.

Don't think any old rag good enough for a duster. Have a cheesecloth duster, and keep it for that purpose until it is worn out.

The oftener it is washed the softer it gets. Have two separate cloths for dishes and pots. Keep the dish cloth for that purpose. Use the pot cloth for wiping shelves, etc. Scald both out once a day. When you need a new dish cloth take the old one for a pot cloth.

THE COLOR SCHEME.

All colors for day wear are subdued.

Rose is a favorite color.

A lovely bronze green is among the favorite shades.

Burnt green is one of the fashionable tones.

Dark green is firmly established among staple colors.

The all white frock continues its popularity for evening.

Dark blue and seal brown is a modish combination.

The all black frock with an artistic dash of color is fashionable.

Navy blue and brown and green are in great favor. Among light colors sand and putty are chosen.

Black and white combinations and soft rich colors are in favor for afternoon costumes.

Brown is fashionable, but to be correct the brown must be dull. Dark brown shoes and gossamer hose of brown silk are worn with frocks of almost any color.

At the request of the Ontario Government the license commissioners of North Essex revoked their action transferring a hotel license held by Wm. Payne to his wife.

TWO NERVOUS WOMEN

Made Well By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I had a severe case of nervous prostration, with palpitation of the heart, constipation, headaches, dizziness, noise in my ears, timid, nervous, restless feelings and sleeplessness.

"I read in the paper where a young woman had been cured of the same troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I threw away the medicines the doctor left me and began taking the Compound. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to sit up and in a short time I was able to do all my work. Your medicine has proved itself able to do all you say it will and I have recommended it in every household I have visited."—Mrs. MARY JOHNSTON, 210 Siegel Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Another Bad Case.

Ephrata, Pa.—"About a year ago I was down with nervous prostration. I was pale and weak and would have hysteric spells, sick headaches and a bad pain under my shoulder-blade. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand long enough to do my dishes.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and happy and I have begun to gain in weight and my face looks healthy now."—Mrs. J. W. HORNBERGER, R. No. 3, Ephrata, Pa.

The Humorous Side of the Ottawa Aeroplane Scare

(H. F. Gadsby in Ottawa Free Press)

Princess Patricia had just put the cat out for the night and the Duchess was winding the eight-day clock in the diningroom when the news that aeroplanes were heading for Ottawa burst like a bomb on the royal household. Sir Robert Borden had received a message from Brockville which, with great presence of mind, he immediately telephoned to Rideau Hall and also to the Headquarters Staff. Instantly measures were taken to preserve the Canadian branch of the Royal family from extinction and to guard the Capital city from disfigurement by anything except saw mills and lumber yards. The blinds at Rideau Hall were drawn, the lights in the park put out and the four aides, hastily summoned from their evening prayers at Rideau Cottage did sentry-go on the lawn, the idea being to catch any bombs that might be thrown and hurl them to second base before the runner could make the bag.

The message from Brockville was not very definite. The chief of police had seen three aeroplanes. He had summoned the whole of the night force, consisting of one stalwart man and true, to assist him in seeing the aeroplanes. The chief saw three aeroplanes, the force saw three—that made six. Then both of them together saw three aeroplanes — which made six more, but only three were counted. They saw the three aeroplanes, first with one eye, then with the other. They closed both eyes and could still see three aeroplanes—the fearful sight was printed on their very souls.

Their Presence of Mind.

They opened their eyes again, very cautiously—the aeroplanes were still doing business. One of them threw a searchlight on the sleeping town—evidently looking for George Graham who, luckily for him, had switched to South Renfrew some three years ago. Another of them dropped fire balls. A third was seen to descend in the grounds of the lunatic asylum seeking the company, no doubt, of other balloonatics.

The chief is a brave man. His duty is to get the evidence at no matter what risk. Again he closed his left eye and again he saw three aeroplanes — three little twinkling stars, up above the earth so high, like three diamonds in the sky. But they were not stars, no stars, fixed or otherwise, wobble like that, nothing could wobble that way except an aeroplane or a politician. Besides, it was a black night and a storm blowing up. Neither were they comets. Comets carry their tails behind them, but the tails on these things hung straight down.

"Bill," said the chief, "there's more of them aeroplanes where this outfit comes from. How many do you make it?"

"I make it three, chief. I can do better with the other eye, but three'll be enough to wire to Ottawa."

"And what time have you, Bill?" The two compared watches. "I make it 11.45." "Right you are, Bill!" The chief jotted down in his notebook: "Sunday night, 11.45—three aeroplanes, Bill and me both seen 'em." "We've got to get this thing straight," the chief muttered.

That gruesome Hour.

It was, as he said, midnight—that gruesome hour when graveyards give up their dead and spirits walk abroad. However, as no spirits can legally walk abroad on Saturday nights after seven o'clock, much less on Sundays, it must have been aeroplanes.

"Bill," said the chief, now thoroughly aroused, "I hear a noise, a whirrin' noise. I never hear buzzin' like it afore, 'cept mebbe at the Methodist conference."

"Mebbe," said Bill, who was a Grit appointee, "mebbe it's the wheels in General Sam's head that's whirrin'. He's making a lot of fuss these days."

"No, Bill," said the chief stoutly. "General Sam can't fly that high. It's aeroplanes."

Which explains, in fable form, how the aeroplanes, including the queer noises, were telephoned to Ottawa, giving that town such a thrill of real war as it has not felt since August last, although the place bristles with admirals, generals and honorary colonels.

Parade of the Knights.

Never was Ottawa so stirred. The sleepers in Beechwood cemetery and the bronze statues on Parliament Hill alone remained unmoved. The guns at Nepean Point and other strategic spots poised heavenward. Denny Murphy's barges were drawn up in line of battle. All the Headquarters Staff had their monocles trained on the sky. The Rideau Club belched brigadiers. The Gentleman Usher of the Senate seized his Black Rod and Speaker Sproul armed himself hurriedly with the mace. All the Knights in the Capital—Knights of the Garter, Knights of St. Michael and St. George, Knights Templar, Knights of Pythias, Knights of Columbus, Ten Knights in a Barroom, and others, put on their feathers and gold lace, their swallow-tail coats and white pants and prepared to meet the enemy. In the good old boiler plate days these knights would have had to be dressed by the plumber, but this being the twentieth century, they were able to hook up their own clothes and thus gained a good hour's start on the foe.

The Knights Bachelor and the Knights Married marched shoulder to shoulder. The Knights of the Bath, neglecting for once their bathing privileges and stopping only to shave and manicure their finger nails, rushed to the colors. The members of the thirty-seven orders of merit, the D.S.O.'s, I.S.O.'s, V.C.'s, R.R.C.'s, K.B.'s, K.C.'s, I.O.O.F.'s, I.O.G.T.'s, P.C.'s, P.M.'s, M.P.'s, P.D.Q.'s, and many other lettered heroes, wearing their stars, ribands, badges, iron crosses, double crosses, nose rings, tie straps, martingales, toupees and other miniature decorations, got together and formed an iron alphabet of war such as only Ottawa can muster.

Playing the Game.

The honorary colonels, whose military function is to draw off the leaders of the enemy by entertaining them at their clubs, were at once put on a war footing. Five of them were indulging in what is known in Germany as kriegspiel, a war game which is played with a full deck. Although, at the time the alarm was sent out, one had a bobtail flush, another three tens and a third a straight open at both ends, and the rally threatened to be a brisk one, these gallant fellows at once threw their hands on the table, and, cashing in hastily, pushed all the buttons, thus mobilizing an army of waiters, who were pressed into the service as an ammunition column. This little incident goes to show how much an honorary colonel is prepared to give up for his country. Very few people would lay down hands like that without an argument. Honorary Colonel George Taylor was among the first to arrive at the rendezvous, puffing a little, and fumbling with one of his suspender buttons, but otherwise in full marching order.

The movement was conducted with the greatest secrecy, only a faint clinking being heard as the Martinis and Manhattans gurgled into their respective positions. The colonels told nobody but their wives and this explains why not more than two columns appeared on the front pages of every morning paper in Canada.

Yes, the aeroplanes caused a great flutter. Nobody in Ottawa saw 'em but everybody believed in them except the newspaper men who wrote them up. The correspondents drew the blinds in the press room as a guarantee of good faith in a big story.

"Kindly raise that curtain," said Chisholm, who has a queue of a dozen. "I'm paid space, and every aeroplane I see means money."

They Feel For It.

However, that was not the spirit of the generals and honorary colonels and members of the Cabinet. They fell for the aeroplanes. It was Sunday and the order went out, "Let your light so shine—that it won't be seen by the Germans." And at once the House of Commons doused the glim, the cluster lamps on Parliament Hill and Wellington Street were turned off at the tap, and all of Ottawa's Great White Ways became as dark as Doctor Reid's pocket in a close election. The lid was also put on the mint lest the daring aviators catch the gleam of gold through the iron roof and make a grab of it. Besides the sight of a five dollar gold piece is enough, these times, to madden any community, and who knows what Ottawa might do if Finance Minister White's minus accumulation of $110,000,000 for the fiscal year 1915 should be revealed to the public gaze. My theory is that a deficit as big as that can't be stored anywhere except at the mint, and that the aeroplanes were after it.

The news of the aeroplanes was received with calmness and high resolve by the Cabinet, seven and a half per cent. higher resolve, I may say, than would have been possible before the Finance Minister announced his tariff increases. Hon Frank Cochrane dismissed it by saying that he didn't have any air lines in his department. Doctor Reid said it was impossible to place customs officers where they could collect on aeroplanes. Doctor Roche remarked that the Interior was his job and the frontiers would have to look after themselves. The Honorable George Foster said he was willing to read his patriotic lecture to the hostile airmen if that would hold them for a while. The Minister of Justice declared his willingness to spring one of his three hundred word sentences without commas, on them. The Hon Thomas Crothers cited the Alien Labor Act and the Lord's Day Act as legal impediments. The Hon Douglas Hazen muttered that air navies and sea navies all looked alike to him now that his colleagues had left him nothing to manage but the fish. Major-General Sam Hughes thought he might hurl them back by reading his latest poem on The Battle of the Marne to them.

Bob's Bright Idea.

The other ministers made suggestions, each after his own humor, but the brighest thought of all came from the Honorable Robert Rogers.

"Why," said Bob, who is a dead game sport, "don't we get a few aeroplanes of our own and use 'em to drop campaign literature into the constituencies? It would make an impression, coming from aloft that way."

And indeed it would. At any rate I'd hate to be hit by a political argument that drops sixteen feet the first second, thirty-two feet the second sixty-four the third and so on in geometrical progression.

The Senators, on the whole, took the ground that aeroplanes increased the mortality risks unfairly and were justly indignant. They didn't want to have their sleeping porch, the Red Chamber, destroyed by bombs. It was an atrocious way, quite German, they argued, to abolish the Senate from that quarter. As an orator Senator Cloran defied any aeroplane to soar as high as he could. Senator de Boucherville and Senator Bowell, veterans each of ninety years said they'd like to see the aeroplane that they couldn't have thrown catch-as-catch-can, two falls out of three, forty years ago. Senator Dennis, as a newspaper proprietor, at once telephoned his Ottawa correspondent to secure the aeroplanes, exclusively, if possible, for the Halifax Herald.

With Common Members.

Space lacks to tell how the members of Parliament took it. H. B. Ames said: "I hope they wont hurt my shoe factory." Petit Barrette sang the Marseillaise, getting as far as high C to meet the aeroplanes. R. B. Bennett delivered a speech on his ancestors, the United Empire Loyalists. Colonel Hugh Clarke told a funny story which would have made anything but an aeroplane laugh itself to death. Dr. Michael Clark exclaimed: "Where are your barriers now? It over-rides them like free trade!" William Cockshutt said: "There ought to be seven and a half per cent. more protection against these intruders. Boost the tariff until we're on a level with them."

The aeroplanes failed to arrive—something detained them—and the armed gathering dispersed. Precautions were not relaxed next day, however. The members of Parliament did not have a candle-light session, no dark-lantern brigade was present—at least not ostentatiously so—but the House sat with blinds drawn and the mezzanine roof carefully shaded. One or two of the members, whose noses might be expected to heliograph our position, had these beacons carefully masked. Middleboro and certain other members with a tendency to reflect light, painted their bald spots a war gray, and let it go at that. A few members got mildly lit up during the afternoon, and thus furnished a subdued illumination of their own.

Northup's Best.

Billy Northup, who was wearing a chatoyant creation, a vivid and vivacious waistcoat of green and yellow, was instructed by Colonel Percy Sherwood to change it for something less attractive, which he did without a murmur, for the benefit of his native land and the safety of the British Empire. The members as a whole were warned to avoid flashes of rhetoric, glittering figures of speech, irridescent metaphores, glowing tributes and scintillating wit—all of which they did without much difficulty. No action was taken in regard to the Senate, because that is a body which is not liable to strifle fire under any circumstances.

It turns out that they were not German aeroplanes after all, but fire balloons sent up by certain good folk in Morristown, N.Y., who took this Fourth of July way of celebrating a hundred years of peace with their Canadian neighbors. All's well that ends well, but Ottawa was ready just the same.

MARCHING ARMIES—FIFTEEN MILES GOOD DAY'S WORK

But to do This Day After Day Requires Good Artillery Stock and Almost Perfect Conditions—The Pace for Soldiers in Various Countries

The infantry pace varies in detail in the armies of the nations. It varies not only in length of step, but in the number of steps to the minute, and each nation, of course, thinks its own step is the best.

One peculiar step, known as the "parade march," or "goose step," is used at times by German soldiers. No other army has a step similar to it. The German goose step consists in throwing out the legs without bending the knees, and it is used only on ceremonial occasions, in changing guard and when a detachment of men pass an officer of high rank.

The rate of march of a detachment of infantry in active service depends on many factors, including the size of the marching body or the length of the column, the training, physical condition and spirit of the troops, the road and the weather.

Two and a half miles an hour and fifteen miles a day is a good average for seasoned infantry carrying, of course, field equipment. Seasoned troops in good spirits and spurred by the prospect of action may be depended on to do much better than this when the situation requires it, but when an infantry division or even a brigade has moved over fifteen miles of road in one day it has done a day's work.

Stonewall Jackson's "foot cavalry of the valley" now and then covered forty miles in one march, but it was extraordinary infantry.

In some of the press reports from the Russo-Japanese war it was given out that on occasion large bodies of Japanese infantry covered fifty miles of road in a day and night and came up on the firing line fresh enough to shoot. But a great many prodigies were accredited to Japanese troops in that war.

It has long been a saying among military men of countries other than France that the French foot soldier has the best legs in Europe, and the mobility of an army depends on its feet and legs. Infantry is as good as its feet. An infantryman who can march and shoot is worth a regiment of men who straggle, hunt shade, pant for water, develop blisters on the feet and keep their ears pricked up only for mess call, sick call and recall.

In the American army the length of the full step in quick time is thirty inches, measured from heel to heel, and the cadence is at the rate of 120 steps to the minute. At 120 steps to the minute the soldier marches 3,600 inches a minute, which equals 100 yards. And marching 100 yards a minute he will march 6,000 yards in one hour, or three and nine twenty-seconds of a mile—a little under three and a half miles. They do not do this practically because time must be taken out for rest.

The British infantry step is thirty-one and one-half inches, the longest of all the steps. Germany keeps step with Switzerland, each doing thirty-one inches, while twenty-nine inches is the pace of the armies of Italy, France and Austria. The Russians take the shortest step, twenty-seven and one-half inches and only do 112 in a minute. The German infantryman does 114, the Austrian 115 and the French and Italian each manage 120. Consequently, to march a mile takes the Russian twenty minutes, the Austrian eighteen and two-thirds minutes, the French and Italian eighteen minutes, while the German could beat this by ten or eleven seconds.

A fair day's march for a battery or battalion or regiment of field artillery is twenty miles, but to make this day after day on the usual American road without killing the horses not only requires good artillery stock with some warm blood in their arteries, but perfect fitting harness and drivers who have some native intelligence and into whom discipline has been hammered. The usual practice in the light artillery is to march for fifty minutes and halt and rest ten minutes. During that rest, which is mainly in the interest of the horses, collars are opened and laid back so that a horse's shoulder may be relieved and cooled, and, of course, the limber props are let down that the weight of the pole may be taken off the necks of the wheelers.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

EXPENSES OF PROVINCE FOR THE PAST YEAR

Cost Was Over Twenty-two Million Dollars

Toronto, Feb. 23.—The public accounts of Ontario were brought into the house yesterday afternoon by Hon. T. W. McGarry as the initial act of his new office as provincial treasurer. In summary they show that the expenditure of the financial year which closed on Oct. 31 exceeded the receipts by $627,928, the deficit being due to the increased cost of public service, while the revenue showed little increase. In spite of the measures taken last year by new taxes, the spending of approximately one million dollars in branches of public service occasioned the shortage at the year's end.

The current account revenue for the year was $11,122,382, and a large receipt in this came from the consolidated revenue fund as an adjustment of the balance of the T. & N.O. Railway. The revenue coming through ordinary channels has both been increased by $400,000, the T. & N. O. contribution last year being $954,629, and supplementing other sources to roll up a total of $11,188,302.

Succession Duties.

The statement this year shows that succession duties and corporation taxes boosted the income, the latter bringing in $1,388,308, and the former $1,196,818. Both of these hovered about the million mark last year. Hydro-Electric interest changes on loans account for $100,000 more, and, in spite of food and financial conditions, public institutions added $50,000 to the treasury.

The capital expenditure of the province took a jump from $5,223,516 to $8,801,641, and a large drop in revenue occurred in the receipts of the lands, forests and mines department. The 1914 revenue was $2,340,657, fall some $400,000 below that of 1913.

Maintenance of public institutions and increased educational support explain much of the greater current expenditure.

Nearly $70,000 more went to education, making the total expenditure in this branch over two millions. Agriculture, maintenance and hyrdo administration took increases of varying amounts, the greatest being $130,000 for the second of these.

The contributions of flour, apples, beans and other accessories to overseas aid funds in Britain and Belgium account for $574,763. Advances to the Hydro for new construction work increased the general capital expenditure, the total in this particular reaching $4,087,556. Northern Ontario received $816,225, which is about $200,000 less than the previous year. A cut was also registered in colonization work.

The total expenditure of Ontario for the year was $22,196,758.

Seven attaches of the French war office were in Hamilton. They said they had instructions to place orders for their department to the amount of $5,000,000.

Addressed by Judge Huycke.

Judge Huycke in addressing the Grand Jury explained that they were present in dual capacity. They represent the citizens of the county and as representatives of the ratepayers it is their duty to investigate and look into all institutions kept up by the county. The manner in which the inmates are being treated must also be gone into. If any member of the jury sees anything he wishes to have improved, it is his duty to bring the matter before the rest of the jury. If officials are found to be performing their duties in an efficient manner a little recognition is quite in order. The building could be looked into and great care exercised in seeing that they are properly fitted with fire escapes.

But one case of the list to be tried at this session will come before them. It is the grand jury's duty to ascertain if the charge against Edgar Grose is sufficient to warrant a trial. They must listen to the evidence of the crown and if it is sufficient they must return what is known as a "true bill."

The crime this man is charged with is murder, the most serious of all crimes. There are various degrees of the crime of taking another man's life. There are in all five degrees but in this case the two to be taken into consideration are manslaughter and murder. The difference is that murder means killing a man with malice and forethought, manslaughter is homicide without malice or a pre-conceived idea.

Judge Huycke made clear the difference in manslaughter and murder. The former is punishable but is not as serious as the latter. If a man kills another in a heat of passion, that is recognized not as murder but manslaughter. Generally speaking when men quarrel, and one of the participants in the fight is killed the other is charged with manslaughter. Whether the accused in this case be tried for murder or manslaughter they are to determine.

Before concluding, His Honor spoke for a few moments on the great European struggle.

At the conclusion of the remarks of the crown, the court adjourned till tomorrow at one o'clock. In the meantime the grand jury is hearing the evidence of the crown in the case of King vs. Grose.

G. N. Shaver of the law firm of Cochrane and Shaver, Toronto, is conducting the prosecution, and G. N. Gordon, of Gordon and Widdifield, is acting for the accused.

One Jury Case.

On the civil list there is one jury case, that of Clute vs. G. T. R., and non-jury case, that of Bank of Ottawa vs. Ferguson, Hay, Bell and Brownscome.

Case Settled.

The case of Pressick vs. Cordova, in which action was brought by Mrs. Lilly Pressick against the Cordova Mines for damages for the death of her husband in the mines in March, 1912, has been settled out of court by the defendants consenting to a judgment for $1300.

The action was originally tried before Mr. Justice Latchford and a jury when judgment was delivered in May, 1913, in favor of the plaintiff for $1750. The defendants appealing to the Court of Appeal for Ontario, two judges decided in favor of the plaintiff and two judges in favor of the defendants, and subsequently on appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, two judges decided in favor of the plaintiff and three judges directed that there should be a new trial, the peculiar result being that five judges had thus decided in favor of the plaintiff and five in favor of the defendants.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, of Peck, Kerr and McElderry, was counsel for the plaintiff, and M. K. Cowan, K. C., of Beatty, Blackstock, Fasken, Cowan and Chadwick, Toronto, for the defendants.

Want Citizen Papers.

At this afternon's sitting Solicitor B. D. Hall made application for naturalization papers for Nicholas Limper (formerly Lumparopulo)s of the town of Daliana, province of Cincurais, Greece, who has been a resident of Canada for three and a half years, and also for Nicholas Gavas, of Tripoli, Greece, who has been in this country the same length of time. The former is a chef and the latter a pool room manager.

The granting of naturalization papers will be made at the close of the sitting.

MILKMAID WHO SERVED ROYALTY JOINS ANCESTORS

Miss Emma Kitchen Traded on Charter Given Her Family by James I

LONDON, Feb. 23.—Mrs. Emma Kitchen is dead, breaking London's last link with Arcadia. Though she lived to see aeroplanes and automobile busses, she was of the Merrie England of pipe and tabor.

Mrs. Kitchen was a milkmaid, and at her historic stall in the Mall, St. James' Park, had sold to kings and queens and commoners for nearly 70 years. Long she stood there with her two patient cows, Blossom and Nancy, a quaint picture in the middle of workaday London.

Unfortunately Mrs. Kitchen did not look the part. Milkmaids should wear Watteau panniers and carry their pails on a beribboned yoke. And they should not be called Emma. There was nothing pastoral about Mrs. Kitchen except her trade. Just a gray, bent figure, ruddy faced and wearing an expansive apron and a white mob cap.

There was perhaps one Arcadian touch in her life. She married a harlequin in a circus.

James I. Gave Permission.

The right to sell milk in the Mall has been in the Kitchen family for nearly three centuries. It was in 1623 that James I. gave one John Manley permission to set up a booth behind Spring Gardens for the sale of milk, appointing him at the same time "Purveyor to the King. Families waited on daily." At that time the cows in their stalls were reinforced by asses, the milk of which was considered a great delicacy. Here the bucks of those spacious days would repair to take their morning glass—maybe bringing their own rum—and sport their clouded canes.

At this same "pitch," Mrs. Kitchen's great grandmother kept her cows and sold their milk, until she died at the age of 103. Her daughter followed, and held the fort until her ninety-second year, leaving her daughter in charge for seventy-nine years. This was Mrs. Kitchen's mother. And the late milkmaid was not the last of her line, for, true to the family tradition, she left the business to a daughter who still sells milk, but on another "pitch." This is Mrs. Orford, daughter of a milkmaid and a harlequin.

By the early eighties the popularity of milk in the Mall had grown so that there were no less than eight stalls there, each with its attendant cows. Two of these belonged to the Kitchen family, one being managed by the late Mrs. Kitchen and the other by her sister, Mrs. Burry.

Interlopers Evicted.

When plans for the new Mall were drawn in 1866 the six interlopers were evicted and their stalls pulled down about their ears, but Mrs. Kitchen was allowed to remain. In 1901 they were moved back a few yards to make way for the new thoroughfare. Thenceforward life became troubled for Mrs. Kitchen. The office of works was a prosaic institution, with little sympathy for the archaic and picturesque, and one dark day in February, 1905, they served a cold blue notice on the milkmaids to quit. After 282 years! And in her "bottom drawer" Mrs. Kitchen had the original documents granted to her ancestors by James.

They pleaded and took counsel's opinion and pleaded again, but the office of works said "Out you go." They talked of "users" and "easements" and "squat right," but the officials were adamant. They talked of their great-grandmother, their grandmother, of their mothers, but "Out you go," said the iconoclasts, and out they went. Their stall was pulled down, their cows driven home, while the two old women wept loud and long over their spilt milk.

Queen Victoria as among their mother's customers, and a brother of Mrs. Kitchen had been riding groom to the then Prince of Wales. So he milkmaids appealed to King Edward.

His Majesty intervened on their behalf, had an interview with Sir Schomberg McDonnell, and as a result the old ladies were granted a new site for their stall behind the Horse Guards' parade. And here today you can buy a glass of milk from Mrs. Orford, the direct descendant of John Manley, milkman to James I.

But there are no cows now, no three-legged stool. Cows are barred in the new lease, and but for the water in the Victoria Memorial, you can not get a drink in the whole length of the Mall—except milk.

TO THE REAR

How Soldiers Wounded on Firing Line Troop From the Field

Merely as a picture, the march of the wounded to the rear after one of the battles in Europe tells a story of the war. It is a microscopic detail of a great panorama that is passing before the eyes of the world. The correspondent who describes it was traveling in an automobile toward the front, when a dark mass of troops approaching him in the road at length outlined itself as men put out of action.

"Then we saw that the soldiers were not of the same regiment—that their uniforms were conglomerate. We saw the misfits of the French line regiments, the gay trappings of the saphis and Chasseurs d'Afrique, the skirt trousers of the Zouaves, Turcos and Senegales, the khaki of the British Tommies, and the turbans of the Hindus. But all these men in the varied costumes in the army of the allies wore one common mark — a bandage. Arm or head or face was wrapped in white cloth.

"As the front rank came level with us, a dust caked British Tommy, with a bandage over one eye, winked his good eye at us and touched his cap in salute. We took our hats off as the tragic crowd surrounded us. The Tommy sat down on our running board and I handed him a cigarette.

"The cigarette established cordial relations at once. Tommy's lean face was browned by the sun and streaked with dirt. About the bandage which encircled his head and crossed his right eye were cakes of dirt. He asked then: 'Is this Frawnce, or is it Belgium?' At my answer he squirmed around on the running board, called to a companion in khaki just coming up, his arm in a sling. ''E says it's Frawnce.' The other shrugged his shoulder indifferently and saluted us.

"I asked the man concerning the battle, but again he only shrugged his shoulder. The man on the running board turned his eye upward and said: "It's 'ell, that's wot it is.' I replied that my question had to do with the course of the battle—which side was winning; and he, too, shrugged at that. Then he arose and plodded on, and I gave a cigarette to his companion.

"The black face of a Turco appeared at the car window. One arm was in a sling and a bandage was wound about his brow. But his eye shone brightly at the thought of tobacco and at the smell of it now arising on all sides. He was tobacco hungry. He was more than that. He was tobacco starving. He poked his other arm into the car. I motioned him to crowd his entire bulk into the window so that the others would not see. Then I gave him a cigar. He hung over the car frame as I held the lighted tip of my own cigar. He puffed a cloud into the interior. He looked at the cigar fondly and seemed to measure its length. It was a good cigar. If it had been a miserable cheroot his regard would have been the same. He took another puff and drew a complete mouthful into his lungs. His cheeks bulged and his eyes glinted inward as though he looked at the tip of his nose. I wondered how long he could keep that huge mouthful of smoke within him. Again he held the cigar close to his eyes and seemed to measure its length. Finally he poured forth the smoke from nose and mouth and ejaculated the only English word he knew, 'good!'

"A chasseur stopped and asked our chauffeur to tighten a thong of his bandage. We asked him where they were going and he replied vaguely: 'To the rear.' 'And what then?' one of us asked. 'Oh, I hope we will all be fighting again soon,' he replied.

"They were all like that. They wanted to be fighting again soon. They were not happy. They were not unhappy. They were indifferent, more or less, made so by utter fatigue and the pain of their wounds. But they all wanted to be fighting again soon."

ARRESTS WERE MADE IN THE BASEMENT OF METHODIST CHURCH

Harriston, Feb. 23.—On several mornings of late the caretaker of the Methodist church found in the basement evidences of a midnight feast and debauch. On the morning of Sunday, the 14th, among other telltale evidence, he found a woman's comb. A watch was set, and on Saturday night about 11.30 John Dunnigan of Listowel, Thomas Wilson of Wallace township and Mrs. Nettie Wright of Harriston were arrested in the basement. Yesterday they appeared before magistrate Brisbin and Mayor Henry and pleaded guilty. Dunnigan and Mrs. Wright were each sentenced to Guelph jail for six months, the former with hard labor, the magistrate adding that in his case he wished it had been in his power to send him down for two years. Wilson, as a first offender, was fined $25 and costs or 30 days. The fine was paid. Mrs. Wright is the wife of an industrious citizen, with a family of five children.

Two years ago Dunnigan and Mrs. Wright were convicted on a charge of exactly the same nature, for which Dugan spent six months at the prison farm, while Mrs. Wright, on a plea made on her behalf by her husband, was fined $5.

CALAIS BOMBED

Zeppelin Airship Kills Five Civilians

PARIS, Feb. 23.—A Zeppelin airship bombarded Calais yesterday morning, according to an official statement issued last night. It dropped projectiles which killed five persons, all civilians, and cause some unimportant material damage.

A despatch to the Havas Agency from Calais says that a German dirigible airship dropped a number of bombs yesterday, which did slight damage to the St. Omer, Hazebrouck and Dunkirk railroad line in the vicinity of Fontinettes. Train service over the line was immediately reestablished. Two incendiary bombs damaged several dwellings in the village.

Fontinettes is a little over a mile south of St. Omer, which lies twenty miles southeast of Calais.

CANADIANS IN ACTION?

Boulogne Advices Say Artillery Has Had Baptism of Fire.

OTTAWA, Feb. 23.—The Canadian artillery has been in action, according to information received from Boulogne. The infantry are in the reserve trenches.

A shell burst yesterday near a motor car occupied by officers who had taken up an observation post, and Capt. Greer of the Army Service Corps, Toronto, is reported slightly wounded in the arm.

The Princess Patricias, who have been in a rest camp for some time, returned to the trenches last week and repulsed a heavy attack by German Landsturmers. The Patricias suffered only slightly.

Capt. W. D. Greer went as the senior officer from Toronto of the Canadian Army Service Corps. He was in charge of No. 12 Company of the Divisional Train. He has been connected with the Army Service Corps for eight years, and was "always a very painstaking and efficient officer."

The following casualties among the Canadian Expeditionary Force were announced by the Militia Deparment last night:

Deaths—Feb. 16, Pte. George Henfrey, 2nd Battalion, at No. 5 Casualty Clearing Station, France. Cause not stated. Next of kin, Mrs. Rose Henfrey (wife), 170A Bleecker street, Toronto.

Feb. 20, Pte. George T. Bell, Royal Canadian Dragoons, at Bulford Hospital, from meningitis. Next of kin, Mrs. George T. Bell, postoffice box 42, Runcan, Victoria, B.C.

Pte. Henfrey went with the first contingent in the 9th Mississauga Horse.

Owners of Evelyn Waive Protest.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23. — William L. Harriss, of the firm which owned the steamship Evelyn, sunk in the North Sea Saturday, announced yesterday that his firm would make no protest to the State Department as he considered the loss of the ship due to a war risk which he had taken. The Department, however, has ordered Naval Attache U. S. Gherhardi in Germany to make a full report.

LONDON DISBELIEVES GERMAN VERSION OF THE RUSSIAN DEFEAT

Berlin's Claim That 100,000 Men Were Captured in East Prussia is Followed by Statement That "the Pursuit has Come to an End."

Snow Has Impeded the Movement of Slav Troops.

LONDON, Feb. 23. — The British newspapers print two conflicting versions of the recent battles by which the Germans drove the Russians back over the East Prussian frontier, but they are inclined to accept the Russian version that the Russians fell back in orderly fashion, fighting an effective rear guard action.

As against this is the renewed German claim of 100,000 prisoners and a staggering array of captured munitions. It is noted, however, that Berlin says: "The pursuit has come to an end," and British observers say this means that another costly German rush has fallen short.

Frederick Rennet, The Daily News' correspondent at Petrograd says:

"Since Baron Burian was given control of the Austrian Foreign Office, with his policy of close co-operation with the German General Staff, the process has been noticeable of the merging of the German and Austrian forces in the east into one army. In the last official records of the fighting it is shown that the Austrians are in North Poland under German command. In the Plotzk region also over 1,000 Germans were among the prisoners taken in the last engagements. In the eastern Carpathians many of these were new conscripts in the Hussars, and mostly were about 18 years old. This interchange of troops gives the appearance of unity to the enemy's joint strategy, which is not borne out by the actual situation.

"Across the entire length of the eastern front the idea of out-flanking either end of the Russian line is wholly out of the question, but, possibly, remains an effective obstruction.

"The German movement in the north has ceased its aggressive character, and apparently aims at fastening its troops among chosen defensive positions above the Bobh river and westward of the Ossowiec, especially in the curve of the Bobh west of its junction with the Marev. The Russians are now attacking this position and have moved against the Germans farther west on the road above Ostrolenka to the Prussian frontier.

"The distribution of reinforcements was greatly impeded by the snow, but the men have now reached their assigned positions. Snow on the branch lines proved a heavy handicap during the first retirement, when the strength and enveloping character of the German advance was realized. The only track which remained serviceable throughout was the main line through Wirballen, which has engineering protection against snow drifts, so as to keep traffic with Europe open during peace times, but on the trains which attempted to bring troops across the branch lines, almost all came to a dead halt against the dead masses of snow. The men had to climb down and wade forward.

"The infantry usually took about three days to cover a distance which in the open season would require only twelve hours. Motor wagons in the countryside, away from the main line, almost all failed in the snow.

"Operations in Galicia are developing into a most interesting situation. The Austro-German combination is making a determined effort on the River Dunajetz, south of Larnow, to seize the railway at Zuklicayn. Three broad infantry assaults were beaten back Saturday with heavy losses. At the other end of Galicia the Austrians in great numbers have occupied Stanielau. They are the army which was recently hovering near Roumania. They are measuring their strength in this region for a struggle over the control of the upper valley of the Stryj.

"The Russian position to the Carpathian passes grow stronger. They hold firmly the Dukla, La Bortch and Uszok passes, in the northwest, and after sharp fighting they have taken the heights to the southeast of the Tukholko pass, on the Munkacz Stryj road."

Concessions To Italy Urged.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—The Frankfurter Zeitung, in a leading article, suggests that Austria should make territorial concessions to Italy to insure the latter's neutrality, according to the Amsterdam correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co. The paper is quoted as saying:

"It is not conceivable that the correction of the frontier should in any way be prejudicial to the position of Austria-Hungary as a great power seeing that she has recently so brilliantly displayed her strength against mighty Russia."

The article suggests the holding of a conference by Germany, Austria and Italy to discuss their grievances.

Hungary Lent Roumania Money.

LONDON, Feb. 23. — A letter received by The Morning Post from its Budapest correspondent says that Austria-Hungary made a loan of considerable size to Roumania a short time before Roumania arranged her $25,000,000 loan with the Bank of England. No news regarding this latter loan was permitted to be published in Austria-Hungary, the correspondent says.

Shipyards Strike.

LONDON, Feb. 23.— Engineers in all but one of the shipyards struck yesterday. Ten thousand men were made idle.

DUTCH ROUSED

Germany's Failure to Reply to Note Causes Strong Feeling

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, Feb. 23. — A tense undercurrent of feeling has been running through all classes in Holland for the past two or three days. This is attributed to public concern owing to Germany's action in not replying to the Dutch note of protest concerning the North Sea war zone and nervousness as to what might result from the German blockade and submarine activity, which possibly might produce an untoward incident at any moment.

Althought vessels belonging to other neutral states have suffered, Dutch ships up to the present have escaped damage, but many seamen are demanding increased wages owing to the risks. Some of the men decline to sail and have left their ships, especially those bound for England. Numbers of passengers for the Dutch East Indies have decided to pass through Germany to Genoa, in order to take ship there.

CHARGED REDUCED

Witness Against Nerlich Contradicts Evidence

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—The charge against Emil and Mrs. Nerlich was reduced from that of "high treason" to "conspiracy to commit an indictable offence" when the trial opened before Chief Justice Sir William Mulock in the Criminal Assize Court yesterday. This change in the form of the indictment, as Mr. Du Vernet pointed out, while changing the penalty for the offence from that of death to imprisonment, did not change the character of the evidence.

The most startling development in yesterday's proceedings was when Arthur Zirzow, former lieutenant in the German army, called into the witness box, contradicted most of his testimony given in the preliminary investigation in the police court.

Zirzow "explained" that in the police court he did not think it incumbent on himself to tell the truth because he had not taken the German oath. He was brought into court by an armed guard of two men and an officer with drawn sword and bayonets fixed.

Observatory Erected By Swiss.

PARIS, Feb. 23. — A Belfort despatch to the Havas Agency says that an observatory has been erected on a height near Bonfol in Switzerland, where the movements of French and German troops can be watched. A Swiss military balloon has also appeared in the same neighborhood.

Turks Fear For Dardanelles.

ATHENS, Feb. 23.—It is learned from an absolutely reliable source that, expecting the entrance of the allied fleets into the Sea of Marmora, the Turks have sent troops and heavy artillery to all the islands in that body of water.

F. S. Wright, Newark, O., banker, has lost his Angora cat, aged 18 years.

FRENCH SUCCESSES IN CHAMPAGNE REGION ONLY PRELIMINARIES

Gen. Joffre's Nibbling Tactics Are Expected to Result in a Marked Advance North of the Champagne District—French Forces Are Now in the Ascendant in the Argonne Region.

PARIS, Feb. 23.—Advances made by the nibbling tactics of Gen. Joffre in the Champagne district have been of considerable importance up to the present and the French armies are apparently getting in position for a grand drive forward to seize a railway a few miles to the north. The War Office last night reported the capture of a line of trenches and two woods on the Sauhain-Beausejour front, the repulse of two strong counter-attacks and the capture of many prisoners. Heavy loss was inflicted on the Germans.

In the Argonne region, where for some time the two opposing forces were about evenly matched, the French have strengthened their forces of artillery and, together with their infantry, this has gained an ascendency over the Germans who have been seriously harassed, particularly near Fontaine aux Charmes, Marie Therese and Bolont. Between the Argonne forest and the Meuse river the French have made increased progress in Choppywood and have also consolidated their new positions.

Les Eparges, which has been the scene of some French progress of late was the base of fresh French attacks, which gained for them almost the whole of the German positions to the southeast of Combres. This town has now been brought under artillery fire and is being battered to pieces preparatory to the making of a general advance on it. The Germans attempted to cut off the French force here from this support by attacking Bois-Buchet, to the south, but they were beaten off. The French captured a trench from them at Bois-Boule, in the Apremont forest.

In Alsace the greater part of the village of Stemweiler has been captured from the Germans after an all-day fight. The outskirts had been occupied the preceding day by the French.

HAD UNIQUE EXPERIENCE

Seely Was on French's Staff Studying Present War

LONDON, Feb. 23.—Questions regarding Col. Seely's qualifications and general fitness to command the Canadian Cavalry Brigade were directed to Under Secretary Tennant yesterday afternoon in the Commons.

The questioners were Lord Charles Beresford, Sir Kinloch Cooke and Donald McNeill.

Answering them, Mr. Tennant said that Col. Seely had been appointed to command with the temporary rank of brigadier-general, the cavalry brigade consisting of the Second King Edward's Horse and two regiments of Canadian mounted troops, with a brigade of artillery.

Col. Seely had served in command of mounted troops in South Africa and had commanded a yeomanry regiment, of which he had been an officer for 22 years. He had been for six months with Sr John French's staff, during which time he had acquired a unique knowledge of the conditions under which the present war was being fought.

His ppointment was recommanded by the field marshal commanding and was confirmed by the Secretary of War.

BERNHARDT OPERATED ON.

Celebrated Tragedienne Has Her Right Leg Amputated.

BORDEAUX, Feb. 23. — The right leg of Madame Sarah Bernhardt, the famous tragedienne, was amputated yesterday in a hospital on the Rue d'Ares.

The operation, which was made necessary by an affection of the knee which had caused the actress much suffering for several years, was performed by Prof. De Luce of the Bordeaux University.

MME. SARAH BERNHARDT.

Prof. Pozzi was to have conducted the operation Sunday, but he was called to the colors to serve at the Val-de-Grace Hospital in Paris, and he found it impossible to leave his duties for several days.

Madame Bernhardt refused to submit to a delay of what she courageously called her release from bondage, and it was decided that Prof. de Luce should perform the operation. She is progressing satisfactorily.

Mrs. Alice French, of Exeter, N. H., willed $150 to her relatives and $11,000 to her chauffeur, Albert Gagnon.

Hon. J. D. Hazen Says Nothing Has Been Heard of Karluk's Men

OTTAWA, Feb. 23. — The Opposition had its thirst for information pretty well satisfied during question time in the House yesterday, some two score questions relating principally to the Government's conduct of the war, being answered.

The Minister of Finance informed Hon. Rodolph Lemieux that protests were being received from manufacturers and dealers in patent medicines against the new stamp taxes.

In reply to a series of questions by Hon. Frank Oliver, regarding the Stefansson expedition, Hon. Mr. Hazen, Minister of Marine, informed the House that nothing as yet has been heard from the missing men of the Karluk since the wreck of the vessel in January, 1914. Search parties had been sent to Wrangell Island, where the missing men were heading when last seen, but no trace of them could be found, and they had been given up for lost.

Turks Massacred Armenians.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 23.—Only now are details becoming available of the horrors perpetrated by the Turks during the occupation of Ardnauch, near the trans-Caucasian frontier. The Tiflis correspondent of The Russkoe Slovo learns that at first the enemy confined themselves to pillage and slew only fifteen civilians, but after Dec. 30, when news of the Russian occupation of Ardahan was received, local Mussulmans threw off the mask, and the same evening organized a systematic massacre, and 150 Armenians were led out into the street and shot, or had their throats cut.

Brig.-Gen. J. E. Gough Dead.

LONDON, Feb. 23. — Brig.-Gen. John E. Gough, who took a prominent part in the retreat from Mons and who since then has several times been mentioned in official despatches, has died of wounds received last Saturday.

Brig.-Gen. Gough was born in 1871, the son of Gen. Sir Charles Gough. He had seen service in various campaigns and in 1903 was awarded the Victoria Cross while in command of the British force at Daratoleh, Africa. He was an aide-de-camp to King George.

Saxons Asked Immunity.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—According to an officer who writes from a British trench in Flanders, this sign was posted by the Germans in a nearby trench:

"We are Saxons; you are Anglo-Saxons. Keep your bullets for the Prussians, who relieve us to-night."

He says that immediately after posting this notice the Saxons perched themselves on their trench tops, lit their pipes and enjoyed their ease until a volley over their heads sent them back to their trenches.

Two more tunnels to Brooklyn are proposed by New York.

BELGIAN SOLDIERS COULD HEAR GERMANS WHISPERING

Volunteer Who Took Officer's Place When All His Superiors Were Killed Tells Story of Endurance and Valor on the Banks of the Yser—Twenty-two Days Continuous Fighting.

Writing from an unnamed place in Belgium, a correspondent of The London Daily News quotes a young volunteer member of a Belgian regiment which had been fighting, marching and drilling continuously for twenty-two days as follows:

"The town was evacuated by the Germans, and we were sent in at nightfall. As soon as they saw our lights they began shelling us. We lost terribly. We were 600 who went in and must have left a third there.

"In the morning we moved down to re-enforce a network of trenches on our bank of the Yser. We got into the trenches. They were full of water. I was firing for six hours myself waist deep in muddy water.

"The Germans got across the bridge. We could not show head or hand over our bank. German machine guns shot us from crevices in their raised bank across the river only a few yards away. I was hours and hours dragging our wounded out of the cross trenches. We lost our officers, but I got the men to listen to me.

"Some Germans shelled us with a cross fire. They got into the cross trenches. They fired down our lines from the side. We had to run back. I was too tired and sleepy to drag my feet. I think I must have fallen asleep.

"We had an order to advance again. The French were behind us on either wing in support. I was too tired to get up. Some one kicked me. I looked up. They were three of my friends, volunteers like myself.

"I found myself running forward again. I called to men lying and running near and held my revolver at them. We were all charging with bayonets back at the Germans shooting us from our own trenches under the raised bank. They did not wait for us. They looked like frightened grey beetles as they scrambled up away over our bank and down into the river. It was dusk, but we shot at them over the bank. The water seemed full of them. We crouched in a big trench.

"There were perhaps 200 left of our 600. I think there was one officer further along, but it was quite dark. Some of the men talked very low. Then I heard voices whispering and talking near us on the river side of our bank. It was of earth perhaps five feet high and six feet thick. On the other side the slope fell steeply to the river.

"I sent a hush along the line. We listened quite silent. I thought I heard German words, an order passed along on the other side. I crawled up on to the bank, not showing my head, you know. It was really about 300 Germans who had stayed there on our side under the bank, fearing to cross the river under our fire. So we stayed all though the night. We did not sleep, nor did they.

"There was just six feet of piled wet earth between us. We only whispered and could hear them muttering and the sound of their belts creaking and of water bottles being opened.

"There was a thick grey mist hanging low in the morning. I crawled on to the bank again, holding my revolver outstretched. A gray figure stood up in the mist below close to me. He looked like a British soldier in khaki. He said, 'It's all right; we are English,' and I said, 'But your accent isn't,' and I shot him through with my revolver. Some of our men crept to the bank, but they shot them, and some of theirs climbed over, but we fired at their heads or arms as they showed only a few feet away, and they fell backward or on to us or lay hanging on the bank. Then we all waited.

"As it grew lighter they did not dare move away, and none of us could get out alive over the bank to use the bayonet. A few men made holes in the looser earth, and so we fired at each other through the bank here and there.

"Somebody threw a cartridge case across close to me. On a paper inside was scrawled one word—'Surrender!' We did not know if they wanted to surrender. They were more numerous, but we were better placed, so we went on scrapping and crawling around to get a shot at them.

"Perhaps it was the French who got around at the ends. There was heavy firing. We heard quite close through the raised bank a few slipping down on the river edge and water splashing. Some of us pulled ourselves up on to the bank. I heard our men scrambling up on either side of me, but could not see them. I think I was too sleepy. I shouted to charge and then must have fallen over on my head, rolling down the bank."

THE HEARTENING DRUM

Helped a Marshall of France to Save His Army

A general must always preserve his dignity, but he should be prepared to do almost anything, even to taking a spade in the trenches, to keep his men in good heart in critical situations. Many such crises occurred during the terrible retreat of the French from Moscow in 1812, when what we should call blizzards prevailed.

The cold found the French singularly unprepared for it. Their sufferings were aggravated by the fact that supplies were scarce, for they had themselves, on their way to Moscow, devastated the country through which they marched.

A drummer boy, Maurice by name, who was on this dreadful expedition, late in life left a simple memoir of his experiences. He relates that on one bitter day on the Wilna road the men were sinking on every side, and all seemed likely to perish, when Marshal Davoust, Prince of Eckmuhl, rode up and shouted to the colonel:

"Twelfth of the line!" Where are your drummers?"

The colonel answered, "For 12 days now I have had no drummer left but little Maurice here."

"My young friend," said the marshal to the boy, "go to the head of the line and beat the march."

Maurice went to the head of the line. He beat the march as hard as he could. The men's heartbeats seemed to be quickened by the roll of the drum. They marched on bravely. They held an important place in the line, and the marshal rode by the side of the little drummer.

For three-quarters of an hour Maurice beat the drum. Then the sounds began to fail. His hands were stiff with cold. His face and ears were frozen. Tears ran down his cheeks and froze on his skin as they fell.

"Prince," said the boy. "I can't keep it up any longer. I am frozen. Better fall behind and die, like the other drummers. I'd rather go to sleep and die that way than suffer so cruelly."

Marshal Davoust said nothing, but got down from his horse, gave it to an orderly and took the drum from Maurice's hands. Davoust had worked his way up from a low grade and in his early service had learned to drum.

He beat the drum well enough, at any rate, to inspire the men. Even little Maurice took heart, and, after wrapping his fingers in cloths, was able to take the drum again and resume the march, while the soldiers struggled on through the snow against the biting wind.

Mrs. Elizabeth Logan, formerly of Hastings county, and for the past eight years a resident of Cobalt, sustained a fractured skull in a coasting accident on Galena street hill which resulted in her death.

AN OLD CURMUDGEON

By F. A. MITCHEL.

I met in Lucerne an old fellow named Markland, and he proved to me the Old Man of the Sea, who, having once got himself seated on the shoulder of Sindbad the Sailor, could not be shaken off. Arriving at a hotel, I entered my name and residence in the register, and the landlord, noticing the U. S. A., said to me:

"I see that you are from America. There is a fellow countryman of yours here who is ill. He has just asked me if any American is in the hotel, and if so he begged me to ask him to come to his room."

Realizing what it is to be sick and alone in a foreign country, I went at once to the man's room. I found an old man in bed. His name was Markland—so I found out later—and he hailed from Chicago. He appeared to be ill, but I fancied that his speech was not really gruff.

"Oh, you're here, are you?" he growled. "Fine lot of countrymen I have to leave me to die in a foreign land. I suppose you're not quite so hard hearted as the rest or you wouldn't have come."

Some persons at this reception from a stranger would have turned and walked away. I am of a different kind. To flatter me is repulsive to me. Grumbling frankness affects me favorably. I replied with equal brusqueness:

"Well, if you want anything out of me say so right away."

He looked at me for a moment, then said:

"Do you speak French or German?"

"I can talk in French."

"Well, get me a doctor and act as interpreter."

I brought the doctor and stood by the old man's bedside translating his symptoms and, when the doctor went away, procured the medicine prescribed. Mr. Markland ordered me about as if I were his paid servant. It didn't trouble me. I was rather amused. But occasionally I would turn upon him and tell him that if he didn't shut up I would have him carried away to a hospital. This was the only thing that impressed him.

For a week I permitted myself to be victimized in this fashion; then one day I told him that I was about to leave him.

"Oh, I suppose you must be paid to stay," he said. "How much do you want?"

I laughed.

"Nonsense!" I replied. "Do you think I could be hired to wait on such a curmudgeon as you? But I won't leave you—at least, not just now. I haven't seen all the sights of this place yet. I'll drop in on you occasionally during the coming week."

I did some sightseeing, but the principal part of my time was taken up with Mr. Markland. When he felt better than usual he would talk to me, and so intelligently that I was delighted. I was a young man with young ideas, and his experience, his evident ability to pick the meat out of questions, his knowledge of human nature, fascinated me. After getting this insight into his makeup I was better satisfied to devote myself to him. Becoming curious as to who and what he was, I one day asked him about himself.

"Have you a family?"

"Family? Yes—a devil of a family too."

"You mean you are the devil and they are the family."

"If you know more about my affairs than I do why do you ask me about 'em?"

"True. Well, tell me about your family. Why aren't they here taking care of you?"

"Because in the first place they wouldn't come, and in the second place I wouldn't have 'em if they would. That's the case in a nutshell."

"I've got a daughter that I would and could have with me if I were mean enough to impose such a burden upon her."

"I'm pleased to find one redeeming trait in you," I replied. "Judging from what I have learned, you would make it hot for her."

"I'd make it hot for any one, just as any one would make it hot for me. Young man, do you know that this is a world full of pure selfishness? We are of the brute creation—brutal. All the soft things we say to one another are pure palaver. The French are the only people in the world that I respect. They are so confounded polite that they know they're stuffing one another and don't attempt to conceal it. We Americans don't give so much taffy, because we know a surfeit won't go down."

This spending my time over an old grumbler, who was evidently at enmity with the whole human race, was ridiculous. One day I told him I would not trouble myself any longer; I was about to go on down into Italy.

"Well, why don't you go?" he growled.

I looked into his eye as he lay there in his bed, suffering and alone, and saw that his heart belied his words. I hadn't the will to desert him.

He grew worse after this, and one day he said to me:

"Get me a lawyer. I want to make a will."

"Oh, you're not going to die," I replied, with a view to cheer him.

"I reckon I know more about that than you do. Get me one of those things they call a notary in this country. But before you go bring me pen and paper."

I brought the articles, then went for a notary. When we reached the sick man he had written his will. All he wanted of any one else was to help execute the instrument.

"You'd better put in a thousand dollars for me," I said, "as some recompense for what I've endured from you."

"I thought you said you wouldn't be hired to take care of me?" he snapped.

"So I did. You needn't put it in. I was only joking."

"I've left you a hundred dollars, and that's more than you've been worth to me."

"Just so," I replied, and, seeing that he was in agony both of mind and body, I went to his bedside and placed my hand on his brow. He closed his eyes, and I knew that I had soothed him.

He did just what I feared he would do—died in a foreign land with no kin to make any arrangements for him. But he left written instructions for me. I was to place his body in a vault and cable his sister to come to Lucerne.

I took care to examine the clothing of the deceased, and I found a gold chain and locket. I removed both and opened the locket. Within was the miniature likeness of a young girl with a very sweet face. I could see some resemblance to the man I had nursed. This doubtless was the daughter upon whom he was not "mean enough" to impose the burden of his care. I took the locket and chain and placed them carefully in my trunk.

Having attended to everything concerning my late friend—for had I not felt friendly toward him I should not have sacrificed myself for him—I went on down into Italy, leaving word at the hotel for his sister when she arrived where a letter would reach me. The old man had said he had left me a hundred dollars in his will, and I needed it, for it would make up what I had paid to the landlord for board. I was at Milan when I received a letter from the old man's sister, Miss Markland, asking me to come to Lucerne at once. I was rather put out at this, for I saw no reason for my spending any more time on the affairs of strangers. So I wrote that I could see no necessity for my return. I did not mention that if a hundred dollars had been left me by her brother she could send me a check for it, but I presumed that she would do so.

To this letter I received a reply that her brother's will had been opened and I was a beneficiary. It was certainly to my interest to come to Lucerne.

It seemed a good deal of trouble for me to take to secure so small a sum which could as well be forwarded to me, but that I should not seem ungracious at a time of mourning I returned to Lucerne. On my arrival I sent up my card to Miss Markland and was received by an old lady and a young girl whom I at once recognized as the original of the likeness in the locket I had taken off. The elder woman bowed to me formally, but the younger one came toward me, her eyes filled with tears, and, taking my hand, pressed it warmly.

"I cannot express my gratitude," she said, "to you for your marvelous kindness to poor, dear papa."

"I am sorry I could not have done more for him," I replied; "that he could not have been spared to you."

I had not considered the matter as a special kindness on my part, but was glad for what I had done on this girl's account.

"And I am so glad," continued the young lady, "that papa was able to make an acknowledgment of the debt he owed you."

I remembered the $100, but did not consider this any acknowledgment since my stay with the testator had cost me much more. I was at a loss for a reply when the aunt spoke up:

"Are you aware of the amount my brother has left you?"

"He told me he had bequeathed me $100, but if it will not be convenient"—

"A hundred dollars!" exclaimed Miss Markland junior. "You mean $100,000!"

The expression on my face denoted bewilderment.

"I assure you," continued the young lady, "that I am pleased with the bequest, though I think that since you and not I took care of him you and not I should inherit the bulk of his property."

"You are speaking in riddles," I said.

"My brother," said Miss Markland senior, "left a property of a million dollars or more. He left his daughter Grace all except $100,000, to be yours. You are also named executor of his estate."

My astonishment surely cleared me of any charge of exercising undue influence over the testator to secure an inheritance. Indeed, I declined to believe the statement until I was shown the will. Then I declined to accept the legacy.

But from this point begins a sequel to my story, which is a story in itself and would require much more room to tell than this one. I eventually married the younger Miss Markland, so it made very little difference whether the property stood in her name or mine.

I learned that her father was a character. The only truth he had told about himself was that he would not inflict his care on the daughter he loved better than his own comfort. He was considered quite a remarkable man in his prime and had he not been overgenerous would have left a far larger fortune than he did.

The feature of the spot market was the weaker feeling in oats and prices declined ½c to 1c per bushel. Demand for corn is fair. Flour unchanged with business quiet. Millfeed in good demand at firm prices. Butter strong. Cheese quiet and firm. Eggs in good demand.

Liverpool cables were 6d to 9d per quarter lower, and the favorable progress made by the allied fleets in the task of opening the Dardanelles was the influencing factor. Washington's Birthday celebrations caused a right quieter market than usual.

In the future market there was heavy trading, May previous to noon being $1.56⅜, and July $1.56¼. May oats were 66⅜c bid, and July 67⅝c bid, which showed steady on the former month and ⅛c higher for July.

There was nothing doing in export circles. While there was a firm enquiry for cash wheat, there were no offerings. Buyers of both cash wheat and oats were indifferent and hesitating, in view of the trend of events in the old world.

LAW OF GRAVITY VIOLATED.

Conditions Under Which Water Actually Flows Upward.

There are conditions under which water actually flows upward and rises above its source. If a glass tube be dipped into water the column inside will be above the level of the surrounding surface. Moreover, if a tube of half the diameter be substituted the column doubles its height. The water creeps along the inside of the tube, owing to the adhesion, and forms a cup shaped depression at the top.

An explanation is not difficult. It can be proved mathematically that if the diameter of a circle be diminished one-half the circumference is also reduced to that extent, while the area is one-fourth of its former value. The circumference of the column of water being reduced one-half, its contact with the glass, and hence the adhesive force, is also diminished to that extent, while the cross section, and hence the weight, is decreased to a fourth of what it was before. Therefore the second column can be twice the height of the first without exceeding the lifting power.

Remarkable as the underlying principles of this phenomenon undoubtedly are, nature made use of them long before man made their discovery. Every tree and flower adds its testimony. The core of a tree or plant, instead of being a single open channel, consists of a spongelike substance containing many miniature tunnels through which the sap and moisture collected by the roots flow upward in small rivulets, rising higher and higher in sheer defiance of the great law of gravity.—St. Louis Republic.

IT IS UP TO OTTAWA, TORONTO AND HAMILTON TO KEEP THE CANADIAN LEAGUE OFF ROCKS

"Doc" Reisling of London Club Says Big Cities Must Help by Keeping Inside the Salary Limit — He Will Only Carry Thirteen or Fourteen

"This will be a crucial season for the Canadian League," said "Doc" Reisling to a London sport writer on Sunday, "but with careful management I think the circuit will be able to weather it out. It is up to the Toronto, Ottawa and Hamilton clubs, though, whether the league pulls through or not. I know that London, Peterborough, St. Thomas, Brantford and Guelph (if that city is admitted) will live up to the rules as to the salary limit, but these other cities who have the money and can get the crowds are the ones that have to be watched. In Toronto it is easy for the club there to get players from the International League. Ottawa, too, has a tendency to pay high prices in order to get players, especially toward the end of the season, when the team needs strengthening.

"The Canadian League will have a salary limit of $1600 this season, and if every club keeps within this limit all will be lovely. It is when the clubs start to strengthen up by getting players who demand bigger prices that the trouble starts.

"The smaller towns cannot pay these prices and get these better players, and the result is that they get behind and the fans lose interest in the race. The Canadian League can provide just as good baseball as last season by adhering to this limit all over the circuit."

Manager Reisling states that he will only have fifteen players report here in London, and will only carry about thirteen or fourteen during the season. He says good players are demanding high prices, but later on in the season will be secured for lower salaries. "The players have been used to getting good salaries," he said, "and they won't come down a bit until the clubs show them that they cannot afford to pay the money they ask."

ALLAN CUP CONTEST

With the hockey champions of the various provinces looming up. Considerable discussion is being aroused as to how the teams will play to decide what one will stack up against the Allan Cup holders. Nothing has as yet been decided in regard to the eliminating games except that each province can just have one representation in the final games and that only two teams can stack up against the Dominion champions, one from the east and one from the west.

Although Secretary Claude Robinson, of the Dominion Hockey Association, has not received any word from Quebec, it has been decided by the eastern province to challenge for the Allan Cup this year. With Quebec in line, there will be six clubs eligible for Allan Cup elimination series, one from British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba, Thunder Bay league, Ontario and Quebec. It is likely that Alberta and British Columbia will meet Manitoba, and Thunder Bay Ontario and Quebec. This would leave three teams. Just how to get down to two is a question that will have to be decided by the board of trustees.

LONDON PLAYER JUMPS TO FEDS

LONDON, Feb. 23. — Jack Snyder who was a catcehr for the London Canadian League team last season, has signed to play with an independent league club this season, and has returned his contract to the London club. Snyder was exceedingly promising in the early part of last season, but later he showed a reversal of form. It is not likely the local club will take any action to bring him back or prevent him playing in organized baseball again.

JOHNSON-WILLARD BOUT POSTPONED

EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 23. — Virtual postponement of the Jack Johnson-Jess Willard boxing bout was admitted late yesterday by Jack Curley the promoter. It was believed that Johnson could not reach Juarez, Mexico, across the border from here, by way of any Mexican seaport, by the 6th of March.

MOUNT PLEASANT WON.

Mount Pleasant, Feb. 23. — The Mount Pleasant hockey team journeyed to Cavan on Saturday afternoon and defeated the locals by a score of 6 to 5. The ice was very soft, thus making it difficult for either team to play. The game was free from rough work outside that of the rover of the Cavan septette who was more or less trying to mix it up but was easily checked by the clever stick handling of Mount Pleasant lightweights.

A return match will be played as soon as the ice is in condition. The line-up was as follows:—

Referee—J. Newton.

ONE GOAL FOR THE MIDGETS

Not Considered Enough to Land Round With Varsity

LINDSAY, Feb. 23. — Under conditions which were unsuited to the play of either team, Lindsay last night gained a lead of one goal over University of Toronto in the first of the home-and-home games in the O. H. A. junior semi-finals. The final score was 4-3. As expected, the ice was in a miserable condition, and although the closeness of the score helped to retain the interest, the game lacked good hockey.

The victory of the locals was not unexpected, even though the visitors are called to win the championship. The Blue and White rely on their combination and speed to win, and they were not able to do this last evening on the soft ice. The one goal lead is not considered big enough for the locals to be able to hold at the Queen City on Thursday night.

The teams—

University of Toronto — Goal, Malone; left defence, Sheldon; right defence, Ramsay; rover, Gouinlock; centre, Smyth; right wing Stratton; left wing, Saunders.

Referee — Dr. Gilfillan.

MARMORA DEFEATED TWEED.

Tweed, Feb. 23—The Trent Valley League game played here last night between Tweed and Marmora resulted in a score of 3 to 0 in favor of Marmora. The line-up:—

Marmora—Goal, Buchanan; point, Jones; cover, Wells; rover, Shannon; centre, Jones; right wing, Froats; left wing, McWilliams.

Referee—"Ack" Hunter, Peterborough.

STIRLING WON FROM MADOC.

Madoc, Feb. 23.—The Trent Valley League game played here last night resulted 5 to 1 in favor of Stirling. The teams:—

Referee—H. C. Rowe, Campbellford.

Brilliant Percy.

"Shall I close the door, Miss Ethel?"

"Yes, if you will, kindly. And Mr. Percy?"

"Yes, Miss Ethel."

"Would you really mind closing it from the outside?"

"The outside, Miss Ethel?"

"Yes, please."

"But—er—er—Miss Ethel, would you mind telling me how I would get in again?"

Appropriate.

"What do you think?"

"Well?"

"You know Ethel is going to sail down the Mersey river."

"Yes."

"And she just insists on having her costume all of mercerized cotton."

COMMENT

As You Like it

Just a moment, Mr. Business Man, before you brush aside the man with the pencil and paper who is touching you for a little assistance to keep Canadian League baseball in this city. Don't say the final word unless you have given the matter a little serious consideration. It is not giving to charity so far as you are concerned. It is not assisting in a worthy cause. It is a business proposition. Treat it like all other business propositions. Think it over. Dwell carefully on it and then give your final answer. It is safe to say that in nine cases out of ten you will decide on giving something after consideration while the snap verdict was "nothing doing."

What has baseball ever done for you? Well if you are the selfish business man who is in the game only for yourself, it is doubtful if baseball ever assisted you very much other than provide you with summer pastime, but if you are the sort of business man the city expects you are, baseball has helped you a great deal, in fact the amount canout be estimated. Your business expands and increases in value according to the growth and advertising the city receives. Your business depends upon the esteem in which the city is held. Every line or word of advertisement this city gets in other centres means a better and bigger Peterborough and naturally a better and bigger business for you.

What is the greatest advertisement the city can receive? That question is a little hard to answer but surely no exception can be taken to the assertion that a team in any organized baseball league can do what the Indian calls "a heap." The team is on the road a great deal of the time, the word Peterborough is heralded before the public of the circuit and before the general public of the Dominion. Every Canadian newspaper of any size at all carries a sporting section and is making an occasional note of this or that player of Peterborough. American papers find the name thrust upon them as one Nebraska writer remarked a few months ago when giving his readers a little dope on Frank Kelly. "We never heard of Peterborough but the dope sheets say there's such a city so there must be." That is evidence which cannot be shaken.

You were in this city previous to 1912, Mr. Business Man, and have you not noticed how much the ball team helps in the quiet days of May, June, July and August? When they had a day off a few years ago the majority of the citizens went down the river, now they ramble up city and across the bridge to see the ball tossers perform. The presence of those citizens on the main streets helps. It gives the city a brisk appearance in dull times and brings the up city stores the money. Without a ball team during the coming summer the streets will be as deserted as a dance hall in Paris.

Ink could flow on this topic from now till the close of the coming season but that is not the intention. We merely desire, Mr. Business Man, to bring before your mind a few of the principal points in favor of why you should give a little to keep a Canadian League ball team in this city. The sum to be raised by public subscription is $2,500 so think it over and then slip your John Henry down along side a respectable amount. If you do, Mr. Business Man, you prove all we think about you at present. If you don't—we're disappointed. Remember that organized baseball can get along quite well without Peterborough, the Canadian League can get along without Peterborough but —how will Peterborough fare without the Canadian League?

LOCAL FANS FOR ORILLIA

Dopesters Have Selected the Northern Team for Intermediate Honors

Considerable interest is being aroused over the Collingwood-Orillia home-and-home intermediate O. H. A. semi-finals to be played tomorrow night in Collingwood and on Friday night in Orillia. The sympathy of local fans is with Orillia; in fact, many dopesters have selected them to defeat Collingwood and then vanquish the winner of the Wiarton-Sarnia games. The return game between Wiarton and Sarnia will be played tomorrow night in Wiarton. The home team will go on the ice with a one-goal lead, as they defeated Sarnia, in Sarnia, on Saturday evening by 5-4.

BASKETBALL

A trio of fast basketball games are scheduled on the "Y" for Wednesday night, Feb. 24, starting at 8 o'clock. The first game being between Cressmans vs. De Laval. Cressmans were the runners up in the last league and should make a good bid for first place in the present one as they have strengthened their team, De Laval are at present an unknown quantity as they have not been together before but the team is made up of good men. At 8.45 the Excelsiors and Unknowns will take the floor, the Excelsiors demonstrated their ability in the last league. The name of their opponents is most significant as they have just organized. Two of the veterans are on the team, and they have coralled a group of speedy youngsters to work with them so the team looks like one that it will take considerable brawn as well as basket ball ability to beat. The 9.30 fixture will be well worth stopping for as Richardson and Best of Veteran fame are captaining these teams, and each will outdo himself to bring his team out on top. There is a rumor that Richardson slipped one over on Dobbin in last Saturday night's game, so Capt. Best with his group of Boosters will be out in full force to meet any kind of manoeuvres the Maple Leafs may have up their sleeves.

SEA MINES IN WARFARE.

The Result When a Vessel Strikes One of These Deadly Engines.

To merchantmen, to the smaller and older warships—to everything that floats except the very highest and more recent products of the shipbuilder's art —the mine presents the danger of complete and almost instant annihilation. The rigidity of the ship is in itself an element of danger, for the water surrounding it is incompressible.

If the skin and frame could give way without rupture and permit the enormously expanding gases (2,000 times the volume of the solid explosive) to transmit their energy in such a way as simply to push the ship aside and thus find a way to the surface, the damage might be slight.

But this cannot be. There is no such elasticity available. And the expansion is so nearly instantaneous that pushing the ship aside is physically impossible. Therefore the structure must break, releasing the gases first into the interior and then by lines of least resistance finally up into the air.

This action is completely instantaneous. It blows off hatch covers and deck plates, twists massive steel members into unrecognizable shapes, spreads havoc broadcast. It transmutes a proud ship into a sinking mass of wreckage—a happy passenger saloon into a shambles—carries mourning into a hundred homes. Such is the effect of mines.—Sidney Graves Koon in Leslie's.

SHERIFF'S POSSE HAS UPPER HAND

Capture of Indians is 'Expected Shortly

Denver, Feb. 23. — The band of Piute Indians which fought a battle yesterday with a sheriff's posse is now reported to be surrounded, and as reinforcements are hurrying to the aid of the white men, it is expected that the Indians will soon be killed or captured.

The news comes from Grayson, Utah, by telephone to Dolores, Colorado. The Indians are surrounded in Cottonwood Gulch, near Bluff, and all wire communication between Bluff and Grayson has been cut off by the Indians. U. U. Marshal Nebeker, in charge of the posse, has made a report on the situation, which follows:

A posse of 26 men, led by the sheriff of Dolores County, ex-Sheriff Jingles, of Montezuma County, and Sheriff Pepperson, of San Juan County, Utah, left here Saturday night to surprise and capture the Indians. At break of day this morning the posse surrounded the camp in which the Indians wanted were located. The Indians seemed to be expecting the arrival of the posse, and opened fire. J. C. Akin, of Dolores, was killed in the beginning of the fight.

ALTERATIONS AT Y.M.C.A.

Improvements Costing $7500 Are Contemplated by Board

Changes and alterations costing approximately $7500 are contemplated by the Y. M. C. A. For the past six months the association has been planning the utilization of considerable space in the building now unused, with the object of endeavoring to create a larger revenue and increase the convenience and usefulness of the institution.

Rough plans and approximate cost estimates were laid before a meeting of the directors last evening and the matter thoroughly discussed and favorably received.

In order to keep pace with the needs and requirements of the institution, the directors have felt the need of more commodious dormitory space, and they contemplate increasing accommodation for lodgers from its present capacity of thirteen to thirty-three This would result in augmenting the revenue very considerably, as well as providing more young men with comfortable accommodation.

It is also proposed to rearrange the building in other ways without raising the roof. The rotunda would be altered, and the desk and secretary's offices placed back further and facing the entrance. The stairways and partitions would have to be torn down and the entire interior remodelled.

The ground floor, or what is known as the basement, would come in for some changes, designed to make it more convenient. The heating plant would also be changed.

Altogether it is estimated that $7500 would cover the suggested alterations and result in the association being vastly improved and made into one of the most modernly laid out in the province.

TREMBLAY-DESPATIE JUDGMENT RECEIVED

Montreal, Feb. 23.—The full text of the judgment of the Privy Council in the Tremblay-Despatie case, which deals with the annulment of the marriage of fourth cousins by the ecclésiastical and civil courts of Quebec, has reached Montreal.

The part of the judgment dealing with the marriage laws of Quebec which are being tested by the case—counsel for the husband, who secured the annulment of the marriage, arguing that the civil courts have the right to give effect to a law of the Roman Catholic Church, and the lawyers for the wife arguing to the contrary—is as follows:—

"It may well be argued that the intention of the article in the civil code dealing with marriage was to make no change in the marriage law so far as the various religious communities are concerned, but to leave it in the same position as it was before the passing of the code. In other words, that the effect of the article is to leave the marriage law in these respects uncodified, and not to create a new marriage law based entirely on the code. If it should be held that the intention of the article is that the marriage law in these respects should be unchanged, the case will necessarily require to be decided as it would have been prior to the passing of the code, and it will be necessary to discuss the law as it existed.

"In the reargument, the question formulated above should be discussed. In view of these considerations, the Government of Quebec should be advised of the character of the case so that it may intervene if it thinks necessary."

Are Trying to Adjust Claim

Officials of Legal Department Grand Trunk Railway Are Here

In order to see what amount of compensation for injuries will be paid to Mr. Ben Clute for the loss of a leg on the Grand Trunk Railway, officials from the legal department of the company are in the city today. Mr. Clute, or "Benny," as he is better known, had a leg cut off last June while en route to the military camp at Petawawa. The accident hapened at Millbrook station, where Clute alighted from the train before it had pulled up, and owing to the crowded nature of the platform he was forced back, and slipped on to the track resulting in the loss of a leg.

The case has been hanging fire since the victim asked for damages. It is understood that he was offered a certain figure, but rejected it. Mr. J. E. Pratt, from the office of Mr. Biggar, general counsel in Montreal, accompanied by Wm. C. Mills, personal claims agent, arrived in the city last night in connection with the adjustment of the claim. They met this morning in one of the rooms of the Empress hotel,but came to no decision in the matter, and adjourned to meet at one o'clock this afternoon, but a further postponement was made later until ten o'clock Wednesday morning. It is stated, however, that a satisfactory adjustment of the matter may be reached before then. The compensation asked by Mr. Clute was not agreeable to the company, and the purpose of the visit of officials is to compromise if possible. Among those who are in the city in connection with the matter are Station Agent A. M. St. John, of Millbrook, Mr. Raymes, G. T. R. relief agent, Engineer McPherson of Belleville, and D. C. Elliott, of Lindsay, driver of the train which carried the soldiers to Millbrook on the day of the accident.

Canadians Were Kept in the Dark

Censored of its postmark, and dated Feb. 9th, the day the Canadian soldiers left England for the front, Heber Rogers, son of Mr. R.B. Rogers, Peterborough, has written an interesting letter home, part of which reads as follows:—

"Just a line to let you know we are moving again. We left Bustard camp last night at 11 p.m. in a pouring rain. It just rained buckets full yesterday so there was plenty of mud. We marched to Ainsbury and entrained at 3 o'clock this morning. Nobody knew where we were going but we ended up in Bristol this morning. Then we boarded a cattle cruiser and we are still in the dock. We shall likely pull out of here tonight but we do not know where we shall land.

Mr. A. E. Stephens, retail shoe dealer of Ottawa, a member of the departmental committee which previously examined shoes was next examined. He prefaced his examination by the statement that he had heard the first sixty thousand pairs of boots supplied had been manufactured by sample and not by specification. Sir James Aikins obtained a statement from Mr. Stephens that they had assumed from evidence that the boots had been built by specification and they had not inquired into the individual contracts to see if this had been done.

"THE DEEP PURPLE"

Synopsis

The World Film Corporation presents "The Deep Purple" in five reels directed by James Young in the Peerless Studio.

He has a good cast of players at his service. Clara Kimball, who falls in love and elopes with Harry Leland, a "badger" salesman of a band of fraudulent "organ merchants." The girl's father is played by Edward M. Kimball. The chief crook, Popp Clark, is played by W. J. Ferguson who puts Young has the part of Dora Moore, the country minister's daughter, played by W. J. Ferguson, who puts a touch of comic character drawing in his work that provides good relief. William Lake, the hero, and a mining engineer, who comes to New York, is taken by Milton Sills, who is excellent in the role, giving a vigorous and very likable hero. The best acted emotional moment in the whole story comes in when "Fresno Kate," in whose house the crooks planned the blackmail game, has found that they have used the innocent girl, who thinks her Harry the epitome of all that's good and noble, to attract Lake to the apartment. "Fresno Kate" is played by Grace Aylesworth, and she has taken a strong fancy to the girl. She refuses to have her used for such a purpose, but the crooks sneaked her out, and now she pleads with Lake to let her help in the rescue. Mrs. Lake is played by Mrs. E. M Kimball and Lake's sister by May Hopkins. De Will Jenings, Walter Craven and many others have good roles.

The play from which the picture was made was a Broadway success of a few seasons back, and was written by Paul Armstrong and Wilson Mizer. The backgrounds represent a New Jersey country town and New York City. There are a few scenes of mining and western atmosphere. The picture closes with a few very artistic glimpses of the heroine and the hero together at the new organ in the little church; two of these suggest famous paintings. The camera work and the staging are commendable.

"The Deep Purple" will be shown at the Grand Opera House Thursday, Friday and Saturday, February 25th, 26th and 27th, in five full reels of the best pictures ever produced in this city.

FOE'S LOSS

Fifty Thousand Men Lost in Attacking Russian Positions

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 24. — A Journal correspondent who witnessed the operations says that at least fifty thousand men were lost by the Germans in their attacks on the Russian positions on the Rawka River and in the regions of Borjimow and Gumbinnen. "The Germans," he says, "are being gradually but remorselessly worn down. Whether they attack or remain on the defensive, their arms melt away from day to day."

An official report at Petrograd last night says the destruction of the Russian Twentieth Army Corps was only accomplished after desperate resistance, and according to accounts given by German prisoners, terrible losses were inflicted on the enemy.

CHARGE REDUCED TO MANSLAUGHTER

Edgar Grose Pleads not Guilty and Trial is Proceeding

The sitting of the Supreme Court, which was adjourned yesterday afternoon, was resumed this afternoon at one o'clock. Mr. Justice Britton of Toronto is presiding.

The grand jury, through the foreman, R. J. G. Sutherland, presented a true bill against Edgar Grose on the charge of manslaughter. Justice Britton spoke a few words to the grand jurors, remarking that it is their privilege as representatives of the ratepayers to inspect the various public buildings. He then dismissed them.

The grand jury consisted of the following:

R. J. G. Sutherland, Peterborough, foreman; Benj. Cardwell, Asphodel; Hiram Fry, Norwood; Patrick Farley, Douro; J. B. Moore, Asphodel; Edward Martin, Dummer; Robt. Maniece, Peterborough; John McCann, Peterborough; Chas. McClellan, Peterborough; W. B. Warne, Peterborough; James A. Young, Smith; W. J. Byers, Brownton, and G. A. Brethen, Asphodel.

Clute Claimed Settled.

His Honor approved of the settlement in the cases of Pressick vs. Cordova and Clute vs. G.T.R. The terms of the latter were not made known. The non-jury case of Bank of Ottawa vs. Hay, Bell, Ferguson and Brownscombe was dismissed by consent of the plaintiff and defendants.

Plea of Not Guilty.

Edgar Grose, who had taken a seat along the side was requested to take his place in the prisoners' box which he did. Clerk of the Court George Sherry then read out the charge, charging the accused with unlawfully killing and slaying William O'Brien, on or about 24th day of December, 1914, contrary to the criminal code, and also causing bodily harm to O'Brien with intent to maim. Grose pleaded "not guilty."

The Jury.

The jury was then empanelled as follows:—

Bert Tully, Smith.
Alex. Walker, Peterborough.
John Stanger, Peterborough.
Cecil Succee, Peterborough.
Henry Stuart, Peterborough.
W. S. Patterson, Dummer.
Walter Naish, Peterborough.
Stanley Matchett, Peterborough.
Ed. Armstrong, Smith.
Herbert Mason, Peterborough.
Henry McNaughton, Dummer.
Gilbert Pringle, Peterborough.

Gordon N. Shaver, the prosecuting attorney, in addressing the jury acquainted them with the facts of the case. He laid special emphasis on the gravity of the case and the importance of their duty in finding how William O'Brien came to his death. He urged them not to be prejudiced through what they heard previous to the court. They must not be prejudiced by political or religious ideas. He explained that he was not there to convict Grose, on the contrary he was to present to them the evidence.

On the 24th of December last a man died following a fight. Scuffling was heard in a hall of the White House. Deceased and prisoner were clinging to one another. The prisoner was removed and deceased sunk to the ground. In ten or fifteen minutes he passed away. The jury must decide whether or not Edgar Grose caused his death.

In this case there will be no evidence to show how the fight occurred. The evidence will show there was a fight and that a man's death followed that fight. Medical evidence will show that the death would not have occurred had not that fight occurred.

Crown Prosecutor Shaver claimed that no weak kneed sentiment should creep in. Men who commit acts of violence must be punished. It would be a terrible thing to have the prisoner convicted if he were innocent but it would be just as serious if he is guilty and be not convicted. Society must be protected.

The witnesses for the crown were then asked to withdraw.

First Witness

John O'Brien, father of William O'Brien, called to the stand, gave evidence that he last saw his son alive at one-thirty o'clock in the afternoon of Dec. 24, 1914. William O'Brien was 21 years of age and was strong and physically fit.

In answer to a question by Mr. Gordon, witness said that William O'Brien did not come home to his supper on the night of Dec. 24.

Mr. Chris. Graham, proprietor of the White House on Dec. 24, testified to the effect that he was in his office using the telephone about 10.30 o'clock on the night in question and he heard a scuffle in the hall. He went into the hall and found O'Brien and Grose clinched. Grose was put into an ante-room, and when he returned O'Brien was bent over as if exhausted. Efforts were put forth to resuscitate O'Brien, and then Dr Gallivan and the pulmotor were summoned. Deceased passed away before medical aid arrived.

Questioned by Mr. Shaver, witness said he did not see any of the scuffle. Grose had hold of O'Brien's shoulder. Neither appeared to be the aggressor.

"Who appeared to have got the better of the argument?"

"I didn't see either having the better of it."

"Was there any person in that hall besides O'Brien and Grose?"

"Yes; I think there was."

"How near was the closest person?"

"I was closest."

"Who were there when you returned from putting Grose in the back room?"

"I couldn't name them all."

"Could you name any of them?"

"No."

Mr. Graham then told of carrying O'Brien outside and telephoning for Dr. Gallivan. In the meantime efforts were put forth to resuscitate the deceased. Dr. Gallivan was on the scene about twenty minutes after he (Graham) had separated Grose and O'Brien. O'Brien had shown no sign of coming to. When he (Graham) left O'Brien to telephone to Dr. Gallivan, O'Brien had been gasping for breath. When he returned he had ceased choking. From the time he first saw him, O'Brien never spoke a word.

In answer to a question by Mr. Gordon, Mr. Graham stated that he caught hold of Grose and removed him to an adjoining room because Grose was closer to him. Had O'Brien been closer he would have taken him to the ante-room. He did

PROCEED WITH NERLICH CASE

Counsel Asked That Charge be Withdrawn

JUDGE DISSENTED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Feb. 24. — On the resumption of the Nerlich trial this morning, counsel for the accused proposed that as Mrs. Nerlich had been found not guilty, the hcarge against Emil Nerlich should also be withdrawn, since the charge was conspiracy and there had evidently been no one to conspire with. Chief Justice Mulock, however, held there was sufficient evidence to proceed.

Counsel for the crown and for the prisoner addressed the jury, the former contending that the whole thing was the outcome of spite, and the latter maintaining that Nerlich was unfriendly and that the evidence showed he had been assisting the enemy.

The trial of Emil Nerlich and his wife, Hedwig Nerlich, took an unexpected turn yesterday afternoon, when, following the argument of opposing counsel as to whether or not the case should go to the jury, Chief Justice Sir William Mulock decided that there was no evidence against Mrs. Nerlich to warrant this as far as the charges against her were concerned.

"I have to instruct you," said his Lordship, addressing the jury, "to find Mrs. Nerlich 'not guilty' and 'proceed with the case against Mr. Nerlich."

His Lorship pointed out that the evidence which had been submitted showed Mrs. Nerlich to be guilty of sympathising with the enemy, but this was not an indictable offence.

FEW PRISONERS AT COUNTY JAIL

Register at Castle Nesbitt Shows Falling off in Guests

Business is rather dull at the County Gaol as there are not more than eight or nine prisoners within the walls of the institution. None are imprisoned for serious crimes, their offences being drunkenness and vagrancy. The daily diet for each prisoner averages a fraction over nine cents. About the same number were imprisoned at this time last year.

It was not always so. The officials at the jail can well remember when the winter months brought about a full house.

FURTHER PROGRESS IS MADE NORTH OF PERTHES

Paris Statement Also Speaks of Few Successful Actions

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 24. — The official afternoon statement says: "With the exception of a few successful actions on the part of our troops near Auberide-sur-Suippe, nothing of importance has occurred since the giving out of the communication last night.

"We have made further progress to the north of Perthes."

BERLIN, Feb. 24. — Reports are heard in influential circles that further obstacles have arisen to prevent an invasion by the Russians. The feeding of the people in that part of East Prussia recently evacuated by the Russians is proceeding with difficulty.

SERVIAN TROOPS INVADE AUSTRIAN TERRITORY

GENEVA, Feb. 24. — Servian troops invaded Austrian territory on Saturday and Sunday, according to despatches received here. This assumption of an offensive movement is supposed to be intended to engage the rear part of the troops now being used against the Russians.

DEVELOPMENTS EXPECTED IN HOLLAND.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 24. — There is good reason to believe that the political situation in Holland at the present time is such that most interesting developments may be expected at any moment. Work in the Government offices has been going on night after night until a late hour, and there have been numerous meetings between diplomats.

ROUMANIA TO TAKE THE FIELD.

LONDON, Feb. 24. — A despatch from Bucharest to the Paris Matin says that Nicholas Misu, the Roumanian minister to London, will return to England bearing a note assuring the British Government that the Roumanian army will take the field in April.

ONE MILL LEVY ON ALL ASSESSABLE PROPERTY IS ONTARIO'S WAR TAX

PETERBOROUGH'S SHARE IN ONTARIO WAR TAX.

Peterborough City will contribute $10,000 as the result of the war tax of one mill on the dollar on all Ontario realty. The county will contribute approximately $9000.

Will Net $1,800,000 For Contribution to the Canadian and Belgian Funds.

TORONTO, Feb. 24. — A special war tax of one mill on the dollar of all assessable property in Ontario will be levied by the Government. It is the first time in history that the residents of the province have been required to meet such a tax. According to Hon. T. W. McGarry, who made the announcement in the Legislature yesterday, the report of the action will be as a testimonial of the generosity and patriotism of Ontario.

The statement followed immediately the budget speech. There is now $1,800,000,000 worth of assessable property in Ontario and the income from it will be $1,800,000. It will go to Britain and the Belgian relief organization.

Collection will be made through the municipalities in the ordinary way, and in counties the tax will be made on equalized assessment and paid over as part of county rates. Against this sum, collectable next fall, the Treasurer will borrow two millions. The policy was founded on their conception of the wishes of the people and would end with the war.

The announcement followed a stinging arraignment of the large insurance companies which are now combatting the increased corporation tax, and the list was read out and denounced in strong terms. Beginning with the Canada Life, Confederation, Continental, Crown, Mutual, Sun Life, he ran through them, castigating their action in this period of stress as "traitorous and cowardly."

Further, in referring to succession duties where men were dying and the province was not getting proper dues, he stated that the revenue here would be augmented in the near future.

Mr. McGarry argued that if the Government took into account the assets on hand in the shape of public buildings there would be a net surplus of more than $14,000,000.

There was a deficit of $697,000 traceable to generosity in patriotic contributions. There was a war loss in the forests branch of $258,000 and outstanding company debts of $250,000. With all these in a surplus would have occurred.

The increased federal subsidy was based on increase in custom and excise duties collected. The provinces deserved even greater support from Ottawa. Bar and brewers' licenses recorded a drop. In 1913 the bar tax alone had returned $294,000, and in spite of reduced numbers the revenue was creditable. On an average 153 licenses per year had been removed.

In reference to the $500,000 T. & N. O. item which was criticised, he stated that last year the railway owed more to Ontario, but could not pay because of the care bestowed in perfecting the service.

In spite of the war two millions in loans had been paid off and two more were due in May. They would be renewed or covered.

The Hydro-Electric Commission had expended four millions last year and 80 municipalities, 15 cities, 19 towns, four villages and two townships were benefiting. Agriculture had so increased that farmers were enthusiastic over increased patriotic production. Crop outputs had increased 38 millions in value since 1903.

Supplementary estimates were tabled in the House yesterday. These arrange for increased expenditures above those ordinarily counted on and total $1,298,720.38. They concern spending in different Government branches arranged recently.

The new boiler inspection legislation calls for $4,400; new motor vehicle enactments providing automobile markers and supplies, $8,000; administration of justice in new districts of Thunder Bay and Kenora, $12,900; $200,000 more goes to the completion of Government House to be opened in the fall, and other grants are for miscellaneous purposes.

The total of the estimates varies little from that of 1913.

Dodge, that the Remington Arms Company and the Winchester Arms Company are shipping three and a half million cartridges weekly to the British Government on a standing order.

"BANCO'S DEAD; HE CANNOT COME OUT ON'S GRAVE."

THE GLOBE, in a laboured article yesterday, tried to shake Laurier free of the C. N. R. In view of what the Globe admits, it is only quibbling to say Laurier has no responsibility for Canada's connection with the C. N. R. The Globe admits that Laurier granted the C. N. R. $6,456,820 in cash subsidies, and bond guarantees amounting to $55,000,000. The Globe admits that these were for the connecting of the prairie sections with the Atlantic seaboard, yet it says Laurier had nothing to do with the B. C. section and did not countenance a third transcontinental in the C. N. R. The point is, Mackenzie and Mann always intended the C. N. R. to run from coast to coast, and, if Laurier aided it in any part or form, he aided the whole conception, the B. C. section included. Laurier may not have known Mackenzie and Mann's intentions, nor intended that the B. C. section should be built, but that does not alter the facts of the case. Laurier tied Canada to the C. N. R. for over sixty million dollars before Borden came into power, and it was, therefore, impossible for Borden to refuse further aid to the C. N. R., when it was in straightened circumstances. Laurier took no adequate steps restraining the C. N. R. from building the mountain section. He did grant it aid in a large measure, with a care-free hand. Try as the Globe can, it is now too late to say that Laurier is without responsibility for the C. N. R. The ghost of the Laurier policy of big railway expansion may have been buried, but its consequences and spirit still walk abroad, pointing accusing fingers at the Liberal party for the part it played.

THE SHAKE-UP IN THE LIBERAL PARTY.

THERE ARE SIGNS of a shake-up, or preparations for such, in the Liberal party. The entry of Sir Lomer Gouin into Dominion politics, with a view to succeeding Sir Wilfrid Laurier, is being forecasted by some French newspapers,—the idea being that the leader of the Liberal party, to hold Quebec, must be a French-Canadian. The Ontario Liberals are far from pleased at the rumored development. They feel that with another French leader their position in this province cannot be improved, especially with the bi-lingual issue to the fore. Any attempt, therefore, to foist Gouin on the party would doubtless be resisted. Hon. George Graham and Hon. William Pugsley both have aspirations to the Opposition leadership. The former, however, is regarded as too light for the job, while Mr. Pugsley has other arguments against him. There is a strong element who look to Mr. N. W. Rowell, K. C., as the Moses of the party though they are constrained to admit that his performances in Ontario are not of a character to inspire optimism in the success of his Federal leadership.

The plan seems to be to have Sir Wilfrid direct the Liberal forces until after the next election, and then effect a reorganization. That such is badly needed now is hardly to be questioned, but the trouble is that the Liberals haven't the proper following to marshall a strong force against the Borden Government. The people are being well governed and the Liberals know it. The rumors also indicate that all is not well within the Liberal party. There are no doubt dissensions, and heads will have to fall before unity is gained. In the meantime, Canada has confidence in Sir Robert Borden and his colleagues.

THE BRITISH ARMY HAS MADE GOOD.

WHEN BISMARCK was asked what he would do in the event of a European crisis in which Britain sent a hundred thousand men across the Channel, he merely shrugged his shoulders and intimated that the German armies would move on in spite of them. A hundred thousand men in comparison with Germany's millions seemed a negligible quantity, perhaps, but Bismarck's reply was not so much contempt for the English army as a conviction that Britain, not being a military nation, was not to be considered a dangerous foe, so far as her armies were concerned. The present war has dissipated that supposition. Henceforth Britain will be recognized as a strong military nation, able to put into the field enormous armies, and able to feed them for a long time. Already Britain's enemies have recognized that, even though they do it grudgingly and with mis-statements in some details.

The "Die Zukunft," a political review edited and published in Berlin by Herr Maximilian Harden, prints the following:

> "The English Army has dissipated many of the prejudices of the tacticians against mercenaries. In the British Isles there are plenty of professions bringing in good money. If a man voluntarily joins the army instead of becoming a clerk, agent, games-professional, or jobber, then he has done so because he likes it; it is pleasure in his work that raises a man's achievements above the average. On German soil England is still grimly hated, but the German warrior spirit, just in its appreciation, has over and over again praised the courage, stamina and shooting skill of the English.
>
> "The beggars are artists. Show them two fingers above the edge of the trench, and they hit the mark. Dum-dum bullets? Certainly. Still, such things as bomb-splinters, arrows from the sky, benzol, 'Minenwrefer,' hardly appertain to the armory of pious knights. Tommy has amazed us. We thought that something ridiculous was on its way to us from the other side of the water. Now everyone takes him seriously. Twice, three times wounded, he fights on. And when, in a hand-to-hand struggle, he has reached the end of his tether, he tears open his tunic, and, with bared breast, flings himself on the glittering steel. Such fighting is worth the doing."

THEORIZING ON THE WAR.

ALREADY the resettlement artists are beginning to theorize on the war. The Montreal Evening News deals with these in the following way:

One of the arm-chair experts has solemnly declared that the present war is being waged by the Allies for the restoration of ancient landmarks. He pleads that we should dig up the buried frontier posts of the past, and restore every one of the ancient kingdoms to its former boundaries.

That is all right so far as Poland and Alsace-Lorraine and Schleswig-Holstein are concerned, but in other directions the task would be a very difficult one indeed.

Certainly it would help to settle the Irish Home Rule question, for Ulster was one of the five ancient kingdoms of Ireland, but it would necessitate the provision of five kings for the "distressed country," beside which the Home Rule problem would be child's play.

The Welsh would claim the whole of England. The Scotch would demand that their frontier posts should be set from the shore of the Forth to the mouth of the Solway, even if it reduced them a "wee" bit. The Highlanders would have to be transferred bodily to Ireland, and the Ulsterites — or a large proportion of them — to Scotland. Even the little Isle of Man would become a kingdom again, with the Earl of Derby in the chair.

In continental Europe the problem would be a greater nightmare than the Kaiser himself. Austria-Hungary would have to be split up into about fifty kingdoms, and Germany into more than twenty. France would provide quite a number of new old kingdoms, and so would Spain and Portugal and Italy.

The American end of the problem would be simple. He would merely have to turn out the hundred and seventy million or thereabouts of white people between the Franklin Islands and Cape Horn, and replace each one in his or her original home or the home of their ancestors, and so make way for the Indians, Aztecs, Incas, and so on.

The three hundred millions of India would have to be shifted somewhere so as to replace the Veddahs of Ceylon. The Japanese would have to retire and the Hairy Ainus be returned. The Gypsies and the Hebrews would have to be sorted out.

But the prettiest problem would be provided by the Saxons, said to have been originally Isaacsons or sons of Isaac, the real old original Ten Lost Tribes of Israel.

Where do you think YOU would land?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE TELEGRAM sent to the President of the Trades and Labour Council by Mr. Burnham was in consequence of an inquiry made by the Minister of Labour at Ottawa of the British Government, in order, if possible, to relieve Canadian unemployment. A large number of mechanics is needed in Great Britain on account of the war.

Gambling in Margins.

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

The Wall Street Journal says that the Supreme Court has held that selling or buying stocks on margin is gambling, and that those who suffer in so doing can recover from the broker. Bucket-shopping is, of course, pure gambling, and ordinary margin-trading is almost as unmixed gambling. But if a client buys a stock, puts up twenty or thirty points "margin," and the broker provides the rest of the funds either out of his own resources or from the proceeds of a bank loan made against the stock as collateral, the transaction is not different in modus operandi from buying real estate or furniture on the instalment plan. The ownership in either case is subject to the loan, which, if paid off, releases full title to stock or property.

The Thousandth Man.

(Rudyard Kipling.)

One man in a thousand, Solomon says,
Will stick more closely than a brother,
And it's worth while seeking him half your days,
If you find him before the other.
Nine hundred and ninety-nine depend
On what the world sees in you,
But the Thousandth Man will stand your friend
With the whole round world agin you.

The German State of Mind.

(Westminster Gazette.)

We have a singular example of the German state of mind in an interview with the Cardinal Archbishop of Munich. That eminent ecclesiastic, after affirming the duty of his Belgian brother in the purple to submit to the German military authorities, says that he "does not think that any appreciable number of Belgian priests were put to death by German soldiers." Any "appreciable number"? We must leave the reader to find the right comment on this observation, but when this is the clerical state of mind, what are we to expect of the military?

The German Bogey.

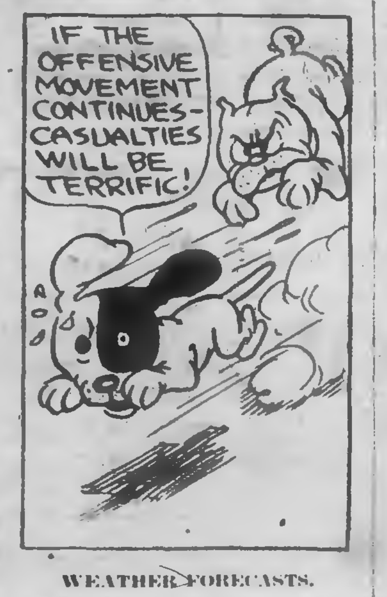
(London Express.)

The farcical "blockade" of the British coasts, declared by Germany from February 18th, is evidently intended to terrify timorous neutral shipowners and to persuade the German public that their navy, from which so much was expected, really possesses the power materially to damage Great Britain. To us, this new exhibition of bombast merely supplies additional evidence of the desperation of the German Government.

Wilhelm Will Be It.

(Guelph Mercury.)

They do tell us that "Der Tag" is German for "the day." In this game of tag, though, we imagine that the Allies will soon give Wilhelm a final slap, with the remark, "you're it."



IF THE OFFENSIVE MOVEMENT CONTINUES- CASUALTIES WILL BE TERRIFIC!

WEATHER FORECASTS.

Occasional showers today. Thursday westerly to northerly winds, local snow flurries but mostly fair and turning a little colder.

Mortality in Battle

At Gettysburg the death rate per thousand was 53.5, the highest in twenty-one battles in the war. According to the figures in the American experience table of mortality, for every thousand men living at the age of forty-nine there will be 53.6 deaths before reaching the age of fifty-three. For all purposes this is exactly the same rate of mortality as that on the field of Gettysburg—that is to say, each soldier had the same chance of surviving the battle of Gettysburg that a man forty nine years old has of living to be fifty three. At the battle of Chancellorsville the death rate among the soldiers engaged was 20.3 per thousand. According to the life insurance tables, the death rate per thousand among men in peaceful pursuits ranging in age from forty-two to forty-four is exactly the same. Every soldier at Shiloh, where the death rate in battle was 42.2 per thousand, had the same chance of escaping alive as the average man of thirty has of reaching the age of thirty five. These figures are surprising in showing how far we are likely to be led astray in calculating the relative mortality in battle.—New York World.

CANNOT GIVE CASH.

German Requisitions Prevent Britain Aiding Belgian Relief.

LONDON, Feb. 24. — The British Foreign Office has directed a letter to Herbert C. Hoover, chairman of the American-Belgian relief committee, declining to give a direct subsidy to the commission for relief in Belgium. The Foreign Office explains it has taken this course because Germany has refused to put a stop to cash requisitions in Belgium.

"It is evident," says the British Foreign Secretary, "that, if under such conditions, the British Government undertook, through your commission, to supply money and food to the Belgian population the only result would be an equivalent diminution of the food and supplies already there. The British Government, in fact, would be facilitating the feeding and paying for the maintenance of the German army.

"Solely on account of this attitude on the part of the German Government, the proposed arrangement between his Majesty's Government and the commission must be regarded as having broken down. We shall, of course, maintain our general favorable attitude towards your work, and our offer of financial support will remain open in the event of the German Government receding from their present position with regard to their levies in Belgium."

A Dog and a Monkey.

A good story is told of a dog that one day discovered an organ grinder's monkey seated upon a bank and at once made a rush for it. The monkey, which was attired in jacket and hat, awaited the onset so undisturbed that the dog halted within a few feet to reconnoiter. After awhile the dog seemed to recover from his surprise and was about to make a spring when the monkey raised his hand and saluted by taking off his hat. The effect was magical. The dog's head and tail dropped, and he sneaked away thoroughly discomfited.

Norwegians To Investigate Disaster.

CHRISTIANIA, Feb. 24.—The Norwegian Foreign Office has ordered the legation at London to examine the members of the crew of the steamer Regin, which has been sunk off Dover. The Foreign Office has also asked the legation to send the pieces of a torpedo or mine found in the hull of the steamer Belridge to Christiania for examination by naval experts.

MOOSE JAW, Sask., Feb. 24.—Thomas Sales, of Langham, Sask., of the central office of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association, is convinced that never before at this time of the year have conditions in this province been so favorable for a big crop as they are to-day.

Re-open Quebec Scandal.

QUEBEC, Feb. 24. — Leo Berube, M.P.P., for Temiscouata, will propose a motion to the assembly, this afternoon, asking that the enquiry into the charges preferred last year against J. O. Mousseau be re-opened to take in, he will say, additional evidence.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

IF you have anything you don't want just show its merits to some one who will admire and desire it, and you will find you wouldn't part with it for cold cash.

Self conceit is one of nature's own remedies against the nagging little ills of life.

Isn't it queer that our own advice never seems quite adapted to our own case?

Gossip grows so rapidly that one only wonders that it doesn't fall absolutely ill from growing pains.

It is hard to fool some of our friends and hard not to fool others.

It is all right to feel sympathy for the loser, but you never see the victor sharing gains with him.

We are often told to grin and bear it, but the truth is that if you grin you sometimes don't have to bear it.

Sometimes a man gets so intoxicated with his own conceit that he gets run in by the police.

It is a good idea to mind your own business to the utter exclusion of that of other people.

One-fifth of the world doesn't know that the remainder lives—and it doesn't.

Turning the Tables.

We wouldn't like it, I am sure,
If fish should slyly spin
Up to the very water's edge
And pull the fisher in
And softly call unto their mates
To come and have a treat
Before he spoiled, to help themselves
And have enough to eat.

We wouldn't like it if the birds
That sail the azure sky
Were armed with guns and took a shot
At men in passing by,
If each had underneath its wing
An ammunition car
And never thought a day well spent
Unless he shot a man.

It wouldn't tickle us to death
If tigers set a trap
Along the beaten path to catch
Some poor, unlucky chap;
If bears, with cunning, skill and strength,
Went forth with hunting knife
To meet the traveler in the woods
And rob him of his life.

There isn't any moral here,
But there is food for thought.
It isn't just the grandest fun
By others to get caught.
The man should hesitate and pause
And cut his hunting short
Who doesn't need the food and just Goes forth to kill for sport.

Discovered.

"Why do you insist that he is a married man?"

"I saw direct evidence of it."

"When?"

"When we passed the millinery store."

"What did you see?"

"A startled and distressed look."

The Sting Removed.

"Are we adulterating our baby foods?" asked the conscientious manufacturer of his superintendent.

"Well, you see competition is so strong."

"But what with?"

"We are using arsenic this season."

"But isn't that a deadly poison?"

"It used to be, but we are buying from a firm that adulterates it until a pound of the stuff wouldn't kill a mosquito."

Hard Lines.

"Do you truly love me, Percy?"

"Madly."

"What would you do for me?"

"Your will."

"Then go away."

"Go away?"

"Yes, so the other boys will have a chance to make love to me."

Cheap.

"I'd have you understand that I am nobody's fool."

"Is that so?"

"It is."

"Here's a dollar."

"Thank you. What of it?"

"You are mine now."

Cynicus.

"What is a good method of raising a boy?"

"Raising a boy?"

"Some people advocate an apple sprout, but I have found that a swift kick elevates boys more quickly."

Amazing.

"Is she a good swimmer?"

"I should say she is."

"Can she swim far?"

"Far! Say, all the mermaids in Seaville have turned red beaded with jealousy."

And Dodged Behind the Barn.

"He jumped at the chance."

"Jumped?"

"Yes."

"At what chance?"

"Chance of getting shot."

Defined by a Printer.

"What sort is she?"

"She is a decided type."

"What type?"

"Lower case, I should say."

My Uncle's Fortune

It Stood Between Me and Happiness

By EILEEN BRENNAN

While traveling on the continent I had met Winthrop Sayles, and we had been members of the same party traveling together in Italy, with a long stop at Lake Como, in Switzerland, and in France. Mr. Sayles singled me out among several other girls of our party, and so marked were his attentions that we were soon considered to belong to each other.

The party broke apart in Paris, I going to London. My admirer followed me. He had proposed to me while we were in Lucerne and had during our subsequent journeying together importuned me to marry him. It was not a case on my part wherein a girl feels that she has met her fate—that is, that the proposer is absolutely necessary to her happiness. Nevertheless I liked him well enough to consider his proposition, and I was sensible of the fact that girls are liable to let desirable parties slip away from them till they have become old maids, when they are left out in the cold.

Mr. Sayles was so persistent that I at last yielded, but so late that we had barely time to be married before we were obliged to endure a separation. I was about to sail for home, while he was obliged to remain temporarily in England. Yielding to his solicitations, I consented to do what I afterward considered an unwise thing. I agreed to marry him before going aboard the ship, reserving our honeymoon till his return to America.

Just before sailing I was handed a letter from an aunt of mine in America. Her husband was wealthy; they were getting old and had no children. If I would agree to abide with them so long as they lived my uncle would leave me all his property.

Had I been desperately in love with the man I had married I doubt if this offer would have had more than a passing effect on me. If my husband had accompanied me to America the inevitable, the association of marriage, would have brought the same result. But, receiving this offer immediately after parting with a man I had known but a few months, it caused regret.

We see marriage on the surface. There are the happy pair, the wedding gifts, the shower of rice and old shoes. The first month of wedlock is called the honeymoon and savors of sweetness. What we do not see are the balkings that may take place or certain regrets that may thrust themselves in the face of one or both of the happy pair up to the point where the knot is tied. Yet it is possible such may occur in the case of those who are destined to become absolutely necessary to each other.

I confess I should have put the matter out of my head. I was married, and that was all there was about it. But I fancy, as I have already said, that I am not the only person who has just been married to wonder whether he or she has taken a wise or a foolish step.

However, by the time I had reached port I had made up my mind to cease to think about the proposition I had received, but to write my aunt, telling her why I could not accept it. I had promised to write something every day to my husband and mail what I had written on arrival. I wrote him of the offer I had received, and on reading over what I had written it occurred to me that possibly what I had said might be interpreted to express regret that I had lost the power to decide between him and a prospective fortune. I would have rewritten this part of my letter, but could not very well get it out from the rest. Besides, the letter was all ready to mail, and so I dropped it in the post.

As soon as I landed I wrote my aunt who lived in the west, that I had been married abroad and, of course, could not accept her proposition. I received loving letters from my husband till about the time he should have received my epistle written on the steamer. After that I heard nothing for several days, when I received a brief note from him stating that he had been ill, but was now better. He would write again soon. A few days later I received a cablegram from a friend of his that my husband was dead.

I confess I was much shocked. Besides, the message brought a revelation to me. I learned that my affections had been more completely engaged than I had supposed. I blamed myself for my regrets. I felt that if I could only have my husband back again I would not exchange a prospective fortune for him nor even a fortune in hand.

The cablegram had advised me to remain where I was and await a letter. When the letter came I was informed that my husband had requested that I should not on any account return to England as a result of his death and that his body be buried abroad. He had very little property to leave and had—so I was informed—some time before his marriage left what there was to a sister. This was entirely satisfactory to me.

My aunt and uncle, being informed that I had become a widow, renewed their proposition to me, and I went to live with them. They were very kind to me, and I entered upon a style above what I had been accustomed to. My uncle made a will in my favor, and I had before me the anticipation of enjoying a fortune. Nevertheless my life was dull. They were old persons and had outlived most of their intimate friends. They were certainly not companionable for me.

As to enjoying the society of persons of my own age, I had very little opportunity to do so. My aunt soon after I went to live with her became an invalid and required my constant attention. Besides, my aunt had not for many years had anything to do with social affairs, and I was not thrown into the "swim." I had stepped into what from a distance I had considered an enviable position, but was not satisfied. I had become a nurse, my pay to consist of a living and a fortune after my patient's death, or, rather, after the death of two persons, either one or both of whom might outlive me.

And now that I had experience in this condition which had led me to regret my marriage I turned longingly to what would have been my lot if my husband had lived. I pictured a little house that I would have made cozy and an interest in husband and children—an interest which is paramount to all other interests. I do not except those cases where the husband and wife quarrel or separate. The interest is there, but it has become, so to speak, diseased. I had all the comforts wealth could bring, but there was no soul in them. I lived in a splendid house, but there was no home in it for me.

I did not meet my husband's sister, who inherited what little property he left. She wrote me offering, inasmuch as it was mine by right, to give it up to me, but I declined to accept it. She was very sympathetic, and somehow through her letters I conceived a decided liking for her. I would have liked to see her, but she lived at a distance and neither could well go to the other. She and I became regular correspondents, and I confided in her my dissatisfaction at the life I led and my regrets that I could not have had a home of my own, "be it ever so humble."

To this she replied that the day would come when I would be wealthy and I would then be satisfied that fate had kept me from marriage without adequate income and had given instead the power and comfort that money brings. But to this I replied that, having become familiar with wealth, it did not seem so much of a blessing as those who saw it from a distance supposed.

I had lived with my aunt three years when she died. Then my troubles began in earnest, for I had the whole responsibility of bolstering up my uncle in his old age. A woman left desolate can accommodate herself to the new situation better than a man. My uncle could not accommodate himself to get on without his life partner. I endured his misery with him for the greater part of a year, when I saw evidence that he was intending to marry again. A woman about half his age had set her cap for him and was not long in securing him.

My standing in dead men's shoes had been a failure. I knew well enough that this new wife would seriously object even to sharing her husband's inheritance with me, and I did not believe that, under the circumstances, we two women could get on together under the same roof. This turned out as I expected. The lady soon made it plain to me that I was not desirable and set my uncle against me. What should I do? I had no place to go, and the means at my command were limited. My uncle was soon got under the thumb of his wife, and she would not even permit him to give me an allowance. I knew nothing about his destroying the will made in my favor, but if his wife permitted it to remain she was not the woman I supposed she was.

In my distress I wrote to my sister-in-law, pouring my troubles out to her. She wrote me a sympathetic letter, reminding me that I was still young—I was twenty-four—and would likely marry. She suggested no plan for me, but said she would write again soon.

Later I received another letter from her inviting me to make her a visit. We could then talk over what it was best for me to do and would doubtless hit upon some plan for my comfort. I determined to accept the invitation.

I found Miss Sayles living in modest comfort and took her into my heart on sight as I had through her letters. She made me feel at home from the moment I entered the house. She was older than my husband had been and seemed to have looked upon him more as a son than a brother.

"I have a surprise for you," she said, "of such importance that I fear to give it to you without preparing you for it. You remember that you wrote Winthrop while coming from England of the proposition of your aunt and uncle to live with them and inherit your uncle's wealth. In your letter you showed regret that you had been married and must consequently decline their proposition. Winthrop—a very sensitive man—was much hurt by your letter and determined that he would not stand between you and the life you preferred. He"—

"What did he do?" I gasped.

A door opened, and my husband entered.

It was some time before I could forgive him for having through a friend sent word to me that he was dead. He had often regretted having done so and had as often thought of reappearing to me in the flesh, but my uncle's fortune stood between us.

I was still young enough to build up a home with my beloved husband, and it is and has been more enjoyable, more sacred for my experience in waiting for dead men's shoes.

Grecian Food For Dreamers.

Hasheesh, the strange drug which has given our language its word "assassin"—a man so frenzied by the drug that he accomplishes murder—is used by the Persians, Turks and Egyptians. It is the product of a plant grown in large quantities in the Peloponnesus (southern Greece), in the district about Tripolitza. The plant grows to a height of about four feet, and its branches are thickly covered with small leaves and studded with tiny seeds. The entire plant, stalk and branches, is cut within a few inches of the root and laid out in the sun to dry. The branches are then rubbed to separate the seeds, and these in turn are ground into a fine powder, which constitutes the drug. The drug has the power of inducing sleep and producing pleasant and fantastic dreams. Continued use of hasheesh renders its devotees reckless and results in a wreck of their mental and physical constitution.

BUILT IN FURNITURE.

Convenient For Filling In Awkward Recesses In Rebuilt Houses.

When one is remodeling a house or a city apartment the use of built in furniture will often be helpful. Frequently there exists an awkward recess or an alcove space which seems to defy any successful arrangement and in which nothing in the way of furnishing looks well. Such a space may very often be fitted by a clever carpenter with a few low bookshelves painted or stained to match the surrounding woodwork, and the result will be a really valuable decorative asset.

The spaces within unused doorways may sometimes be made into bookcases by being fitted with shelves and long, straight curtains hung upon a slender brass pole across the top. Where such spaces are of sufficient depth they may even be made into closets by the use of two vertical panels of latticework hinged to open like doors.

In some old fashioned houses there are frequently deep spaces or "reveals" within windows, and it would be simple indeed to build a window seat within such a space.

Mending the Range.

If there is an ugly crack that shows on the kitchen range it can be filled up with a cement made by beating an egg, to which add sifted ashes, says the New York Press. Work the paste smooth and then press it into the crack. Smooth off even with the iron surface. This paste will harden almost like iron and will take a polish that will render the crack unnoticeable.

Harmony In Interiors.

Interior fittings of any kind which are built into a home must be regarded as part of the standing woodwork and treated accordingly. If white paint is used upon such woodwork the built in furniture must be painted white also. If a "mission" or "craftsman" style prevails the same finish must be used with perhaps hinges and locks of copper or wrought iron.

ALABASTER ORNAMENTS.

Alabaster ornaments are in fashion. Some alabaster flower bowls have three alabaster doves perched daintily on the edge of the bowl, leaning toward the water. These are beautifully carved.

⁂

Broad shallow bowls of alabaster are used to hold flowers as a table centerpiece. A wire wicket is fitted into the bowl to hold the flowers erect, and hothouse rosebuds are thrust into the spaces between the wires until the bowl is attractively full.

⁂

Sometimes there is a vase of alabaster for the base of the lamp, and it is fitted with a silk shade. Sometimes the vase that forms the base is illuminated as well as the shade above it, and this gives another effective light.

⁂

Vases or bowls of alabaster and bronze are used to hold fruit. One vase supported on a bronze tripod eight or ten inches high costs $15.

Culinary Notes

Some Simple Food Tests.

Gorgonzola and other cheeses that are well mottled have often been assisted to maturity by being probed with pieces of copper wire. Cheese treated in this way is very injurious, for much of the green in it is copper, which, as every one knows, is a deadly poison. To test cheese for copper take a little piece of the suspected cheese and hold it over the flame of a spirit lamp. Copper tainted cheese will cause the flame to become bright green, but unadulterated cheese will make no difference to it.

If you have an idea that your milk is being watered or "chalked" take a knitting needle, dip it in the milk, then hold it vertically for a few seconds. Pure milk will slowly trickle down the steel and form a heavy drop at the end. Watered milk will run off quickly and drip off in several small drops.

If you buy butter that arouses your suspicions put a little bit into a teaspoon and hold it over a flame. Faked "butter" will splutter, but pure butter will boil quietly.

Egg testing is very simple. Hold the egg up before a strong light. If the egg is really new laid the air cell at the larger end should be clearly visible, while dark spots in it make it quite unfit for consumption in any shape or form.

Reducing the Bread Bill.

Perhaps there is more waste in bread than in any other foodstuff. We commonly waste the crust of dry toast, the last if not the first crust off most of our loaves, a large proportion of the bread that is placed by each person at dinner, all odd pieces cut at table and not wanted at that meal, the crusts of sandwiches and cut or rolled bread and butter. All these, except the broken and crumpled bits on the dinner table, can be made up again as breadcrumbs, browned or white; as fried bread with soup or bacon, as puddings savory sweet, as stuffing, in the thick soups and many other uses.

But why have bits? Every bit was part of a good fresh loaf a day or two ago. Why was it not eaten in its fresh state to save both the bread bill and the trouble and expense of making it over? Why, and especially now when economy should be practiced, cut the crust off the toast or place slices of bread around the table before finding out who eats it, or why start on a piece of bread without finishing it or cut more than is wanted? Why, above all, leave bread at dinner time when still hungry enough to eat pudding?

Card Index For Recipes.

"I find my card catalogue of recipes exceedingly useful," says a housewife. "I keep the recipes in a plain, everyday shoe box. I do not clip lavishly. I think well before I select a recipe for trying, and then I put it in a box of loose recipes, which I test at the first opportunity. If the recipe is satisfactory I paste it on a card and file it under an initial in my shoe box.

Bristol board is cut into cards of a size to fit the shoe box. On these cards the recipes are pasted or written.

"Initial cards to divide into groups the recipes are made by attaching loops of tape to the backs of cards, letting one end of the loop run well down the back of the card and pasting the shorter end nearest the card at the top. On the top of the loop which projects above the edge of the card I write a letter of the alphabet.

"Occasionally I go through the recipes in the shoe box to throw out those for which I have not found much use.

"My maid can find any dish mentioned on the menus I hand her in the shoe box card catalogue. It saves much time and trouble."

Boiling Water's Temperature.

There is an erroneous impression that water bubbling violently is hotter than water at the boiling point. As a matter of fact, the ebullition is caused by the escaping steam, which means lost heat. All water (except in a high elevation) reaches the boiling point at 212 degrees, and however fast or slow the water may be boiling it remains at that temperature. To increase the heat add sugar or salt or confine the steam by covering the pot.

Apple Marmalade.

To prepare this cut apples into slices as if for sauce, dropping them into water to prevent discoloration. Put on to boil in just enough water to prevent burning, stirring often. When cooked to a smooth pulp add, according to the acidity of the apples, from one-half to three-fourths of a pound of sugar to the pound. Cook slowly, stirring constantly, till very thick and of a rich amber color and seal.

Taking Warning.

Zoroaster, the revealer, visited the place of eternal fires. There, in a group of kings, he saw one with a single foot.

He turned to the master.

"Why," he asked, "is the king mutilated?"

"In all his life," the mighty one replied, "he performed but one kind act. Seeing a camel tethered with so short a rope that it could not reach the trough in which its food was placed, this king kicked the vessel where the hungry one could feed from it. For this good deed his foot passed into heaven and the rest of him was thrown here."

They walked on.

"No good deed is wasted," said the master.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The following history of a STRAIGHT LIFE POLICY with profits reserved for 20 years is interesting:

Pol. No. 27619. Amount: $1000. Premium $20.95. Age, 30

Total premiums paid from 1st February, 1890, to February, 1910 (20 years) $419.00

The premiums were then permanently reduced by the accumulated profits to $10.20 per year; this he paid for the past five years .. 51.00

Total cost in 25 years 470.00

Now his profits for the past five years reduce the premium to $2.00 per year.

Had this man taken a Non-Participating Straight Life he would have paid during the same period 475.00

and would still have to pay $19.00 per year as long as he lives, while his participating policy has not only cost him less in the aggregate, but his future premium is only $2.00 per year, subject to further reductions, as compared with $19.00 per year on the Non-Participating plan.

REDUCTION FOR THE DRUGGISTS

Tax on Patent and Proprietory Medicines is Reduced

Local druggists are pleased at the announcement that the proposed tax of ten per cent. on all patent and proprietary medicines and toilet articles will be reduced to four per cent.

All pharmaceutical preparations will be exempt.

Goods may be stamped just before leaving the druggist's hands, so long as they are stamped before being sold.

That last article is most important to the druggists. If it were not inserted many druggists would have to buy $5000 worth of stamps to stamp goods in stock, some of which they might never sell.

If the war tax had stood as it was at first it would have put hundreds of druggists out of business, it is stated. On a yearly turnover of $50,000 he would be paying $5000. As it stands now, it will mean the druggist paying a tax of $2000. Drugs have gone up tremendously, and there is the additional duty of 7½ per cent. on crude drugs. When the present stocks are run out, the manufacturers will have to stamp the goods, but the four per cent. tax is not so serious.

RESIDED HERE AT ONE TIME

Mrs. Harriett Southworth Dies Aged 99

BROCKVILLE, Feb. 24. — Yesterday a long and interesting life closed in the death of Mrs. Harriet Southworth, the oldest resident of Brockville, who passed her ninety-ninth birthday on the 12th of January, 1915. Mrs. Southworth's life history was long, interesting and varied, and she leaves a memory which will long be cherished for her many kindly Christian characteristics. In home life she was loving and considerate and always a kindly neighbor and true friend to the many who treasured her friendship. Born in Norfolk, England, in the reign of King George III., she lived through the many changes of state and saw history in the making through all the many changeful events down through the years.

Mrs. Southworth came to Canada with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ringer, when she was 14 years of age, and the family drove from Montreal to Lombardy, where they founded a home, there being no railways in those days. At this time, cholera and ship fever was raging and when the family arrived at the outskirts of Brockville in their waggons, they were halted and inspected by the health authorities. They were able to show a clean bill of health and were allowed to enter the town, when, after a brief rest for themselves and horses, the long and weary journey over the bush roads was continued and the family arrived safe at Lombardy, where the homestead was located, and success and happiness blessed them. Those were the days of log houses, and Mrs. Southworth often related interesting reminiscences of the early days when stoves were an unknown factor and the open fireplace glowed with the huge logs which provided warmth in the long cold winter days and nights. Candles were the only method of illumination, and it was a case of early to bed and early to rise.

Mrs. Southworth became the wife of Alfred Southworth, who died about forty years ago and was buried in the Brockville cemetery. Since his death she had lived at various times in Ogdensburg, Toronto and Peterborough, but for the past fifteen years had resided with her daughter, Mrs. James Kincaid, on Kincaid street, Brockville. Five daughters survive, as follows: Mrs. S. Beckett, Toronto, Mrs. J. Jones, Buffalo, Mrs. George Ames, Montreal, Mrs. Thos. Bland, Belleville. One sister, Mrs. Scoville, lives at Lombardy, and is 97 years of age. Richard Ringer, Picton, is a brother. Thomas Southworth, Toronto, and Lev. Southworth of Morrisburg are nephews.

OBITUARY

JOSEPH B. TAIT.

At the city of Hamilton on February 23rd, Joseph Burgess Tait passed away, aged 62 years. He leaves to mourn his demise a widow and three sons, who are David O. Tait, Chicago, Joseph G. Tait, Hamilton, and Bernard J. Tait, of this city. The funeral will take place on Thursday, February 25th, at 2 p.m., from the residence of his son, Joseph G. Tait, 53 Arkledon avenue, Hamilton.

FIFTH LOT FROM COBOURG.

Cobourg, Feb. 24.—Not one whit less enthusiastic was the send-off given the detachment of ten Cobourg boys who have left to join the Composite Heavy Battery at Halifax than that given the fifty volunteers who left some few weeks ago. The last volunteers went in response to a request for reinforcements from Lieut.-Col. Odell, Officer Commanding. The Cobourg Citizen's Band and a big crowd of citizens accompanied them to the station, where they boarded the midnight train.

THREE SHIPS LOST

Attempt Was Also Made by Germans to Destroy Passenger Boat.

LONDON, Feb. 24. — Three more vessels were added last night to the list of ships torpedoed by German submarines. Two are British and the third a Norwegian steamer, the Regin.

All three were attacked in the English Channel.

The steamer Kalibra, which arrived at Lydd, in Kent, and made the report, states that one was attacked off Fairlight, on the Sussex coast. One vessel was sunk and the other is sinking. Three trawlers are standing by. The names of the vessels attacked are not stated.

A despatch from New Haven, England, says that eighteen members of the crew of the Cardiff steamer Branksome Chine, a Government collier, landed there last evening. Their vessel either struck a mine or was torpedoed in the English Channel twenty miles southeast of Beachy Head about two o'clock yesterday afternoon. The men say the captain and mate of the steamer are standing by the vessel, which is badly damaged and awash. An attempt will be made to pull her to the coast and beach her.

A larger steamer is reported in distress near the same spot. Lifeboats are in attendance upon her.

From Paris the following despatch was received last night:

A German submarine, which for the past few days had been lying in the English Channel in wait for steam packets plying between France and England on Monday night, fired a torpedo at the steamer Victoria while she was on the voyage from Boulogne to Folkestone with 92 passengers, including some Americans.

The captain of the Victoria, however, saw the characteristic wake made by the topedo and slowed down his vessel, and the torpedo passed harmlessly about 100 feet in front of her.

The French second light squadron was informed to keep a sharp lookout in the Channel for the submarine. The Minister of Marine announced that a torpedo boat belonging to the squadron sighted the submarine at 7.30 o'clock yesterday morning eight miles southwest of Cape Alpenech, near Boulogne, and immediately opened fire, and succeeded in scoring several hits before the submarine was able to dive. The announcement adds that a wide patch of oil was seen afterwards on the sea at the spot where the submarine disappeared, and from this it is presumed that the submarine was wrecked.

The British Admiralty gave out an official report of the attempt to torpedo a Channel boat, inferentially the one mentioned here.

Another neutral vessel fell victim yesterday to the German submarine. The Norwegian steamer Regin was torpedoed in the English Channel off Dover. She sank in less than fifteen minutes. British destroyers closed in about her and picked up the twenty-two members of the crew. They were landed at Dover yesterday afternoon. The men said they believed the vessel was torpedoed by a German submarine.

The Regin was carrying coal from the Tyne to Bordeaux.

A despatch from Berlin says the American steamer Carib has gone to the bottom off the German coast in the North Sea as a result of running on a mine. It is believed that her crew was saved.

The steamer Carib belonged to the Clyde Line. She was of 2,280 tons net, and left Charleston Jan. 27 for Bremen with 4,600 bales of cotton. She was in command of Captain Cole and had a crew of 30 men.

BUDGET IS CRITICIZED

A. K. Maclean's Structures Are "Piffle" Says Macdonell

OTTAWA, Feb. 24. — The budget debate was resumed yesterday, speeches being delivered by Hon. A. K. Maclean and Hon. Frank Oliver on behalf of the Opposition and by Mr. Claude Macdonell on behalf of the Government.

A. K. Maclean maintained in the first place that the Government did not need any additional revenue in view of the fact that all war expenditures were being advanced by the British Government. The so-called war taxes, he said, were not being levied on account of the war or to help carry on the war, but to meet deficits in our domestic finances caused by reckless extravagance. He then proceeded to show how enormously the cost of government had increased in the various Departments, although, he contended, they had a great deal less work to do.

Mr. Maclean dealt next with the decrease in the British preference. That preference had been already almost wiped out by increased freight rates and insurance rates attendant upon the war, and now the Government proposed to do away with it altogether by adding a five per cent. tax. Their action in respect to the British preference, he said, had caused surprise in this country and consternation and amazement in England.

So far as the war stamp taxes went, Mr. Maclean had no objections so long as the money derived therefrom was used for war purposes. But in his opinion they were not meant to meet war requirements, "but to meet the ordinary expenses incurred by the Government."

The Opposition, he said, would facilitate the passage of the war supply bill and would vote for a supplementary bill if it were needed, but would demand a strict accounting.

Mr. Claude Macdonell (S. Toronto), who rose to reply, expressed surprise that a man of Mr. Maclean's ability should at a time like this be indulging in piffle about departmental expenditures. Evidently the member for Halifax did not know that we were at war and that the Government could only raise the money needed by taxation.

Americans Insulted at Strassburg.

GENEVA, Feb. 24.—Hatred against Americans is increasing rapidly in Germany.

A party of six Americans, including two women, were insulted in a crowded station at Strassburg by soldiers Sunday because they were speaking English. One American was seriously injured on the head with the butt of a rifle, and one woman had her blouse torn off.

CHANNEL IS NOW CLOSED

LONDON, Feb. 24. — The Official Press Bureau last night made the following announcement:

"The British Admiralty has issued an order closing the Irish Channel and the North Channel to the shipping of all nationalities. The order took effect yesterday.

"All traffic wishing to proceed through the North Channel must pass to the southward of Rathlin Island between sunrise and sunset."

The southern entrance to the Irish Channel, known as St. George's Channel, is between Carnsore Point, on the Irish coast, and St. David's Head, on the opposite coast of Wales. Certain areas of this channel have been closed to mercantile navigation by the Admiralty's orders, which also require that all traffic wishing to proceed through the North Channel must pass to the southward of Rathlin Island between sunrise and sunset. No ship will be allowed within four miles of Rathlin Island between sunset and sunrise.

BEST SHOWING IS MADE BY PETERBOROUGH

Six hundred and four applicants for employment have registered at the local branch of the Industrial Association, since October 14 of last year. Three hundred and four have secured work and positions to date.

H. V. Scully, secretary of the main office in Toronto, writes Mr. Edward Langley, the local secretary as follows:—

You are indeed to be congratulated on the excellent work you are doing in handling this problem. I think Peterborough has the best record of any community in the province of Ontario.

RED CROSS CLUB TEA.

There were few cozier or more beautiful places in the city yesterday than the spacious parlors of the Y.W.C.A. The occasion was a patriotic tea and entertainment supplied by the Kitchener Red Cross Club who excelled every previous entertainment they have attempted. It was patronized by a most gratifying number of citizens who were supporting the good work the club is performing and who were by no means loath in expressing their pleasure of the whole affair. It was on in the afternoon and evening. The flags of all the allied countries were plenteously displayed and artistically arranged.

In the tea room those who presided were Mrs. G. M. Rogers, Miss Peacock, Miss Laura Davidson, Mrs. Reg. Turner and Mrs J. Sharp.

Mrs. John Allan and Mrs. Harry Foot poured tea assisted by the following bevy of young ladies: Miss Waddell, Miss Foot, Miss Distin, Miss Davidson, Miss Dobbin and Miss Kirkwood. The candy table was in charge of Miss Judd and Miss Jay.

Miss Jessie Garrow, president of the Kitchener Red Cross Club was a very agreeable and charming hostess. A musical program was contributed both afternoon and evening, those who took part being Mrs. McDonald, Miss M. Armstrong, Mrs. Locke, Miss I Sanderson, Miss Dorothy Allan, Mrs. A. A. Perrin, Mrs. W. King, Miss G. Gumpricht and Miss Laura Logan. By special request and owing to the inclement weather of last night the tea is being repeated this afternoon from four to six o'clock and it is worth while dropping in.

SUN LIFE ABSORBS FEDERAL OF HAMILTON

The most important deal that has ever been consummated in Canadian life insurance was announced on Wednesday. The Sun Life of Canada is reinsuring the business of the Federal Life of Hamilton, and the plant of the latter company will be absorbed into the organization of the Sun Life. The deal has been entirely completed so far as the respective companies are concerned, the only step necessary to formal completion being the assent of the Treasury Board, which will not be given until 30 days have elapsed. There is every reason to believe that in due course this sanction will be forthcoming.

Through this arrangement, the Sun Life of Canada adds substantially to its existing business. While no official figures regarding the Federal Life's operations during 1914 have been given out, it is stated that its business in force amounts to about $28,000,000. At December 31, 1914, the Sun Life had insurance in force to an amount of $218,299,835, so that with the addition of the Federal Life's business its insurance in force will not be far short of $250,000,000. The Federal Life's total assets at December 31, 1913, were $5,393,004; the Sun Life's at December 31, 1914, $64,187,656. With the new arrangement completed, the Sun Life's assets will be almost $70,000,000.

The Federal Life dates from 1883, the late Mr. David Dexter being associated with it for many years, formerly as managing director, and from 1902 until his death in 1912 as both president and managing director. Since Mr. Dexter's death, the active management of the Company has been in the hands of Mr. A. N. Mitchell, formerly assistant general manager.

Policyholders' Favorable Position.

Under the terms of the agreement the policyholders of the Federal Life are placed in a favorable position. The profits of participating policies in the Federal Life have been less than those of the Sun Life. The latter company now guarantees increased profits to the policyholders of the Federal Life. As soon as the reserves of the Federal Company's business are on a par with those of the Sun Life's business, the policyholders will receive the same rates of profits as those of the Sun Life. Meantime, the Sun Life guarantees that the profits to Federal policyholders will not be less than 70 per cent. of the profits to Sun Life policyholders. About 90 per cent. of the Federal's policies are participating.

The stockholders of the Federal Life, it is stated, will receive back the amount of the capital paid in, about $130,000, plus the amount to the credit of the shareholders' account. Additionally they will receive an amount contingent on last year's premium income, details of which are not yet available, and an interest in the profits for a term of five or six years.

All the obligations of the Federal Life will be taken over by the Sun Life. Agents who have a contract with the Federal Life will have the option of working for the Sun. Where both companies have branches covering the same territory, the Federal branch will be closed and the Sun Life organization take charge of the business.

The deal means a considerable reinforcement of the Sun Life's organization at important points, both at home and abroad, particularly in Ontario, where the Federal Life had important connections. — From the Chronicle.

Acts Count, Not Words.

"In a court of law we are held responsible for our acts only.'

Referring to three letters from Carl Hoerl in Germany, which the Crown argues should be put in as evidence, the Chief Justice told the jury that the statements in these letters could not be allowed as evidence, although they might have a bearing on the case if they could be submitted as such. His Lordship held that the Crown had not laid a stable enough foundation to warrant the use of these letters; letters which came from a third person in Germany and which had been intercepted and opened by the police before they reached the Nerlichs.

"No matter what is in the letters," said the judge, "it is not admissable against the addressee so long as they are in transit. You must establish some connection. What has Mrs. Nerlich done up to the present moment which would show any object on her part to aid and assist the enemy?"

Mr. DuVert asked the Judge for a stated case on the point, which was granted.

"Regarding Mr. Nerlich," said his Lordship, "I think there is evidence to go to the jury." His case will accordingly be submitted to their consideration on the resumption of the hearing today.

Mrs. Nerlich's Sympathies.

The first witness called to the box yesterday was James Carruth, a postman. Mrs. Nerlich complained to him, he said, that she was not getting her New York Zeitung regularly. The postman explained that it had ben stopped from coming into the country. Mrs. Nerlich said it was strange that she was not getting any mail. And then they had argued about some aspects of the war. Mrs. Nerlich opining that there could be no truth in the stories about the Germans mutilating children, the postman maintaining a contrary view, which he made plain. Mrs. Nerlich claimed that Russia and Great Britain had started the war, the postman maintaining that it was not so. The French had dropped bombs on her brother's palace, said Mrs. Nerlich. The Germans had bombed Paris, retorted the postman.

Nerlich "Looked Scared."

John Bushell, a German in the employ of the police, said he had known Zirzow for seven months. He was employed to watch him, and while doing so acted as his confidential friend. He had helped Zirzow sell the contents of his trunk to raise money. Bushell testified that when Zirzow was arrested he went and told Mr. Nerlich, and charged the latter with giving Zirzow $10. He said Mr. Nerlich looked scared, and said he should not have done it, adding: "Well, I leave town anyway tonight." Bushell had said "not to be afraid, as it wouldn't be much." He told of Zirzow receiving $20 from Mr. Peters, the German Consul, and $10 from Kleinz, the waiter at the Krausman House. He said he knew Mr. Kleinz never charged Zirzow a cent for his lodgings for the last five months.

"Why did you go to Nerlich's house without being invited?" asked Mr. Hellmuth.

"To find out whether Nerlich was afraid or not."

"You were anxious to get a countryman in trouble?"

"Never mind the country. I stick up for Canada. I am in the secret service and do my duty. My duty is to get anybody anywhere?"

"And in any way?"

"Only in a straight way."

Nerlich's German Business.

Henry Nerlich, brother of the accused, gave evidence in regard to the charge of trading with the enemy. He said the goods in question, 44 barrels, alleged to have been shipped from Germany to Canada after the war started, had been shipped before the war broke out, and had been stalled in Rotterdam. He had seen the customs officials at Montreal about the goods, and received permission to get them up to a certain date. To his knowledge no goods were purchased in Germany after the war broke out, and no money had been sent from Canada after that date, so far as he knew.

The Toronto manager of the Nerlich firm, Karl Storms, stated that Emil Nerlich paid his accounts in Germany by means of post-dated cheques, which he made out on his periodical visits to that country. A bank at Dresden assumed responsibility for the payments.

Watching the Nerlichs.

Inspector of Detectives George Kennedy was subjected to a gruelling at the hands of Mr. Hellmuth.

"You had been searching for Nerlich on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday?"

The inspector said he had instructed his officers to do so. He couldn't say that Nerlich was not back from Montreal on Wednesday, and admitted that it was not a very active search, if this was so. Nerlich had gone to Montreal on the Sunday night, and both Henry Nerlich and Mr. Storms, the manager, testified he was back in his office on Wednesday and Thursday. The police, he said, had begun to watch Nerlich's home prior to Christmas.

Mr. Hellmuth then called the inspector's attention to a passage in a morning paper of the Saturday of that week to the effect that Nerlich "had bolted, and was now in parts unknown," and wanted to know if the inspector had anything to do with the supplying of this information. Inspector Kennedy admitted that he may have had.

"You never went to his office or house to ascertain if it was true?"

"No."

Did Not Influence Zirzow.

Sergt. Lees of the Royal Canadian Dragoons denied absolutely the allegation of influencing Zirzow. He had told Zirzow that he could not discuss the case with him at all, as he was not allowed to do so.

WINDING UP ORDER.

Mr. Justice Sutherland gave an order yesterday at Toronto for the winding up of The Householders' Co-operation Stores, Limited. Mr. G. T. Clarkson was the petitioner. This company was incorporated last August with a capital of $400,000 in five-dollar shares. The petitioner is also assignee for J. W. Rossman & Co., who are creditors of the company to the amount of $9,466.37. The stock of the company is held by 800 people, residents of Toronto, Hamilton and Parry Sound. The liabilities are $16,000 and the assets are estimated at $12,000. There were five stores in Toronto and one in Hamilton, and 25 per cent. was subtracted for impairment of stock. Mr. G. T. Clarkson, the assignee, is also the interim liquidator.

GERMAN GENERAL MAY BE FORCED TO ABANDON LINES

Slow But Determined Advance in the Champagne Country is Expected to Result in the Withdrawal of Germans From in Front of Rheims—Tide Has Turned in Poland With Russians on Offensive.

[illegible], Feb. 24.—Vast importance attaches to the slow but determined French advance in Champagne since Feb. 16.

The successful storming of trench after trench in the neighborhood of Perthes gravely imperils the railroad linking the northern Argonne district with Rheims, and the army of the German Crown Prince with that of Gen. von Heeringen.

The Germans have made desperate counter-attacks daily, but they will be unable to stem the tide unless they receive very heavy reinforcements immediately. The French artillery may at any moment advance to a position commanding the railroad, which would automatically enforce the abandonment of many miles of trenches by the Germans between Perthes and Rheims.

On Monday the French threw back two furious counter-attacks, then, taking the offensive, they hurled the enemy from his original position, inflicting very heavy losses, and capturing numerous prisoners. A large number of machine-guns and bomb-throwers and a great quantity of ammunition fell into the hands of the French, the Germans having been compelled to abandon the booty in their retreat, which was carried out under a deadly gunfire.

GEN. VON HEERINGEN.

Hopes here are high that Gen. von Heeringen will soon have to beat a retreat with his artillery beyond the range of Rheims, which suffered more Monday from the German shells than on any previous day of bombardment. A private telegram says that a large cemetery to the north of the town has been absolutely wrecked by the shells. Several family vaults have been shattered and fragments of hundreds of tombstones have been blown across the ground, which is cut up like a plowed field.

Column Forced Back.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 24.—A marked change for the better is now apparent in the operations against the German advance from East Prussia. The tide turned on Sunday when the easternmost German column was forced back by a Russian force made up of the divisions from Grodno.

The Germans were attacked among the marsh streams between the source of the Bobr and the left bank of the Niemen. The Germans tried to man-haul their light guns on sledges across the frozen streams, but they broke through the ice. Their heavy guns remained well behind and were scarcely used.

The Russian heavy guns on the Grodno roads shelled the German main column over the heads of infantry which was skirmishing among the frozen marshes. In three hours the Germans fell back, and then moved westward, leaving a large collection of pontoons, besides several merged light guns and several hundred dead.

The army from Johannisburg was trying to secure for the Germans the valuable enclave of the Bobr and the Narew, ending at the Lomza fortress, but the Russians, after stubborn and repeated charges and hours of desperate bayonet fighting, drove all the Germans from this region back upon the East Prussian frontier, where there is again a hurried movement of the enemy's trains.

There are signs that the Germans are gathering greater forces at Prasnysz, where their position is still difficult, but the Russians, further to the west have greatly improved their situation. Some hundred German prisoners have been taken in the villages in this region.

Two Girls Badly Burned.

ST. CATHARINES, Feb. 24. — Sophie Weaver, an employe at the McKinnon Dash and Metal Works, whose dress became ignited from a small heater in the factory dressing room, as she was preparing to go to her home after work yesterday, is in the General and Marine Hospital dangerously burned about the head and body, and Rose Holloway, who attempted to give her assistance, was also seriously burned.

SINGAPORE CASUALTIES

Eight Officers Are Among the Killed

LONDON, Feb. 24.— An official announcement given out by the Bureau of Information says that a riot at Singapore in the Fifth Light Infantry over promotions has been quelled.

The loss of life in the proceedings was "somewhat serious."

The text of the announcement given out by the bureau follows:

"News has been received from Singapore that owing to some jealousy and dissatisfaction concerning recent promotions, a portion of the 5th Light Infantry refused to obey orders. This caused a serious riot, which the local and neighboring forces, with a detachment of the 36th Sighs, assisted the authorities in quelling.

"Assistance was rendered also by landing parties from British and allied ships.

"The disturbance was accompanied by a regrettable loss of life. Eight officers were among the total of 25 persons killed, while others were wounded.

"All is now quiet in Singapore, and there has been no destruction to property."

Ottawa Constable Shot by Burglar.

OTTAWA, Feb. 24.—In a running fight with a burglar early yesterday morning, Constable Cyril Lalonde, of the Hull police force, was shot and seriously wounded in the left arm. After an exchange of several shots Lalonde grappled with the fugitive and fired at point blank range, but his revolver failed to explode and the man escaped. He was traced for some distance by bloodstains. He had robbed a shoe store.

MISTAKEN FOR A SPY

By SARAH BAXTER.

When the great European war broke out I was in Berlin. Being a woman and not brave, I concluded that I had better remain where I was than try to get back to America. So I stuck to my quarters in the capital, though I displayed an American flag at my window and visited the embassy to make sure my passport was all right.

By October the lines of traffic over the Atlantic had become safe, and hearing that I could get passage at Rotterdam for New York I concluded to venture upon a trip home. The only danger in my personality lay in the fact of my accent. We Bostonians use the broad "a" like the English, and on this account I was liable to be taken for an Englishwoman.

At the time I started the allies in the west were engaged in repulsing the attacks of the Germans in France and a part of Belgium which was still occupied by the Belgians. Having crossed the Meuse I fell in with the German army in the rear of the line of trenches which was being held as a reserve. I was conducted to the headquarters of the general commanding, and my passport was examined by an officer of his staff who spoke English, but with the usual accent of a German. After a few questions he left me, but soon returned.

"There is fighting on the route you must take, and it would not be safe to proceed just now. The general desires that you join him at dinner, and we will see that you have a comfortable place to sleep."

I was sorry for the delay, but exercised patience, especially since I was to be well treated. Some British prisoners were brought in during the day, and I went among them, chatting with them. I noticed that they all supposed me to be English, several of them asking from what part of England I hailed. This troubled me, for there were German officers and soldiers present, and I was quite sure that at least one of the officers was listening to our conversation.

I dined with the general and several members of his staff. There was also another woman present besides myself, who spoke English fluently. Indeed, not every one would know whether she was English or German, though to me she betrayed her nationality in certain words that a German can never pronounce. For the "w" she used a "v." For a "g" she used "sh." But it seemed to me that she must have learned English while young, for these peculiarities of German pronunciation were very slight.

After dinner the men arose and said that they would smoke outside, giving us two ladies an opportunity to enjoy each other's society for a short time. They had scarcely left us alone together when my companion's manner changed completely. She drew her seat very near me and whispered:

"I am not German. I am English. I have very important information of the German forces which I wish to carry to England. But there are officers between me and the coast who know me, and if I proceed I will be arrested for a spy. If you will carry a bit of paper through the lines to General French's headquarters you will save the lives of hundreds, thousands, of our countrymen."

This speech frightened me dreadfully. I arose and attempted to leave the woman, convinced that she was really working upon me for some purpose which I did not know. She caught me by the skirt and held me, looking up at me with an expression which was intended for terror, but which I believed was feigned.

"Do not betray me!" she cried in a smothered voice. "It will mean death to me!"

"Let me go," I retorted. "I am not English. I am American."

The woman held me, imploring me not to betray her. I told her that I had no interest in her whatever. I was neither German nor English, but a native and a citizen of a neutral country. She played her part admirably, and for a moment such was the agony she assumed that I almost believed her. But I remembered how she had betrayed herself in her speech and refused to credit her.

I pulled myself away from her and fled. Outside the general and the other officers who had retired from the dinner table were seated on camp chairs smoking. They arose as I appeared and turned toward me.

"General," I said, "I wish to proceed on my journey at once. You have set this woman upon me to see if I am what I pretend or a spy. She is not English, which you know as well as I. She is German, though she speaks English better than any German I ever met. But when she tells me she is not a German I know better. I am an American bearing an American passport, and I demand to be allowed to proceed on my journey to Rotterdam, where I hope to find passage to my home in America."

The general broke into a laugh in which the other officers joined. The man who had examined my passport said to me:

"Why, if you are an American, do you use the broad 'a' like the English?"

"Because I am a Bostonian."

I was not only permitted to proceed at once, but was furnished with transportation and an escort. I reached Rotterdam a few days before the sailing of a steamer for America and secured a passage in her.

SILENCED THE DUKE.

Ludwig Barnay, the Actor, Put a Crimp In His Royal Critic.

The Duke of Saxe-Meiningen, who died in his eighty-eighth year, will be remembered as an enthusiastic supporter of the drama. In this connection an amusing story was told by Ludwig Barnay, the actor, in his memoirs. Barnay was playing at Meiningen in the role of Hamlet. The performance had begun and trumpets were ushering in the king and prince for the second scene. The advance of the procession was checked by a loud "Halt!" from the stalls. It was the duke, who had entered unnoticed and proceeded to amend the performance.

"That's not the way to do it! Instead of a salvo of trumpets you must play the Danish national anthem. And the king and prince shouldn't come on together; they haven't met yet!"

"Nonsense!" murmured Barnay.

Unfortunately he was overheard.

"And, pray, why is it nonsense, M. Barnay?"

The actor explained that, according to the text, Hamlet and the king had already met outside.

"M. Grabowsky," called the duke to the producer, "continue as M. Barnay wishes. He is quite right. I never mind acknowledging a mistake!"

The piece proceeded. When the players' scene was reached and Barnay was reciting the actor's part, with "Aeneas' Tale to Dido," he spoke the lines hesitatingly.

"M. Barnay," interposed the duke, "why did you deliver those lines so badly?"

"Because Hamlet is not an actor, sire, but only an amateur!"

"But Polonius praises his acting!"

"Ah, your highness," answered Barnay, "but then Polonius was a courtier, and courtiers find everything that princes do marvelous!"

The duke laughed heartily and interrupted no more that day.

Hard to Kill.

A distinguished entomologist writes: "When I was still new to collecting, in the south of France I discovered one day, to my great joy, a large female of Saturnia pyri hidden away in some bushes. The specimen was the first I had ever caught, and I decided, on account of its large body, to stuff it (a quite unnecessary operation; I have kept dozens since unstuffed). The moth was first apparently killed by being forced into a cyanide bottle, where it was left about an hour. The abdomen was then emptied and the cavity filled with cotton wool soaked in a saturated solution of mercuric chloride. The insect, pinned and set, was discovered next day attempting to fly away from the setting board."

Kitchener's Method.

Recently the editor of a London daily paper was summoned to the British War Office in connection with an untrue scare story which he had published. "If anything of this sort occurs again," Lord Kitchener said, "I shall have you arrested." "On what charge?" asked the editor. "I will arrest you first," answered Kitchener, "and think out the charge afterwards."

THE TRAINING OF SOCIAL WORKERS

Toronto University Has Now Course in City Problems

The oft-repeated charges against the University of Toronto that it is too idealistic and engrossed in theory, that it is unsympathetic with the rest of the community, and ineffective outside its own class-rooms, have no longer any weight. The university has come forth from its dreams. It has entered into the life of the community. It has undertaken a share in the simple, un-ideal problems of every day. It has formed a department of Social Service, is delivering lectures on the practical handling of social problems, and through the University Settlement has linked itself up with the Social Service Commission.

The department of Social Service was opened this fall. Dr. Franklin Johnson, junior, of New York City, a man trained in social work in New York and a scholar widely known for his knowledge of economics and psychology, as related to social service, was appointed to the head of the new department. A number of Toronto professors were attached to it in various branches, and the University Settlement was taken as the department's laboratory for its practical work.

Only a few months old, the new department is already on its feet. Its laboratory, the University Settlement, has been made a unit in one of the nine Neighborhood Workers' Associations that are affiliated under the Social Service Commission, thus drawing the University and its scholarship and facilities into the city's practical service. Its lectures are attended mostly by men and women officially engaged in relief and social work by the city—the Health department's visitors, the department of Education's visitors, the probation officers of the Juvenile Court. And every day sees the scope of the new department increased, more and more of the actual workers of the city enrolled in the classes.

One good feature of the department, as it now stands, is the fact that most of the students attending lectures are the city's official workers. They come with an amount of practical experience and listen to the theoretic side of social problems. When at a later date the department appeals to the inexperienced student, the city will by that time be in the care of college-trained social workers, and Toronto will be a centre, for Canada, of professional problem-wrestlers.

The University Settlement which has been the students' only means of coming into touch with social work in the past, is now a part of the organized relief of the city. The Social Service Commission, a deliberative body appointed by the City Council, is the centre of the system. The city is divided into nine districts, each called a Neighborhood Workers' Association, which embrace all charitable institutions in their respective district. The Social Service Commission has three paid secretaries, each of which looks after three of the nine associations. Regular meetings are held by the associations, and the relief work they do is reported to one of the commission's secretaries. Each association keeps an index of all cases, and the commission keeps a record also. When one of the associations cannot deal with any case, after deliberation and discussion, it is referred to the commission.

It would be hard to imagine a more orderly, scientific, and effective organization than this. It prevents overlapping, and yet has pliability and embraces the whole city. If Toronto's problems, with the brains and training of the university and an organization of the apparent efficiency of the commission, do not melt at once then we may be sure no other instrument will prevail.

Her Alimony Explained.

Miss Curley kept a private school and one morning was interviewing a new pupil.

"What does your father do to earn his living?" the teacher asked the little girl.

"Please, ma'am," was the prompt reply, "he doesn't live with us. My mother supports me."

"Well, then," asked the teacher, "how does your mother earn her living?"

"Why," replied the little girl in an artless manner, "she gets paid for staying away from father."—London Standard.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, Feb. 23.—Wheat plunged heavily downward today, extreme losses amounting to 8c a bushel. Anxiety as to the chance of the Dardanelles being opened and suggestions that the U. S. would possibly yet resort to an embargo covering both ammunition and foodstuffs, were largely responsible. The market closed much flurried at 5⅜c to 7⅜c lower, as compared with Saturday night. Other net declines were: Corn, 2⅛c to 2⅝c; oats, 1⅛c to 2c, and provisions 15c to 70c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 23.—Winnipeg May wheat opened at $1.52⅞, ranging to $1.56, and July at $1.54⅛. Oats opened ⅛c lower to ⅛c higher, and flax was unchanged.

Following the opening prices strengthened, and up to noon were fairly steady around $1.55 for May. Exporters and the local speculative element were the principal buyers of the futures. The undertone, however, keeps strong, with no pressure to sell apparent.

The cash situation was decidedly slow for all grains. Offerings were light and even at that buyers were not inclined to do business. Oats have been quiet for more than a week, while prices hold about steady.

There was nothing new to report in export circles, a lull having occurred in that department, the unsettled conditions being the cause.

The total number of inspections were 640 cars, of which 463 were wheat and 163 oats. In sight today 350 cars for inspection.

Futures closed ⅜c lower, cash wheat closed ⅛c to ⅜c lower, oats closed ⅜c to 1c lower. Flax closed ⅛c to ½c up.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

The local market for oats continues weak and prices have scored a further decline of ½c to 1c per bushel, with a limited demand for carlots and prospects of still lower prices in the near future.

London Junk Men Arrested.

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 24.—Following an investigation which the local detective department, in co-operation with railway detectives, have been making into the wholesale theft of railway brasses here and at Toronto, Morris and Meyer Goben, head of one of the biggest junk dealing concerns in the province, were yesterday placed under arrest charged with receiving stolen goods.

The theft of brasses which had apparently been going on for months, was one of the biggest of its kind on Canadian police records, the railways here and at Toronto being heavy sufferers.

Monday, Edward Fountain and George Chapler (colored) were sentenced to three years each at Kingston for stealing brasses from Grand Trunk Railway premises here.

A FEW FACTS ABOUT MANURE

By Frank T. Shutt, D.Sc.,

Dominion Chemist.

Farm manures constitute one of the most important sources of fertility, and no one who would build up his soil intelligently and economically can ignore the results of investigations which have had for their object the study of their nature and best methods of use. Information regarding manures must always be timely, if only for the reason that on all rationally conducted farms they are produced all the year round. In the following paragraphs we merely state in very concise form some of the more important facts respecting manures; the thoughtful farmer will work out from them the methods of handling and using manure best suited to his conditions and circumstances.

Speaking broadly, the function of manure in the soil may be said to be twofold, the enrichment of the soil in the essential elements of fertility—nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, and the furnishing of humus-forming material for the general improvement of tilth.

The plant food contained in manure is that taken from our fields by the growth of our crops, with probably an additional amount from purchased mill feeds; it stands to reason, since the available plant food in soils is not inexhaustible, that if we are to maintain the soil's productiveness we must carefully save and put back into the soil all the manure produced on the farm. And the more we can produce the better, if we would have increased crop yields. The farm's store of manure in some cases might with profit be supplemented by the judicious application of commercial fertilizers, which are to be valued simply for their percentages of plant food, but from an economic standpoint as well as from the very nature of these materials, fertilizers can never be used as a substitute for manure.

Humous is one of the most important constituents of soils. It mellows a soil, makes it warmer and more retentive of moisture, and thus renders it a more fitting and comfortable medium for seed germination and root extension; in a word, it puts a soil in good heart. Manure in furnishing humus-forming material (organic matter) supplies what no commercial fertilizer possesses, no matter how rich it may be in plant food. It is humus that gives "life" to the soil, for it is the material upon which the useful micro-organisms feed, organisms that prepare food for farm crops. It is not wise or right, therefore, to value manure simply and solely from its content of nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash; it has an additional value for the general improvement of soils that cannot be reduced to dollars and cents—a value unequalled for this purpose by any other material.

Changes which mean decomposition and the certain loss in fertilizing value, begin to take place as soon as manure is voided. It is practically impossible to get manure into the soil, its best storehouse, without some loss; this may considered inevitable. But there is no necessity for the tremendous losses that undoubtedly occur today on many Canadian farms, losses which at a conservative estimate reduce the value of the manure thirty to fifty per cent. These losses are due to fermentation and leaching and take place in the barnyard and manure pile. The losses from excessive fermentation are in nitrogen—the most costly of all the elements of plant food—and in organic matter; those from leaching are chiefly in the more soluble nitrogen and potash compounds.

It is evident, therefore, that the sooner the manure can be got into the soil the better, unless for some special purpose rotted manure is required. Rotting for several months in large heaps results in very large losses, and especially so when the manure is in loose unprotected piles. If it is impracticable, by reason of the depth of snow, or the condition of the land, to immediately spread the fresh manure, keep the pile compact and moist and do not turn it. These precautions will minimize the losses.

The liquid portion of the manure is by far the more valuable, for it is not only richer in nitrogen and potash than the solid, but these elements are present in a soluble and immediately available condition and can be at once utilized by crops. It is, therefore, the part of wisdom to use sufficient litter in the barns and stables to absorb all the liquid. If the supply of straw is short, sawdust and air-dried peat or muck may be employed as supplemental litter.

The freshest and strongest manure should be used on the heavy loams, the oldest on the light and sandy lands. Do not bury the manure too deeply, when plowing it under, 4 or 5 inches is sufficient. Apply it with a manure spreader if at all possible, for this implement saves labor and in spreading the manure uniformly does most efficient work. Use the manure for the hoed crop of the rotation corn or roots, and a top dressing early in the season on an impoverished meadow will not infrequently be found to give a good return.

Johnson's Portrait.

In 1775 Sir Joshua Reynolds painted that portrait of his friend, Dr. Johnson, which represents him as reading and nearsighted. This was very displeasing to Johnson, who, when he saw it, reproved Sir Joshua for painting him in that manner and attitude, saying, "It is not friendly to hand down to posterity the imperfections of any man." But, on the contrary, Sir Joshua himself esteemed it a circumstance in nature to be remarked as characterizing the person represented and therefore as giving additional value to the portrait.

Of this circumstance Mrs. Thrale says, "I observed that he would not be known by posterity for his defects only, let Sir Joshua do his worst," and when she adverted to Sir Joshua's own picture painted with the ear trumpet and done in this year for Mr. Thrale, she records Johnson to have answered, "He may paint himself as deaf as he chooses, but I will not be blinking Sam."

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

BONSPIEL DEVELOPED INTO TRIAL OF STRENGTH AND SKILL PROGRESS OF NORWOOD CURLERS

Norwood, Feb. 24.—The Norwood Curling Club decided last week to hold a local bonspiel on Monday and Tuesday of this week. No invitations were sent to outside clubs as the rink here has only one sheet of ice. Small but useful prizes were secured for a primary and consolation match. The teams skipped by Messrs. T. E. Finlay, C. I. Puffer, H. W. Nicol, T. Watson, J. R. McKelvie, W. H. Cuthbertson and W. E. Pakenham were drawn as follows:—

At 8 a.m. W. E. Pakenham vs. H. W. Nicol.

At 10 a.m., T. Watson vs. T. E. Finlay.

At 11 p.m., J. R. McKelvie vs. C. I. Puffer., W. H. Cuthbertson getting the bye.

The first game was played on Saturday evening and resulted in a victory for Pakenham. T. Watson defeated T. E. Finlay on Monday morning on good ice.

J. R. McKelvie went down to defeat before C. P. Puffer at 10.30.

In the second round on soft ice T. Watson's rink was defeated by W. Pakenham, and in the evening playing in water, Mr. Cuthbertson was forced into the consolations by the rink skipped by Mr. Puffer. The final game between Pakenham and Puffer will be played when the weather turns cold enough to make ice.

One game of the consolation series has been played between T. E. Finlay and H. W. Nicol which resulted in a victory for Nicol.

Watson and McKelvie will play as soon as good ice can be procured. While the ice got very sticky during the afternoon and evening every one took quite an interest in the games. The last three games were merely a trial of strength and luck.

The prizes are a hat each for the winners of the primary, and a shirt and tie for the winners of the consolation.

The Stoning of Hamilton.

Alexander Hamilton was stoned by a New York audience in the summer of 1795. While at a public meeting he was speaking in favor of the Jay treaty, which had just been negotiated by John Jay between the United States and England. Dr. Francis in his "Old New-York" says that among those who did the stoning was the famous Edward Livingston, together with many other "leading citizens."

ONE OF THE GAMEST OF HOCKEY PLAYERS DYING AT MUSKOKA

OTTAWA, Feb. 24. — Hockey fans throughout Eastern Canada will be shocked to learn that Marty Walsh, one of the greatest little centre men the game ever saw, is dying at Muskoka sanitarium of tuberculosis. Walsh was afflicted almost a year ago, and went to a ranch outside of Edmonton. Two or three weeks ago he grew worse, and after a five days' journey reached Muskoka in a very bad way. The house physicians at the institution there notified the Ottawa hockey club that the little fellow only had a few more days to live.

Marty Walsh is a Kingston boy, and first came into prominence as a football player when he played centre for Queen's side by side with Jack and Ken Williams. In one of his first games he was catching a punt when some one of the opposing wings crashed into him and knocked out all his front teeth. This did not perturb Marty, who continued to play till he broke into professional hockey. His first year out, with Canadian Soo in the International League, eh broke his leg. The next year, 1908, he joined Ottawa, and played centre for five seasons with the Red, White and Black.

Walsh played with Queen's hockey team which came to Ottawa after the Stanley Cup in 1906. He was a popular boy, with a humorous turn of mind, and always looked to the bright side of everything. Win or lose, Marty was the same. He was a bear inside a defence, taking passes from the corner, or getting rebounds, and used to take a lot of gruelling without a whisper.

A POLICE JOKE

The job of protecting Toronto the good brings into the maw of the morality department many trophies of art and otherwise—mostly nude. Staff-Sergt. McKinney, who presides over the museum of wickedness, keeps these curios not for himself, oh no!—for Inspector Gregory. He had one last week—but this is getting ahead of the story. On a certain day last week each of the reporters who called was greeted with the high sign from Officer McKinney.

The high sign is accompanied by a motion toward the inner office with an added whisper, "I'll show you a picture."

Accordingly when the door is shut the sergeant digs down into the inner recesses of the desk and produces, not a picture, but one of those "put-it-close-to-your-eye" affairs like they used to have in the handles of pocket knives, once fashionable.

Just to heighten the interest, McKinney explains how it works. "You put it close to your eye," he says, "and when you get the focus, turn this little screw and see the figure move."

Eagerly our reporter takes the little tube-shaped tin thing and holds it up to the light with his eye close. What he sees is undoubtedly interesting. It is the figure of a beautiful woman—in tights. "Now," warns McKinney, "don't forget to turn the screw."

The screw turns—quite readily—but the figure doesn't perform the dance that our reporter has been led to expect. On the contrary it shoots a sharp stream of water straight into the sin-devouring optic.

Of course, there is a chorus of hoarse, official laughter from four or five "bulls" who have been watching through the crack of the door. Our reporter wipes the moisture off his face and his collar and they are ready for the next one.

Five out of six city papers fell for it in one day.

ONLY A FEW DAYS.

Italy Will Make a Move Soon, Says Correspondent.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—Information reaches The New York Times' correspondent from an exceptionally well informed source that the question of Italian participation in the war is likely to move a momentous step forward within the next four days. Feb. 27 is the date set for military preparations, in addition to those which King Humbert's Government already felt it necessary to take, which will put the country practically on a war footing. Complete mobilization may not yet be in question, but new contingents will be called to the colors on a vastly increased scale. There is a disposition here to regard these developments as connected with the allied move upon the Dardanelles. Italian interests are so closely concerned with any new phase in the Balkans that the possibility of the allied occupation of Constantinople cannot leave Rome unconcerned.

No Card, No Bread.

BERLIN, Feb. 24.—The first day's trial of bread cards, which every German was required to have in order to receive his supply, resulted in some misunderstandings and friction, but the system, in general, worked well, although there were considerable delays at the bakeries.

The greatest inconveniences were experienced at the restaurants, where many of the guests forgot to bring bread cards, and for that reason were allowed no bread. The innovation also greatly crippled the numerous automatic restaurants.

Humor and Philosophy

BOON COMPANION.

I LIKE to meet the man who laughs
Until he throws a fit
To work my ancient jokes on him
And see his fat sides split.
I gladly buy him a cigar—
Indeed, would make it two—
To one who very kindly stands
And waits to hear me through.

I'm not afraid when he is near
The jest time tried to spring.
Because I know that on the air
His merry laugh will ring.
The ones that from the ark came forth
He seems to like the best,
Although he will consent to laugh
At some more modern jest.

What do I care though kindness prompts
His laugh, and that alone?
It pleases me as well as though
He cracked his funny bone.
I take for granted that my yarn
At last has made a hit;
That I am in his eyes at least
A most amusing wit.

There is a hint concealed in this,
Though any one may wrest
The secret from its hiding place
And give the thing a test.
The way to be regarded as
The regular little gem
Is not to make the jokes, but be
The one who laughs at them.

Some Mistake.

"You are not the one who was here when I called last year," said the business visitor, looking down at the fussy little man seated at the desk.

"I am sure I am. I have been here ten years."

"I wouldn't have recognized you."

"There may be a reason for that."

"Yes?"

"Looking you over, I don't believe you are the one who called."

Other people prejudice us against their judgment by their obvious lack of admiration for our own exploits.

Tea growing is a fine art. The quality of tea depends on the elevation of the land and the nature of the soil. Cheap teas are produced in vast quantities in the low lying valleys where the humidity encourages the growth of large coarse leaves. On the breezy hill-tops are found the most delicate and tender growths. Salada tea is grown entirely in hill-top gardens, hence its distinctive charm of flavor.

ESTIMATES FOR BOARD OF WORKS

An Appropriation of $27,910 Will be Asked for

At least one chairman of the committees of the City Council has decided to "cut down expenses." He is Ald. G. W. Green, chairman of the important committee known as the Board of Works. Last year the Board asked the council for $29,250 for an appropriation. This year Ald. Green expects to ask for $27,910 or a decrease of $1,340. The chairman has compiled these figures and has performed all the pruning himself. He expects the Board of Works and Council to pass the estimates as they stand. Owing to the absence of Mayor Buller and several aldermen from the city the Board will not meet tonight but tomorrow night instead.

The meeting tomorrow evening will in all probability be a lengthy session. Tenders for supplying the city with sewer pipe will be opened and the matter of insuring the city employes discussed. City Solicitor Gordon will have a report to present on the latter question. Ald. Green intends advancing an idea whereby the council would go in with the Utilities Commission and operate an insurance company of their own for the employes.

PATRIOTIC CONCERT WAS WELL RECEIVED

Splendid Program Provided by Soldiers at Opera House

A thoroughly pleased audience filed from the Grand last night at the close of the grand patriotic concert given by the men of the 8th Mounted Rifles and 39th Battalion. In spite of the heavy rain which threatened to interfere there was a splendid attendance and all were more than delighted with the program.

One of the features of the concert was the grand finale during which all the members of the Mounted Rifles and the infantry battalion assembled on the stage and united in the singing of "The Maple Leaf Forever" and "God Save the King."

Without exception every contributor to the program did well.

After an opening chorus "Soldiers of the King," Corporal Harris sang "Sing Me to Sleep," and "Jack's the Boy for Work," both of which showed his vocalism to advantage.

Lieut. Colonel Miller's recitation which came next proved popular and the colonel threw plenty of vim and spirit into his work.

A variation in the form of a physical drill came next directed by Sergeant Major Wilford which served to demonstrate the training and physical skill of those who performed. Sergeant-Major Wilford gave a vocal solo immediately afterwards proving that his versatility was by no means limited.

Private La Plante's clog dance was ably done and drew considerable applause.

After an intermission during which the orchestra enlivened proceedings, a camp scene sketch, was pust on during which the following popular songs were introduced "Tenting To-night," "Soldiers' Farewell," a comedy skit offered by Lieut. Rogers and another song "Boys of the King of England."

In a side-splitting monologue Mr. George Lynch brought down the house and was heartily encored. The a camp scene sketch, was put on bar acrobatic act which was novel enough to prove interesting. Mrs. Foster contributed a violin selection, Mrs. Fenwick providing the accompaniment. Mr. Bernard Satz gave a clever comedy sketch. Then followed an exhibition of bayonet exercise which, as the program stated, was interesting now but was important in war. A little sketch entitled "Only to Amuse You" was presented by Messrs. Rogers and Satz and won rounds of applause.

Just before the grand finale His Honor Judge Huycke made a very popular address in which he referred to the gallantry of the Peterborough boys and their splendid conduct in answering the call of duty and their country. He was sure the citizens of Peterborough would follow with keen interest the future of her sons and welcome them home with joy and appreciation.

Everything considered the concert was a success from every angle and much praise was bestowed upon all who helped to make it such.

Mr. R. J. Devey was musical director and Lorne Elwyn stage manager.

Those in charge of the concert desire to thank all who took part in the program and not identified with the 39th Battalion or Mounted Rifles. Lieut. Rogers said today that it was expected there would be $100 to be divided between the Patriotic Fund and the Red Cross Society.

Mrs. John King While Thankful for Such Good Fortune Sincerely Mourns Death of Sister

Will not Make Any Difference in Her Daily Life She Says

To reach the age of seventy-six and then fall heir to a $10,000 legacy is an experience well calculated to cause a slight inflation of the head. But the dignity of seventy-six years and a simple trust in Providence has enabled Mrs. John King, Bethune Street, and her sister, Mrs. Chatten, two of the participators in the $5,000,000 fortune left by a sister, Mrs. Van Kliet of New York, to withstand their sudden rise to affluence with becoming simplicity and gratitude.

"Yes, we are thankful for such good fortune," Mrs. King told a reporter, "and it will be useful, but much as it means to us, we mourn the death of our beloved sister. We would rather nothing had been said at all just yet because our sister has been dead only such a short time."

"No, we have not got the money yet and our lawyer says it will be six months, as under the laws of United States six months is allowed for the lawyers to look up other relatives and friends who would likely share in the disposal of the personal and household effects."

In regard to the fortune left by Mrs. Van Kliet, there can be no doubt that everything is correct. By it Mrs. King comes into $10,000 absolutely, while her sister, Mrs. Chatten, aged 70, who is at present living with her, receives an equal amount. Mr. Mark Spencely, a brother, gets the same, while his son Albert Spencely, receives $5,000. Everything is plainly set forth in the will, a copy of which Mrs. King consented to show the reporter.

Her whole feeling was one of sorrow at the death of her sister whom she was glad to say had died in the service of God instead of mammon. Mrs. Van Kliet passed away in a church where she was taking part in a social. She had complained to a niece of feeling unwell during the social and shortly after was stricken by heart trouble and passed away.

Is Seventy-Six.

"I am seventy-six years of age this coming 12th of July," said Mrs. King, "and the Lord willing I am going to celebrate the day." She is an ardent Orange woman and has been associated with the Order since she came to this country and was old enough to understand what the Orangemen were. She has lived in this city seventy-two years, so probably knows more about the city than most people. But three stores and six houses then formed what is now a city of 22,000 population.

Her sudden rise to independence is not going to make any difference in her daily life at all. The money came from the Lord, she says, and she is thankful although she regrets greatly the loss of a kind and loving sister.

Mrs. Van Kliet was in this city twelve years ago on a visit to Mrs. King. She was sixty-five years of age when death occurred. She inherited the immense fortune from her husband who was president of the Goodyear Rubber Company and who died about one year ago.

not know who was the aggressor or the starter. He merely spoke to and caught hold of the man closest to him. Both men were holding each other at arm's length with O'Bren having his back to the wall.

"How long was it before you came back to take William O'Brien out?" Mr. Gordon asked.

"About two seconds; at least, I came right back."

"How did you remove the collar and tie?"

"I tore them off."

"You were exasperated to think this disorder happened in your house?"

"Yes."

"You told Grose he might have killed O'Brien?"

"Yes."

"Was there any indication of anger in that hall before you left the telephone?"

3—Trial

"No loud talking, just scuffling of feet."

"Could that scuffling have come from any other part of the house?"

"It might have taken place in a back room."

"When you put Grose in the back room, did he attempt to come out?"

"No."

"You told Grose to get out of the house?"

"Yes; I wanted him to go before O'Brien came to."

"You say Grose left the house peacefully?"

"Yes."

"How long have you known Grose?"

"Five years."

"From what you know of Grose's reputation, would you think he'd be likely to commit a serious offence on another man?"

Mr. Justice Britton ruled that an answer to that question would be opinion evidence and could not be admitted thus, and the question remained unanswered.

This concluded Mr. Graham's evidence, and William Blackwell was called. He stated that he was an architect and prepared the plan of the ground floor of the White House, which was produced in court.

George Noyes was the next witness. On Christmas Eve last at ten o'clock he was at the White House. Answering Mr. Shaver's questions, he said he was standing at the far end of the bar, and Grose was in the doorway between the bar and the hall. He was struggling with some one, whom he (Noyes) could not see. Only a part of Grose's body was in sight. The man Grose was struggling with was outside the door in the hall. He was sure the man he saw struggling was Edgar Grose.

Answer to Mr. Gordon witness said he thought Grose was in a position as if trying to resist being thrown.

Answer to question by Mr. Shaver, Noyes said Grose was standing up straight.

P. C. Kidd Testifies.

P. C. Kidd of the local police force was next called. He testified that at 8.10 p.m. on Christmas night Grose came to the police station accompanied by his brother. Grose said, "I believe you're looking for me."

Kidd answered, "We are."

Grose said, "Here I am."

P. C. Kidd proceeded to tell the story told him by Grose

CITY COUNCIL AND BOARD OF TRADE ARE REPRESENTED

Rural Radial Lines

His Worship Mayor Buller and Mr. B. D. Hall, president of the Board of Trade are in Toronto today attending the meeting of representatives of many Ontario municipalities which will discuss the possibility of going ahead with the rural radial lines connecting the various towns and cities in this province. If the meeting deem it advisable a committee will be appointed to wait on the Dominion Government, now in session at Ottawa, and ask for a grant to assist in the work. The project was well advanced before the war broke out and for a time was shelved, now it is thought wise to go on with the work and provide employment.

NO INCREASE IN PRICES

One of the effects of the tariff increase of 7½ per cent. on automobile parts, has been that some of the firms increased their prices.

In conversation with a reporter this morning Mr. C. R. Banks stated that McLaughlin Motor Co. have not increased their prices, and the Overland Co., announce that there will be no increase in the price of their cars during the season of 1915.

This means a saving of $50.00 to purchasers of these popular cars.

The Overland Model 80 T. fitted with 32x3½ tires is $1100 and intending purchasers will be wise to see this car.

RUSSIA'S DESIRE FOR ACCESS TO THE SEA

Sir Edward Grey Says England is in Entire Accord

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 25.—"Wtih Russia's desire for access to the sea, England is in entire accord," said Sir Edward Grey in the Commons today, in response to a question from Frederick W. Jowett whether England knew of, and approved of, the statement of the Russian foreign minister, M. Sazonoff, in the Duma, that Russia intended permanently to occupy Constantinople.

The Foreign Secretary said he was unaware that M. Sazonoff had made such a statement, but, he added, "the statement I have seen was that Sazonoff had said that events on the Russo-Turkish frontier would bring Russia near the realization of her political economic problem, bound up with Russias access to the sea."

"With these aspirations," he continued, "England is in s ympathy. What form their realization will take will no doubt be settled in the terms of peace."

GREAT BRITAIN WOULD FIGHT IT OUT ALONE

LONDON, Feb. 25. — Premier Asquith took occasion in the Commons this afternoon, in replying to a question to endorse the opinion expressed recently by Winston Churchill in a newspaper interview, to the effect that Britain would continue to fight to theb itter end, even should France and Russia withdraw from the war. The Premier pointed out that Mr. Churchill had declared with special emphasis that he could not conceive of such a contingency as this, "but," added the Premier, "I am in complete agreement with him. I see no reason to differ from the views he has expressed."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, Feb. 25, — A communication issued last night by the general staff of the army of the Caucasus, says the Russians made progress on February 22nd in certain regions in engagements of secondary importance against the Turks. In the region of Trans-Tchoruk, the Turks attempted an advance movement, which was repulsed with heavy losses.

The escape from a ring of German troops of two regiments of the 29th Russian Division who were surrounded during the retreat from East Prussia, is recorded in a general staff communication given out last night.

It is stated that the Germans are making continuous attacks all along the front. Minor successes for the Russians in the Carpathians are claimed as a result of desperate fighting.

NOT SO MANY MARRIAGES

Falling off in Number of Licenses Issued

Though Cupid's darts have probably been busy since the war broke out, it seems they have not fallen on fertile ground. License Issuer W. J. Green reports a great falling off in the number of licenses issued. The proportion is about one now to five a month before the war was on. August and September were two good months, many of the soldiers deciding to be married before they left, but since the war has been established the slump is becoming very manifest.

Tactics of Opposition Arouse Feeling of Bitterness

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, Feb. 25. — A bitter feeling is being aroused in the House by the renewed chalenges being issued by the Opposition to fight it out in a general election. What the meaning of it is, the Government is at a loss to understand. The budget tax debate is developing acrimoniously.

FIRST BRIGADE PRAISED BY KING GEORGE

A statement by King George, when His Majesty last reviewed the Canadians at Salisbury Plain, is given in a letter just received here from a lady in London. The King is said to have remarked to Lord Kitchener and the officer commanding the Canadians: "The First Brigade excels in excellency. I am greatly surprised."

NERLICH IS FOUND GUILTY

Toronto Merchant Convicted on Conspiracy Charge

TORONTO, Feb. 25. — Guilty of conspiracy in aiding and assisting Zirsow to leave Canada was the verdict rendered against Emil Nerlich in the Criminal Assizes yesterday. Nerlich was allowed his liberty on bail of $100,000 pending the hearing of a reserve case granted by Chief Justice Mulock, at the request of I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., on the ground that the discharge of Mrs. Nerlich on Tuesday left no co-conspirator, and therefore Emil Nerlich, being the only one charged, an indictment for conspiracy could not stand. The second indictment carrying the direct charge of treason against Nerlich was traversed until the spring assizes.

Nerlich listened to the verdict with composure, although his face wore a worried expression. The bail on which he is now at large was furnished by his brother and himself. The entire sitting of yesterday was taken up with addresses of counsel and his lordship's summing up.

Judge Snider, of Hamilton, acquitted Mr. A. B. Smith on a charge of assaulting Archie Shaw. Shaw had addressed insulting remarks to Mrs. Smith for which her husband had chastised him. The Judge said it served Shaw right.

INCIDENTS PRECEDING FATAL MEETING AT HOTEL ARE TOLD BY WITNESSES

Grose and O'Brien Had a Fuss at Hogan's Hotel Six Weeks Previous to Fatality --- Witness Says They Shook Hands and Went Home Good Friends

"I was in a side room having a drink. I got up to go out into the passageway. O'Brien was there. He said something to me and raised his knee or foot at me. I put up my hand to defend myself and struck him twice. You could hardly call it striking, it was more of a push." These were the words used by Edgar Grose in relating what took place between he and William O'Brien on December the 24th last from the result of which William O'Brien died that same night and Edgar Grose is answering the charge of manslaughter. They were given as evidence by P. C. Kidd at yesterday's sitting of the Supreme Court over which Mr. Justice Britton is presiding. Constable Kidd stated that Grose had thus explained the incident to him when he (Grose) gave himself up on Christmas night, twenty-four hours after the tragedy.

Victor Hamilton was at the White House on Christmas Eve and in the witness box yesterday afternoon stated he did not see Grose at all but saw O'Brien lying on the floor of the hall outside the bar room. He was close to the wall and he lay on his left side. Chris. Graham and Clerk M. Neary were also present and the former was removing O'Brien's collar and tie. Mr. Graham gave O'Brien some water but deceased did not drink it. He appeared to be in a faint. O'Brien was removed outside to the fresh air. His eyes were closed and his lips closed tight. His face was a little pale.

John Patterson was the next to testify. He also was at the White House on the night in question and he saw O'Brien. O'Brien was entering the house and he (Patterson) was leaving. He remembered speaking to O'Brien but could not recall the exact words of greeting. He was not sure whether O'Brien answered him or not. As to O'Brien's health he didn't know anything about it other than he heard he had had a couple of operations on his neck.

"Was O'Brien in your opinion in a normal condition that night?" asked Mr. Shaver.

"I wasn't making any judgments that night," was the abrupt answer.

"When did you see him again?"

"I guess it was he who was lying on the floor afterwards. I couldn't see for the crowd."

"Did you see Grose?"

"Yes I saw him in the side room off the bar."

"You were in that room?"

"Yes."

"Who else?"

"A friend."

"Who was he?"

"John O'Brien."

"Who else was there?"

"Wallie Kennedy, Bert Stewart and Herb Gilgour."

"Did you have a drink with Grose?"

"We all had a drink together."

Witness Was Dry.

Patterson brought his short stay in the box to a rather humorous ending by sampling the water placed on the judge's desk.

Maurice Crowley testified that O'Brien and Grose had a "fuss" on Hunter Street in front of Hogan's Hotel about eleven o'clock one evening some six weeks previons to the fatality. O'Brien had left a few chums at the front of the hotel and started for home. Grose did likewise. O'Brien came back and Grose followed. They had a few words and a short scuffle but they stopped, shook hands and to all appearances parted for home in the best of friendship

"They went home good friends did they?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"They showed no ill feeling at all," was the answer.

William Clancy was the next witness called. He recalled quite clearly a conversation he had with Edgar Grose some time last November. It took place one evening about seventhirty in the door way of Kingan's hardware on the corner of Simcoe and George Streets. It was the night after O'Brien and Grose had the trouble in front of Hogan's Hotel and in his opinion about a month previous to the Christmas eve fatality. A third party, Herb O'Heron, was present besides he and Grose. Reference was made to the fight the night before and Grose said he wasn't satisfied. Clancy reminded him that he (Grose) and O'Brien had shook hands but Grose said he wasn't satisfied and he would bet fifty dollars that if he was alone in a room with O'Brien he could lick him. Grose further remarked that if he couldn't lick O'Brien, he had friends who could. Clancy told Grose that he couldn't lick O'Brien, in fact O'Brien could lick half a dozen like him. Grose said, "I'll get him and get him right." He went further and said that he would lay for O'Brien and get him some night coming from work.

Answer to a question by Mr. Shaver, Clancy said Grose appeared to be angry.

Clancy also recalled O'Brien meeting Grose one night in the market arcade. All that passed between the two was that O'Brien said, "How are you fiddler," to Grose. Grose made no reply.

Cross examined by Mr. Gordon, Clancy stated that he and O'Brien had been the closest of friends for some eight or nine years. He felt quite grieved at the death of the friend.

"Had there been any drinking previous to the conversation in Kingan Hardware Co.'s doorway?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"No."

"You were the first to speak of the incident at Hogan's the night previous?"

"Yes."

"Didn't you think that a rather delicate subject?"

"No."

"Then you knew Grose quite well?"

"Yes."

"Did you tell Grose, O'Brien could lick him for $50.00?"

"Yes."

"What was said immediately after Grose mentioned having friends who could do it if he could not?"

"O'Heron broke into the conversation."

"You know O'Heron quite well?"

"Yes."

"Do you drink with him?"

"O'Heron doesn't drink."

"You chum with him?"

"Yes."

"So," Mr. Gordon remarked, "when Grose met you and O'Heron he met two pretty good friends of O'Brien."

Witness answered in the affirmative.

Another Incident.

Clancy also recalled an incident which occurred about two weeks previous to O'Brien's death. It happened in Yeotes' pool room. O'Brien was coming out and he met Grose in the doorway. O'Brien saluted him with "Hello Fiddler." Whether Grose answered him or not Clancy could not state.

In answer to a question by Mr. Shaver as to what led them to talk of the fight near Hogan's when they met at Kingan's, Clancy said he knew O'Brien felt sorry that it happened and he (Clancy) wanted to find out how Grose felt.

Herbert O'Heron was the witness to follow Clancy. He went over to Hogan's Hotel about five minutes to eleven on the night O'Brien and Grose had the row over there. The bar was closed at eleven and every one started out. Grose was with a few friends but they got into a hack and drove away, leaving him behind. Standing in front of the hotel Clancy and Grose had a short argument but they settled it and they started home. O'Brien and Grose were walking along behind Clancy and he. They went a short distance and O'Brien turned to go back. Grose followed a few seconds later. O'Heron said that he wondered what the delay was and he went back to see. Grose and O'Brien were having a scuffle. The fracus had not proceeded very far when they separated and O'Brien said, "If you are satisfied Grose we'll shake hands and be friends." Grose replied, "Alright Bill," we'll shake hands and be friends," and they did.

Wat Not Satisfied.

The next time O'Heron saw Grose was on the corner of Simcoe and George Street the evening following. O'Brien, Clancy and he had been walking around the street and Grose passed and never spoke. Afterwards O'Brien left and Clancy and he (O'Heron) met Grose in front of Kingan's and asked him what was the matter. Grose said he wasn't satisfied with the events of the night previous and thought if he was sober he could have licked O'Brien. He said he could get $50 that he could lick O'Brien. Clancy said he could get a hundred that he couldn't and Clancy further stated that O'Brien could lick half a dozen like him, meaning Grose. Grose also said if he couldn't lick him he had friends who could. He also stated that he'd lay for O'Brien some night coming from work and get him right.

In answer to a question by Mr. Shaver, O'Heron said that at the conversation in front of Kingan's, Grose was perfectly sober.

Mr. Gordon asked witness if he was drinking in Hogan's Hotel the night O'Brien and Grose had the row over there O'Heron stated that he never takes a drink.

"You say Grose and Clancy had an argument that night?" asked the counsel for the defence.

"Yes."

"Was Clancy under the influence of liquor to any noticeable extent?"

"If I remember right his breath was rather strong."

"Did Clancy use any bad language?"

To this witness would not swear either way.

"Well both Clancy and Grose were pretty angry?"

"No, not very."

Mr. Gordon asked him what he said Grose remarked in front of Kingan's the night following that he had friends who could lick O'Brien if he couldn't.

O'Heron answered that he told Grose he didn't know him or his friends very well but if they started to lick O'Brien it would cause trouble.

"Meaning that your bunch was bigger?" suggested Mr. Gordon.

"Not bigger, but better," was the reply.

Dr. Gallivan.

The next evidence taken was that of Dr. Gallivan, who performed the post mortem examination. He was assisted by Dr. Eastwood. The examination was performed sixteen hours after death occurred. Deceased was five feet ten inches in height and weighed about 150 pounds. On the right side of the neck was an old scar three inches in length which was caused from an operation. There were no external marks of violence. There were no marks on the scalp. The blood vessels on the right side of the heart and in the brain were filled with blood. The brain tissue was soft and dry.

"Judging from your report," asked Mr. Shaver, "did you find the deceased suffering from any disease?"

"No."

The thyroid glands on the side of the throat were enlarged and the neck was in such a condition that it would be a simple matter to shut off breathing of the deceased. The fact that the right side of the heart was filled with blood usually indicates that respiration had stopped and the deceased had strangled or suffocated to death.

"Is it true," asked Mr. Shaver, "that in this case it was the breathing stopped the heart instead of the heart stopping the breathing?"

"It is," was the reply.

Dr. Gallivan further testified that they also found that a hemorrhage had taken place at the base of the brain. The blood was between the three covers of the brain instead of in the tissues. The hemorrhage could be caused by undue force at that particular point.

"What is extravasation of blood in the brain tissues usually caused from?" asked Mr. Shaver.

"Diseased blood vessels or undue force at that particular point."

"You found no diseased blood vessels therefore you claim what must have caused the death of O'Brien was violence?"

"Yes."

"In this case did you find the heart diseased?"

"No."

"Do you eliminate disease entirely in this case?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"Yes, we did not find the deceased suffering from any disease."

"Do you swear he was free from disease?"

"Very few of us are."

"You said a hemorrhage may be caused by internal or external violence?"

"Yes."

"Did you make any special examination of the heart?"

"Yes."

"Were any arteries found to be diseased?"

"No."

Dr. Gallivan stated that the examination of the stomach revealed it to be filled with undigested food of which a large amount was liquid. He would not say what the liquid was nor what it had been.

"Considering your experience, was the brain in this case abnormally soft?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"Yes."

"Could you say it was diseased?"

"No."

"Did you make a microscopic examination?"

"No."

Dr. Eastwood, who assisted Dr. Gallivan in the post mortem examination, stated that the covering of the heart and lung were stuck together but that was not really a disease. A man may have that defect and yet enjoy the best of health. The fact that the right side of the heart was filled with blood told that respiration had been resisted.

"Was there any disease of the brain?" asked Mr. Shaver.

"No."

"You found the brain tissues soft, do you consider that a disease?"

"No."

In Dr. Eastwood's mind the cause of O'Brien's death was a hemorrhage at the base of the brain caused by undue violence.

"What would be the nature of violence causing such a hemorrhage?" asked the Crown Attorney.

"External," answered the witness.

This concluded the evidence taken yesterday afternoon and the cross-examination of Dr. Eastwood by Mr. Gordon was laid over till this morning at nine-thirty. The jury were placed in charge of Constables A. Moore and F. Pratt.

Mr. Gordon asked Mr. Justice Brit-

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1915

AUSTRALIA IN THE SAME FINANCIAL CONDITION AS CANADA.

IN VIEW of the budget speech of the Canadian Minister of Finance, the Hon. W. T. White, in which he explained Canada's financial needs, it is interesting to note the state of Australia's finances. The Pacific Commonwealth is facing almost the same problem as Canada, and very much for the same reason. The remedy sought is the same, namely, borrowing in the London market. There is this to be said, however, that the returns indicate a healthier condition on the whole than Canada's, possibly because Australia was not investing so heavily in railways and public works as Canada.

Contrary to general expectation, owing to the war and the drought, the customs and excise revenue of the Commonwealth for the first six months (July to December) of the financial year showed an increase of £124,878 in comparison with the similar period of 1913. During the month of December, however, the customs receipts declined by £168,628 compared with December, 1913. To some extent, this decrease is attributed to the large withdrawal of goods in November from bond in anticipation of the new tariff, but a contraction in the volume of the imports has undoubtedly commenced and will continue for some time to come. Despite the increased duties, a steady falling off in the customs revenue is considered probable for at least the balance of the fiscal year which ends on June 30, 1915. The receipts from the Postmaster-General's Department (stamps, telegraphs and telephones) increased in the six months by £7,528.

The Federal Treasurer estimates the total expenditure for the fiscal year, ending on June 30, 1915, at £37,583,715, and the revenue at £23,273,000, which, after deducting the accumulated surplus of £1,222,401, will leave a deficiency of £13,088,314. For the period stated, it is estimated that £10,500,000 will be required to meet the naval and military expenditure consequent upon the European war. The British Government has arranged to advance the Commonwealth £18,000,000 by monthly payments of £1,500,000 as from December 15, 1914. To meet the anticipated deficiency for the current year, the Commonwealth will issue Treasury bills in aid of the revenue to the extent of £2,588,314, which will be provided by the Australian Notes Fund. Additional taxation has been imposed by (1) an increased land tax, (2) the imposition of probate or succession duties (over and above the State land taxes and probate duties), and (3) higher customs duties. It is anticipated that the Federal probate duties will approximate £1,000,000 and the total land tax will provide £2,700,000.

Recognizing the national emergency, the associated Australian banks have arranged to advance of £10,000,000 in gold, without interest, to the Commonwealth Government in exchange for Australian notes. This arrangement will enable the Commonwealth Government to make advances to the various Australian states which are unable to borrow in London at favourable rates. Through borrowing in London, prior to the war, the state of Queensland does not require any financial assistance this year.

Those who criticized the Hon. Mr. White because Canada's new war taxes were not to cover directly the cost of the Canadian contingents, will see that his position was unavoidable. Australia, although its revenue for the second half of 1914 produced a surplus, has been obliged to finance her expeditionary forces on money borrowed in London. She faces a shrinking revenue precisely for the same reason that Canada does, namely, fewer imports. Clearly, Mr. White has done just what the situation demanded.

The capacity of Great Britain to finance an empire in a great war has been one of the amazing sources of her strength. She is providing, not only for the financial needs of the United Kingdom, which are greater than ever before in her history, but also advancing huge sums to France and Russia, as well as to the Overseas Dominions. Already she has advanced, or is about to advance, to Canada and Australia alone for war purposes, one hundred and ninety million dollars. The war is not by any means over, but the Chancellor of the Exchequer, David Lloyd-George, no doubt basing his forecast on the expenditure to date, has declared that Britain can prosecute this war, with its present financial drain, for a period of five years, and not feel it over-burdensome! Britain's real capacity to raise new forces of great magnitude and pay the huge bills will likely be realized in this war as it never was before.

THE EXAMINER thinks it is a humiliation that a direct tax has to be levied for provincial purposes. In the very next column is an article advocating a direct tax of five dollars per head on the land for Dominion purposes. Possibly our confrere does not consider a direct tax in the latter case a humiliation. It appears to be just another attempt to straddle two horses at once.

WHO WAS THE INSTIGATOR?

THERE IS some alderman or official of this city deserving a public vote of thanks. Whoever instigated the movement to do a little street-cleaning today was at least alive. The whole city has been, during the last three or four days, a spectacle of dirt and sloppiness, and yet with so many men out of work there was no serious effort to make the streets look presentable. The merchants try to keep the walk clean in front of their respective stores, but surely, the Council does not expect them to shovel the manure off the road as well. George, Hunter and Charlotte streets should have been cleaned three or four days ago. They were not only exceptionally dirty, but dangerous with ice hidden under dirt. Burnham street in East City has been three or four inches deep in water on the sidewalk; Gilmour street has not been any better, yet pedestrians were obliged to swim through these pools or else jump the gutter and take the road, dirty as it is. If the officials and citizens of this city ever want Peterborough to be an attractive business centre it must be a clean city, and that requires a more efficient and wide-awake supervision than it has yet received. It is simply scandalous to let the streets of a city like Peterborough remain plastered with manure and dirt as they have been this week. Whoever was responsible for starting the cleaning, belated as it is, deserves the thanks of the citizens.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE HON. T. CHASE CASGRAIN, who was banquetted a few days ago by his constituents at Quebec, was recently appointed Postmaster-General in succession to the Hon. L. P. Pelletier. He was born at Detroit, Mich., in 1852, but educated at the Quebec Seminary and Laval University, and practised his profession in Quebec for twenty years, removing to Montreal in 1897. He was elected to the Quebec Legislature in 1886, and sat in the local House for ten years, for a part of which time he was Attorney General. He represented the county of Montmorency in the House of Commons for the eight years from 1896 to 1904. In 1908 he was appointed a member of the International Waterways Commission. He has been long regarded as one of the leaders of the Conservative party in the Province of Quebec.

A HYMN TO THE NAMELESS.

(Edmund Beale Sargant, in London Times.)

Nameless the men of empire! Thine is the name.
Shine in the darkness. Britain as oft of yore,
Fuel are they for the beacon; thine the flame,
Lifting thy freedom out of bondage of war.

Tongue of the beacon, use us and answer tongue;
Britain speaks to her own from sea to sea.
Mother and child, lovers and old and young,
All at her word give all on the faith of the free.

Doubt and darkness without, yet peace at heart;
This is thy surety, Britain, to sons at bay.
Laughing, envying none, they salute, they depart,
Caught in the beacon's glory — the nameless they.

Hark to that fiery troop! They ask at release,
"Britain, set on thy watch-hills, what of the night?
Heal not slightly this hurt; and cry not Peace!
Peace! where only is certain peace in the right.

"Might that is lawless hath feet of iron and clay;
Never may kingdom fashioned as thus endure;
But of thy foeman's love of his country say:
Honour to this! Love is the might that is sure."

German Dyestuffs Supremacy.

(Springfield Republican.)

The Germans seem sure of their dyestuffs industry, whatever terrible things may happen to their empire or to the house of Hohenzollern. The English project to start a dyestuffs industry with the financial assistance of the Government has failed because no English capitalists will go into the business and risk the dreaded German competition after the making of peace, unless the Government will impose a protective tariff on imports. In this country the dyestuffs situation is exactly like that in England. No protective duties, no American dyestuffs; that they are afraid to take advantage of the war's paralysis of German trade in order to build up industries of their own without permanent Government aid.

Great Britain has certainly committed no violation of the principles of international law that would justify Germany suspending the rules providing for the safety of the crews and passengers of enemy merchant ships overhauled or hailed by her war vessels.

W. A. B. WRITES.

Editor, Review:

Sir, — No doubt haste was the cause of the errors in your report of my card on "Immigration" on Tuesday. But no doubt lack of interest was another reason, although the meeting of H. H. Stevens, M. P., was successful. An editorial would have been to the point in line with your remarks on Mr. Lemieux's motion a few days previously, and I see Ottawa is taking steps to put a break on this ingenious scheme to bucket-shop civilization. Canada will do its duty. Talking of bucket shops, the Mail and Empire overlooks the fundamental principle, "without delivery there is no sale," and that the bucket shop neither buys nor sells, but puts your money away; also that trading "for differences," or, as the game works, "freezing you out," is illegal. Like immigration, a fraud.

Four Hundred Mutineers Killed.

MANILA, Feb. 25.—Four hundred members of the mutinous Indian regiment, which revolted at Singapore on Feb. 15, have been killed, as well as seven German prisoners from the detention camp, who joined the natives when offered their freedom, according to reports of the uprising brought here by passengers from Singapore. The mutineers are said to have killed all their officers save the colonel, and then attacked civilians, several of whom were killed, including one woman.

Nineteen Newfoundlanders Lost.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—Nineteen men of the Newfoundland Royal Naval Reserve were among the crew of the Clan MacNaughton, an armed merchant cruiser, which has been missing since Feb. 3, and practically given up as lost.

NOT SURE WOMEN ARE UNANIMOUS

Legislature Will not Deal With Franchise for Married Women

AT THIS SESSION

TORONTO, February 25. — No measure granting the municipal franchise to married women with property qualifications will be introduced by the Government at this session of the Legislature. The Prime Minister, supported by Hon. T. W. McGarry and Hon. Finlay G. Macdiarmid, received a deputation of about fifty women yesterday at the Parliament Buildings and they laid before him their case for urging the passing of such legislation.

Hon. Mr. Hearst, in his reply, thanked them for the able way in which they had presented their case, but he told them that the present session was practically a war session, and no measure such as they proposed would be introduced by the Government at this time.

Women Not Unanimous.

Further Mr. Hearst said that he was not at all sure that the women of Ontario were unanimous in desiring the vote. He had heard only this week from several prominent women in Toronto who did not desire that the vote should be extended to women. It was not as easy to gauge the opinion of the women as it was of the men and he said that the Government would need more information before becoming sure that the vote was really desired. He appreciated what Manitoba had done as outlined by Mrs. Graham in the way of extending the franchise to women, but he felt sure that the women of Ontario had played and were playing in the present crisis as big a part as the women of the western provinces. There were many women who did not believe that the extension of the franchise would widen the sphere for good of the women. Every one, Mr. Hearst believed, recognized that womans sphere was different to that of man, and it was a question if their influence would be increased by the granting of the franchise. "The home is the mother of the nation," said the Prime Minister, "and it must be guarded."

Would Not Help.

With regard to the complaint that the women of Ontario were as fit to vote as the foreigners, Mr. Hearst pointed out that by the extension of the franchise the wives of the foreigners would also have the right to vote and the situation would be no better than it had been before.

Mr. W. Munns, corresponding secretary of the Canadian Women's Suffrage Association, who introduced the delegation, said that the women had been perfectly satisfied with their reception on a recent visit when the Prime Minister was suddenly called away to Ottawa. He said that 25 municipalities had submitted the question of extending the franchise to women and in every case it had been passed.

Asked for a Referendum.

Dr. Margaret Gordon said that possibly if the women had known that they would lose their franchise when they married they would not have married. She pointed out that there was not a town in which the question had been submitted that it had not been approved. If the Government did not bring in a measure extending the municipal franchise to married women, Dr. Gordon asked for a promise that a referendum on the question would be submitted to the people at the next Provincial election. She said that the married women were given the vote in all the western provinces and did not believe that Ontario should "lag behind."

Mrs. Flora McD. Denison pointed out that in the United States the good effects of extending the franchise to women had been shown by the fact that States adjacent to those which had met the demands of the women had done likewise. If it had not worked out satisfactorily they would have been aware of the fact and would not have committed a similar mistake.

No Party Allegiance.

Dr. Margaret Johnston declined to claim allegiance to either the Liberal or Conservative party. "If I did," she said, "that would place me in the same category with criminals, lunatics and fools."

It was a low ideal, perhaps, but Mrs. Johnston pointed out that the government that gave the votes to women would be the party that would benefit.

The present war could never have happened if the women of the world had been placed on the same plane with the men in the opinion of Dr. Stowe Gullen. If the world had started right in dealing with women she claimed it would not be in the horrible muddle it is in today. Touching on the fact that women when they married lost the vote she asked: "Is it wrong for a woman to marry a man," and Mr. Hearst replied, amidst laughter, "Some of them."

Dr. Gullen said further that the mothers were asked to guide their sons and take care of their morals but the sons and not the mothers were given the right to make the law that guard the young men.

Congratulated Government.

The men who spoke were Mr. R. J. Bengough, Mr. R. D. Fairbairn, Mr. R. J. Stevenson, of the Toronto District Labor Council, who congratulated the Government on the passing of the Workmen's Compensation Act, and Rev. Father Minehan.

McKeesport, Pa., will soon have a $4,000,000 tin plant, the largest in the world.

TORONTO, Feb. 25. — A demand for Government recognition of Ontario's Hydro-radial policy, for Government subsidies and for the immediate cessation of the granting of radial and power rights to private corporations was made by over 300 municipal office-holders at the Labor Temple yesterday. They represented practically every urban and rural municipality in the province. The primary purpose of the convention was the permanent formation of the Hydro-electric Railway Association of Ontario and the adoption of the newly-formed constitution. Another object was to re-awaken Governmental interest in the Hydro-radial scheme, and secure an expression of opinion in regard to subsidies by the authorities at Ottawa and Toronto.

Speeches were delivered by Sir Adam Beck, Mr. J. W. Lyon, of Guelph; Mr. Detweiler, of Berlin; Mayor Church of Toronto, and others.

"The Hydro system is no longer the pet child of the Government," declared Sir Adam Beck. "It has reached the adolescent stage. It has established itself, can define its own policy, and bring it to a successful issue. Let us go ahead with this radial scheme. But in the meantime call a halt to the granting of privileges to private persons. Ontario has borne the brunt of these grants to private concerns; it is now her turn to be helped construct radials that will be owned by the people."

Love, Tomatoes and Finance

A Nice Little Scheme to Help Cupid

By ESTELLE CLAYTON

The big man of the town of Strongsville was Jacob Strong. First, his grandfather had founded the town; second, he had been a justice of the peace for some years; third, he had received almost votes enough once to send him to the legislature, and, lastly, he was worth about $30,000.

Mr. Strong felt his bigness and exacted respect accordingly. He did his best to make his son Horace and his daughter Maude feel their superiority over all other human beings in and around Strongsville. He succeeded admirably with the daughter, but the conduct of his son gave him no little anxiety.

One morning he said to the latter:

"Horace, I am pained and humiliated to learn that for months past you have been paying attention to the daughter of Scribner, the carpenter. You have been riding with her, and you have frequently called at the house. What does it mean?"

"Miss Scribner is a nice young woman, sir," was the reply. "She is as well educated as our Maude and has as good manners."

"Tut, tut, sir! Make no such comparisons. If you forget who and what I am you ought to be ashamed of yourself. Being the son of a man of position and wealth, with more wealth and social prestige coming, you must look higher, sir, far higher."

It was true that Miss Nettie Scribner was the daughter of a carpenter, but as the favorite of her Aunt Hilda Bascomb, a rich old spinster, the girl had been sent to a seminary and enjoyed exceptional opportunities. In all but wealth she was the peer of any girl in the county.

As a matter of fact the couple were engaged, but keeping it a secret. Horace had hopes that when the time came to announce the fact to his father it would be received at least in a reasonable way, but the conversation of the morning showed him the breakers ahead.

What Mr. Strong meant when he referred to more wealth and social prestige coming was the fact that he had organized the Strongsville Cannery company. The cannery building was already under way. It was a fertile farming country around the town, but with poor facilities for shipping fruits and vegetables, and he had conceived and entered on the idea of a tomato cannery.

He had investigated until he was certain that the profits would be large. He put in almost all the money and controlled things, and what few other stockholders there were did not belong to Strongsville.

As president of a tomato cannery Jacob Strong felt himself to be a tangible object. He was right there and all there in his pomposity. He didn't propose to have any of his neighbors feel that as stockholders they need not have too much awe of him.

Of course the magnate's son informed the carpenter's daughter of the situation of affairs. Young Horace was determined to disobey his father at any cost; but, unfortunately, Aunt Hilda arrived on her annual visit. She didn't exactly believe that all people were equal, but she bowed to none if a carpenter and a blacksmith were honest and respectable men they were just as good in her eyes as magnates. The Scribners attempted to keep the secret from her, but she hadn't been in the house a day when she turned on her sister and said:

"Mary, there's something going on here, and I want to know all about it. I find Nettie looking piqued and sorrowful, and she hasn't eaten enough at three meals to keep a bird alive. No use trying to keep it from me. What's the matter?"

She was told, and when she had the particulars she set her jaw and nodded her head, which showed that she had made up her mind. Just what it was she didn't say that evening, nor did she tell it next morning when she put on her rusty old bonnet and sallied out. She said merely that she had a business matter to attend to.

Mr. Magnate Strong had a business office in the town, of course. Aunt Hilda made a straight course for it and plunged herself down in a chair in front of the great man to say:

"Jacob Strong, my niece and your boy were attracted toward each other, and they have fallen in love and are engaged. I understand that you oppose the contemplated marriage."

"With all my soul, and if you are here to say anything in favor of it you may as well save your breath. I wonder that you had the impudence to appear at all."

"And what are your objections?" quietly asked Aunt Hilda as she got a strong hold of her temper.

"You have no right to ask!" he shouted at her. "But I will tell you at least one objection. No son of mine can mate with the daughter of a common carpenter."

"No? Jacob Strong, how long did your father get a skinny living off a mighty poor thirty acres of ground, and what did he amount to as a man? How far back is it since you were running an old sawmill on Ten Mile creek? Mr. Scribner is a carpenter, but his pedigree is as good as yours."

"If you were a man I'd throw you out of the office!" shouted Jacob Strong.

"But being I'm a woman I'll walk out as fast as I can. I just called to let you know, Jacob, that I have arrived in town. Please keep a little track of me for the next two weeks, will you?"

The aunt reached home smiling and chuckling. She laid a hand on Nettie's head and said soothingly:

"I talked up to old Strong today. It was right that I should. But I haven't spoiled anything. Give me two weeks and I'll have him here begging you to marry his son. You tell the young man to remain quiet and do nothing rash. Hilda Bascomb is managing this affair, which will be one of finance from now on, and if she makes a failure it will be for the first time. Now I've got to go back downtown and see a lawyer, and then I'll have some riding around the country to do. Oh, but won't I make old Strong jump before I am through with him!"

"In planning for the cannery, Mr. Strong had called upon most of the farmers and had informed them pompously that thereafter he would buy their tomatoes at the market price. He had made no definite agreement with them, however, for he had determined to pay a mighty low price when the time came.

Miss Hilda Bascomb saw lawyers and had contracts drawn up. With a boy to drive her, she covered most of the county the week after the interview with the magnate. Contracts were signed right and left, and something was added for secrecy among the signers.

Meanwhile the tomato cannery was hurried along, and the fixtures arrived to be put in place. In her walks about the town the spinster met Mr. Strong several times face to face. Every time he scowled and she chuckled. There was anxiety at the Scribners' to learn what was afoot, but the only explanation they could get was:

"I am simply doing a little financiering to help Cupid and the tomato market along. When it's time to explode the torpedo you'll all hear the racket."

She had been in Strongsville almost a month when the racket was heard. The cannery was ready for business, and the farmers had been notified to begin delivery on a certain date. The date came, but there were no tomatoes.

A messenger was dispatched with a horse and buggy. He had been back about half an hour when Miss Bascomb entered Mr. Strong's office for the second time and plumped herself down in the same chair.

Mr. Strong was at the telephone. He was using vigorous language and dancing around.

"Well, and how's the tomato market?" asked the caller as he glared at her and rung off.

"It is you—you who have done this thing," he exclaimed, "to revenge yourself! You! You!"

"Yes, I have cornered every tomato in the county. It wasn't for revenge, but to give Cupid a chance. How much will you take for your factory, cash down? It hasn't any pedigree to speak of, but I think Mr. Scribner, the carpenter, can give it one."

"I won't sell to you! Your tomatoes can rot on your hands!"

"Oh, no, they won't, Jacob!" chuckled Miss Hilda. "I can sell them at a very nice profit. But your factory can stand idle while I build one of my own! Better talk business, Jacob Strong. That son of yours is a nice young man, and I think a heap of my niece. It's a love match, and it would be a pity to see it broken off. Isn't there some way that I can turn these tomato contracts over to you and let your factory begin work? There's money in the canning business, and I don't want to kill an industry."

Mr. Strong fought for an hour and then gave in and shook hands. By the time the contracts were assigned to him he was smiling. By the time the woman in the rusty old bonnet was ready to go he was ready to remark blandly:

"Just so, Miss Bascomb; just so. Mr. and Mrs. Scribner are most worthy people, and if Horace is in love with their daughter I have no objections to a marriage. He is old enough to judge for himself, and it is not for me to interfere. Good day, ma'am, good day, and thank you ever so much for calling."

HELPS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Keep a little bag in the sewing room for the buttons and hooks and eyes which are cut from discarded garments.

A fact to be borne well in mind is that the elaborate braidings may be executed at home. It is close work, exacting infinite accuracy, but it is not difficult.

Flannel lined velvet butterflies in gorgeous colorings are hand painted for teapot holders. Brilliant parrots, also painted, are for the same use.

A linen bag of dark blue, green or red for holding a pair of garden flower scissors and a rubber flower sprinkler, together with an inside pocket for flower wire and tinfoil, is a most useful present to offer with a garden apron.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Breaking Up a Cold.

One of the most efficient remedies for breaking up a cold during its earliest stage is camphor, says a physician. When the eyes begin to water and there is the accompanying tingling of the nose and feeling of chilliness place three drops of camphor on a lump of loaf sugar and place the sugar in the mouth. Repeat this every fifteen minutes until four or five doses have been taken. At the same time place the feet where they will become thoroughly warm. This will usually prove effectual in breaking up a cold if the cold is taken at its very beginning. For a child but one drop should be placed upon the sugar and five or six doses administered.

Another method of taking the camphor, which is sometimes preferred for grown people, is to put a spoonful of sugar in a cup, add hot water and from ten to fifteen drops of camphor. This makes what is called a camphor sling.

Milady's Mirror

Winter Care of the Skin.

Every girl can retain her soft, smooth skin through the entire winter by spending just a few extra minutes in preparing for it a guard against winter's winds.

The first rule, which each girl should remember, is never to dry her skin hastily after washing. This is the most important of all rules for winter, for more chapped skins are due to a slipshod drying than to any other cause.

Also the girl who is careful of her complexion should be quite sure that no soap remains on her skin. After washing with soap she should rinse all over with clear, fresh water. Then a brisk, thorough drying should take place with a coarse bath towel if possible. A dry, rough bath towel is far better for thorough drying than the ordinary face towel, which absorbs the water but does not take the moisture from the skin.

If the girl is going out immediately after washing a little pure olive oil should be rubbed into the face and a little camphor ice into the hands. The pure olive oil is far better than ordinary cold cream for keeping the skin smooth. It is not apt to grow a great deal of hair, as so many persons are inclined to think. Before going out into the wind a little of the oil should be well rubbed into the face and then dusted over with powder.

At night, after the face has been washed in warm water, the girl should rub in some good cold cream and then remove it with absorbent cotton. This will not only remove all the dirt of the day, but it will also leave the face soft and smooth for the night.

A point for the girl who is anxious to avoid a chapped face is to taboo veils, unless they are of white mesh. If they are closely woven the moisture from the breath will cling, wetting the veil, which in turn will chap all the skin around the mouth and nose.

The Hands In Cold Weather.

An excellent and delightfully fragrant cold cream for rough hands, or face, can be made as follows: Take eight ounces of almond oil, one and one-quarter of an ounce of spermaceti, one and one-quarter of an ounce of white wax. Shred the wax and the spermaceti finely and put in a china jar. A small enamelware saucepan will do. Stand it in another saucepan about a third full of boiling water. Keep this simmering until the ingredients are entirely melted and then add a few drops of lavender oil and pour into small china pots. The preparation can be used as soon as it is cool and will keep for a long time.

Another invaluable lotion for hands that are inclined to be red in winter, even though they do not chap badly, is made of lemon juice, eau de cologne and glycerin, equal parts of each. This can also be used for chapped hands.

The Winter Walk.

Walking is a desirable exercise at all times, but in winter when the air is bracing it is especially helpful. The hour's walk each day, briskly done, regularly followed, will be found to be the greatest health giver and best of laxatives. Who cannot find time to walk each day at least a few blocks—a real walk, not a hurried skip of a few minutes nor a languid, leisurely stroll, ended as soon as the walker feels a little bit fatigued? This tired feeling is the flag which signals that more walking is needed. If the exercise is persisted in as each day goes by the tired feeling will not be noticed. One should walk into and over and past the tired feeling until that second influx of strength is noted which runners call their "second wind." When this is done the walking is doing some good.

Brushing the Hair.

At night devote ten minutes to brushing the hair, using a stiff bristled brush and having the hair divided in four portions. Brush evenly and firmly, wielding the brush from the crown of the head to the ends of the strands of hair with an uninterrupted movement. First bring the brush down on to the scalp and drag it through the hair, using firm, brisk strokes, which will start the circulation in the scalp.

Rosy Finger Nails.

Rosy finger tips and pink nails are very pretty and when nature refuses to bestow them art furnishes a very natural substitute. After the hands are bathed rub the nails with equal parts of cinnabar and emery, then with oil of bitter almonds. Remember too high a polish is considered vulgar. The finger tips and palms can be tinted with a liquid rouge just a delicate pink.

If You Are Too Fat.

Buttermilk will make you thinner if you drink enough of it. Doing without breakfast is one way of reducing flesh. Eat your first meal at 1 p. m. and then eat sparingly. Eat no potatoes, beans, corn, peas or beets. All bread should be toasted.

Curlers For the Hair.

Curlers of any description are none too good for the hair, but the kinds where the hot iron does not come in contact with the hair itself are best. Then the kid one where no iron at all is used is better still.

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Cured Both Stomach Trouble and Headaches

PALMERSTON, ONT., JUNE 20th. 1913.

"I really believe that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives". Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been paying doctor's bills. I was so sick and worn out that people on the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same old Stomach Trouble and distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Sometime ago, I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives" and the first box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use.

Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked the reason. I replied, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives". He said, "Well, if Fruit-a-tives are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can".

MRS. H. S. WILLIAMS.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson IX.—First Quarter, For Feb. 28, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Sam. vii, 3-17. Memory Verses, 11, 12—Golden Text, I Sam. vii, 12—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

When the men of Beth-shemesh lost 50,070 men because of their transgression they sent to the men of Kirjath-jearim to come and take the ark away from them, for they said, "Who is able to stand before this holy Lord God?" Their question is a very suggestive one, for the holiness which God requires in His law, which is holy and just and good, is so great that no man can stand before it, even as it is written: "If thou, Lord, shouldest mark iniquities, O Lord, who shall stand? But there is forgiveness with thee * * *" (Rom. vii, 12; Ps. cxxx, 3). The way out for all, for all have sinned and come short, is that the necessary holiness is found in Christ, who perfectly kept this holy law and is made righteousness unto all who receive Him (II Cor. v, 21; I Cor. i, 30). The ark found a resting place at Kirjath-jearim for many years in the house of Abinadab in the hill until David removed it to a tent which he had pitched for it in Jerusalem (II Sam. vi, 3, 4). After it had been twenty years there Israel seemed to awake to a desire for the Lord, for it is said that they "lamented after the Lord" (verses 1, 2).

It may have been that after the catastrophe at Ebenezer, in which the sons of Eli were slain and the ark of God taken and because of which Eli died, Samuel returned to his father's home at Ramah, for there he lived all his life afterward; there he built an altar unto the Lord; there he judged Israel going in circuit to Bethel, Gilgal and Mizpeh, and there he died and was buried (i, 19; ii, 11; vii, 16, 17; xxv, 1). Ever since the Philistine victory Israel had been under their power, but now Samuel encouraged them to put away their idols, return unto the Lord with all their hearts and serve Him only, that He might deliver them out of the hands of the Philistines (verses 3, 4). The one thing that the Lord is looking for in all the world is a whole heart for Himself (II Chron. xvi, 9); no idols, nothing to grieve or hinder, but such yielded hearts that He can magnify Himself in us and work in us all His good pleasure (Heb. xiii, 20). So all Israel gathered together to Mizpeh that Samuel might pray for them (verses 5, 6). They drew water and poured it out before the Lord and fasted and confessed their sin.

The wise woman of Tekoa said, "We are as water spilt on the ground, which cannot be gathered up again" (II Sam. xiv, 14), and in Lam. ii, 19, we read, "Pour out thine heart like water before the face of the Lord." True emptiness before Him will always bring His fullness; He perfects His strength in our weakness; when we are nothing then He can work. There must be no will nor way nor thoughts of ours to hinder. The Philistines, hearing of the Israel movement, went up against them, for when the people of God turn to Him with purpose of heart the devil always wakes up to oppose. Israel did the right thing in saying to Samuel, "Cease not to cry unto the Lord our God for us." So Samuel offered a sacrifice and cried unto the Lord, and the Lord heard him and thundered with a great thunder and discomfited the Philistines, and they came no more into the coast of Israel all the days of Samuel (verses 7-13).

We are reminded of such words as these: "The God of glory thundereth;" "God thundereth marvelously with His voice; great things doeth He, which we cannot comprehend" (Ps. xxix, 3; Job xxxvii, 5). Neither thunder nor lightning should cause us any fear if we are right with Him, but should rather make us rejoice to hear His voice and see His might. As Noah, Daniel and Job are quoted as samples of righteous men (Ezek. xiv, 14-20), so Moses and Samuel are mentioned as great intercessors (Jer. xv, 1). At the same place where the Philistines conquered Israel and captured the ark there the Lord overthrew them and delivered Israel (chapter iv, 1; vii, 12), and Samuel set up his memorial stone and said, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." All who trust in the Lord can surely say the same, and we should say always: "Henceforth * * * unto Him who died for us and rose again." "Henceforth * * * laid up for me a crown of righteousness" (II Cor. v, 15; II Tim. iv, 8). By the great sacrifice of Himself we are redeemed; by His sacrifice as a burnt offering, typified in Samuel's offering (verse 9), we become wholly dedicated to Him (Lev. i), and when we willingly acknowledge it and desire to serve Him only then we may expect to see His power on our behalf and His working in and through us.

Samuel's home at Ramah and the three other places where he judged Israel are full of interest historically—his home because of the story of Hannah and her song; Mizpeh because of Israel's return to God at this time (v, 6), and the meaning of the name (Gen. xxxi, 49-52), though it was not the same Mizpeh. Bethel reminds us of Abraham's second altar in the land and his departure and return and also of Jacob's dream (Gen. xii, 8; xiii, 3; xxviii, 10-19). At Gilgal Israel kept the first passover in the land, and it became Joshua's headquarters (Josh. v, 10; x, 15).

Enigmatical.

"Little girl, did you ask your mother, as I told you, to lend me some eggs for my cake?"

"Yes'm, and she said she hadn't no eggs to lend, but she'd give you a lemon."

Man and His Doctor.

The day is coming. What day? The day when we will pay the doctor annually to keep us well instead of paying him every time we get sick to make us well.

TWO SHIPS TORPEDOED TWO OTHERS HIT MINES

Only Four Lives Are Lost in Foor Disasters to Shipping in Blockade Zone.

GERMAN SUBMARINES LOST

Britain Offers to Provide Convoys For all Ships Passing Through Danger Area.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The German blockade of the British Isles has been in effect for a week with the result that so far as is known two Norwegian, one French and seven British steamers have been sunk or torpedoed by submarines, with the surprisingly small loss of eight lives. Two of these steamers, the Beirldge and the Dinorah, succeeded in reaching port.

On the other side of the account it is reported that two German submarines are missing, and that a third had been hit and possibly sunk by a French destroyer.

The following four additional steamers were reported lost yesterday:

Harpolian, torpedoed off Beachy Head; three lives lost.

Deptford, sunk off Scarborough, either by mine or torpedo; one life lost.

Rio Parana, mined off Eastbourne; crew rescued.

Oakby, torpedoed off Rye; crew rescued.

All the vessels were British.

The blockade, however, has had the effect of increasing the insurance rates, and some neutral owners are keeping their ships in neutral waters.

A despatch to The Daily Telegraph states that the steamer Harpolian has been torpedoed off Beachy Head in the English Channel. Forty-one members of her crew were rescued. Three are dead on the vessel.

The collier Deptford was sunk yesterday off Scarborough, either by a mine or a torpedo. One life was lost.

A despatch to Lloyd's Agency from New Haven says the steamer Rio Parana of London, laden with coal and bound from the Tyne to Porto Ferrajo, Island of Elba, struck a mine five miles southeast of Beachy Head at three o'clock yesterday. The explosion tore a hole in the vessel's starboard side and she filled and sank. The crew of the Rio Parana were rescued by a torpedo boat and landed at New Haven.

The British steamer Oakby was torpedoed by a German submarine off Rye Tuesday. Her crew was rescued by a fishing smack and landed at Ramsgate yesterday.

The Oakby was bound in ballast from London for Cardiff, Wales. She was struck on the port side. Her main hatches were blown off, her decks were splintered and the binnacle was hurled into the air.

A despatch from Copenhagen says: "A German submarine signalled the Swedish pilot boat Iris for assistance off Mundal Tuesday night. "The Iris was unable to approach [illegible] because of mines, and the submarine suddenly sank. "It is believed to have hit a mine."

Great Britain has notified all shipowners and agents in American ports that all vessels bound for British or French ports with foodstuffs, ammunition or general supplies will be met 200 miles beyond the German war zone by torpedo-boat destroyers and convoyed to their destination.

Besides the vessels which have fallen victims to the submarines, two American and one Norwegian steamer have been sunk by mines in the North Sea, and the Swedish steamer Specia and one or two British steamers are overdue and it is feared have been lost with their crews.

In almost every case the steamer sunk by the submarines was a small and slow vessel, and at least three of them were caught while at anchor or while they were barely under way. This, with the failure of a submarine to hit a fast cross-Channel steamer at which it fired a torpedo, apparently proves to the satisfaction of British naval writers that steamers with moderate speed, which observe obvious precautions can move in safety.

TAX GETS EVERYTHING

Business Income and Property Included in Levy

TORONTO, Feb. 25.—The new war tax bill was brought into the House by Hon. T. W. McGarry yesterday and explained as applying to every income source now subject to assessment, the rate will be one mill on the dollar for business, income and property and the local corporation will make the collections.

In counties collections are made as usual, and the return goes to the provincial treasurer. Mr. McGarry expects that the collection this year will be much larger than $1,800,000 counted upon.

A feature will require amendments to the Municipal Act to give municipalities the right to exclude from the new tax cases of immediate relatives of soldiers at the front. Their sacrifice was great enough already.

The bill was explained as designed to offset the patriotic contributions made already and to meet others to Britain and her allies. First reading was granted at once.

ACTION IS IMPERATIVE

Italy Must Join in War Von Buelow Thinks

BERLIN ALARMED

LONDON, Feb. 25.—Advices from Rome are to the effect that close observers in Rome of the political situation declare that since the readiness of Italy to join in the war has become apparent, the insistence of Germany upon her continued neutrality has grown stronger.

It is declared in a reliable quarter that Prince von Buelow, the German Ambassador to Italy, has summarized the Italian situation to his Government substantially as follows:

Italy has spent near 2,000,000,000 lire ($200,000,000) in war preparations since the outbreak of hostilities, consequently action on her part is daily becoming more imperative. Furthermore, for internal reasons, all political parties are asking the Government to obtain as a result of diplomatic negotiation or through the use of the Italian army and navy, the fulfillment of the aspirations of the nation, particularly in return for the heavy sacrifices already made.

Germany urged Austria-Hungary strongly to cede to Italy her Italian province of Trent and a portion of the Istria peninsula, with the idea of keeping Italy neutral at the present time, and enlisting her favor for the future.

It has been asserted in Rome that Prince von Buelow has said Austria must be induced to accede to his views concerning territorial concessions to Italy, else he would resign his post.

A despatch from Berlin says:

"A sudden change of feeling concerning the attitude of Italy has been noticeable in diplomatic quarters here during the last few days. The position of Italy appears to have become a matter of much greater concern.

"The reasons for this change are not clear at this time."

AEROPLANES OF ALLIES HAVE ADVANTAGE

Are Lighter Than Armored Aircraft of the Enemy

CAN GO HIGHER

At the end of the first three months of the present war "Eye-witness" mentioned the fact that no fewer than 17 German aeroplanes had been brought down by British aviators.

Since then the good work has still gone on, and today British and French flying men have established a distinct superiority over their German enemies.

Now this at first sight seems strange, for, as most people are aware, all, or nearly all, the German planes are armored. The Aviatik, which is the biplane most generally used by them for bomb-throwing and reconnaissance, has all the front and the vital parts protected by a thin sheet of tough steel known as the "capot." The rest of the "fuselage," is or are coated with a liquid which prevents their catching fire from inflammable shells or bombs.

The ordinary Albatross monoplane, the machine commonly called the Taube, from its dove-shaped wings, is also steel-clad. In fact, the only German machine which has no protection is the small fast one-seated Argo.

On looking into the matter a little more closely, we find, however, that the armor cuts both ways. True, it protects the airmen and the engine from bullets fired from below. On the other hand, it adds so greatly to the weight of the whole, that an armored German plane has not the same speed or rising power as that of the unarmored machines.

British Flying Men on Top.

This being the case, the British flying man usually manages to rise above its adversary, and—since it is impossible to carry overhead armor—the latter is then at the mercy of the lighter plane, and can often be brought down with a pistol bullet.

Whether a plane should be armored or not is still an open question. If a plane were meant merely for travelling over the head of the enemy there would be no need for armor. The flying man could sail along at 5,000 feet, where he would be practically safe from any anti-aircraft artillery.

But this is not the case. It has been found that 2,000 feet is about the limit at which any useful observation work can be carried on, and at this low altitude the airman is at the mercy of well-directed bullets.

At 2,000 feet nothing less than three millimetres (roughly, one-eighth of an inch) of tempered steel will stop a rifle bullet, and this is about the thickness which the Germans use to protect their machines.

Anything less is worse than useless for a "mushroomed" bullet accompanied by scraps of broken steel is infinitely more dangerous to the pilot than an ordinary bullet.

To armor a plane with steel one-eighth of an inch in thickness adds to it a weight equivalent to that of a third passenger and naturally slows it very considerably.

Bullets Pass Right Through.

Our own experts declare that, for military work, the best protection is obtained by making the plane "transparent" to rifle fire. This sounds absurd, but what is meant is that the wings, tail, controls, struts and propellor should be so constructed that bullets can pass through them without doing vital injury.

Then, if the pilot, the observer, and the engine itself are protected by a three-millimetre sheet of best steel the whole machine and its occupants are safe from rifle fire so long as they do not descend below the 2,000-foot level.

But not from the modern anti-aircraft gun.

Krupp has built three of these terrible cannon, which fire shells varying from ten to thirty pounds in weight, and the largest is able to hurl its projectile to a height or rather over four miles into the air.

It would be utterly impossible at present to build an aeroplane proof against the missiles from these weapons, but on the other hand it must be remembered that, at any height above 4,000 feet an aeroplane presents such a tiny mark that to bring it down would be on a par with a man armed with rifle (not a shot gun) killing a flying swallow at 200 yards.

Captain of the Audacious is Now Rear Admiral

LONDON, Feb. 24. — The official list of changes in the naval personnel just issued announces that "Captain Cecil F. Dampier, until recently in command of the battleship Audacious, has been promoted to rear-admiral."

The British battleship Audacious was reported last November to have been sunk off the Irish coast by a mine. No official announcement regarding the Audacious has ever been made, and a recent report stated that she had been salved and towed to the Belfast yards and that she would soon rejoin the fleet.

A conference was held at Belleville between the produce dealers of the district and the wholesalers, regarding the buying of eggs. The standard of the Canadian Association was adopted.

HAVELOCK HAPPENINGS

Havelock, Feb. 25. — Mr. Teddy Pace of Codova was in town on Saturday.

The Trent River hockey team journeyed over to Campbellford on Thursday of last week to play Hoard's team their return game and were defeated by a score of 5-2. The game would not have been so one-sided had the opponents had their own men playing as it were, there were only two of the original team on. The remainder of the team consisted of players from Stirling and Campbellford.

Sunday afternoon's lecture at the town hall was well attended. Mr. L. F. Zink, of New York, formerly of Australia, travels under the auspices of the International Bible Students' Association. He spoke here on "The Golden Age," from the Bible viewpoint. He is of pleasing address, and the audience gave him very close attention.

The village of Havelock has received figures from the Hydro Electric Commission of Ontario in regard to the electric lighting system. The letter apparently entails our sister village, Norwood, going in with us on the project, and whether they are considering the matter or not we are unable to state as yet. We fancy, however, that the Hydro Commission will need to submit further information before the council will be able to decide intelligently just what to do.

The annual "at home" of the Masonic Lodge in the town hall Monday night was, as usual, a huge success, and was largely attended by the members and their families and sweethearts. Progressive euchre was the main amusement of the evening, the winners being Mrs. F. C. Butters and Mr. L. Cuthbertson, while Mrs. Ray Phillips and Mr. Robert Chambers were awarded the consolation trophies. A good program was rendered and dainty refreshments served.

We are very sorry to learn of the death of Mr. Claude Watson of Trent River. Mr. Watson was well known around town and in the locality. Mr. Watson had been a cheese maker at Trent River ever since he was a boy.

The laymen's missionary banquet proved to be a great success, despite the inclemency of the weather. In all, there were about 150 men from town and the surrounding country in attendance, many coming from Cordova, Trent River, Blairton and points further north. The banquet arrangements were perfect, and every one who attended enjoyed himself immensely and went home with his mind full of new-found facts of the urgent need and importance of missionary work, so eloquently described and expressed by Rev. Mr. Armstrong and Rev. Mr. Arnup, associate secretary and assistant secretary of the Foreign Mission Society. Mr. C. A. Ghent, town, was chairman for the evening, and certainly did himself justice in this respect. Reeve Dr. H. C. Kindred sang a most acceptable patriotic song, and the only other music was the singing of the two old mission hymns, "From Greenland's Icy Mountains" and "Onward, Christian Soldiers." The banquet closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

The Havelock senior hockey team journeyed to Campbellford Monday to give battle to the Campbellford seven, but the game was called off on account of there being no ice.

The Norwood junior hockey team visited the local team here on Thursday of last week. After playing 30 minutes overtime the tie could not be broken so the game was called off, to be played some time in the near future. At the close of the game the score was 4 to 4. The game was clean and fast throughout. Mr. Bill Foster of town refereed the game in a satisfactory manner.

NORWOOD NEWS NOTES

Norwood, Feb. 24.—The village auditors are at work this week going over the books of the village and school board treasurers.

Patriotism and production is the heading on an attractive sheet which has been posted up throughout this district under the supervision of the local representatives of the Ontario Department of Arguculture, Mr. F. C. McRae and Mr. McDowell. These posters announce a patriotic meeting to be held in the town hall here on Thursday, February 25th, afternoon and evening. The movement is part of a general effort being made throughout the Dominion to raise the farmers of Canada to a sense of the great need that exists for a greatly increased production by the arable lands of the Dominion. It is hoped that the farmers of this section will respond patriotically to the appeal and at least attend the conference and learn in what manner they may, without inconvenience to themselves, help the general cause. The Department of Agriculture of Ontario and the Dominion are behind the movement both of which are expending large sums annually in the effort to instruct and thus improve not only the condition but also the profits of the people who constitute the backbone of our fair Dominion.

The carnival at the Norwood skating rink last Friday night was in every way a success. A large crowd attended and the competition for the prizes was very keen. The weather was just right.

Miss Gadys Stephenson of Hastings spent Saturday and Sunday last visiting her aunt, Mrs. E. J. Laing.

Miss Bill Howson of Keene visited friends in Norwood on Sunday.

Special missionary sermons were preached in the Methodist Church here on Sunday last by Rev. C. G. Williams who lectured here some few weeks ago, his subject being Sea Life on Board a Man-o-war. Mr. Williams spent several years in the British navy and his lecture was so well received that the Epworth League secured his services on Monday evening of this week. The lecture in the church on Monday evening of this week was much appreciated by those who were privileged to hear it.

Pte. Blatchford of Havelock Now in Hospital

(Havelock Standard.)

The following interesting letter from Private Blatchford of the "Princess Pats" was received last week by Mr. Isaac Barlow:—

Military Hospital, Princess St.,
Manchester.

Dear Ike.

Just a line to let you know I am all right. I have suffered a slight reverse by Mr. German, necessitating an operation, but hope to be soon fit again. I guess you would like to know a little what it is like. Well I am not much good at explaining things but here goes. First of all you generally have to march 6 miles to get to the trenches, of course in the night. As you get near you come under fire and believe me you get that used to it that you take not much notice of it. Of course after all its a great game of chance as anyone of those bullets could hit you but somehow miss, which makes the games worth playing. Well after a time you get to your trenches and meet a very tired bunch of fellows coming out, who you are relieving. When you get inside you just sit down and the mud does the rest. It's not a bit of good trying to escape as the mud and water are everywhere, so you just make the best of it. In places fellows step in to their necks and have to be dug out. Also when there is no time to bury the dead they are left in a hole made by the shells, and you would be surprised how quickly they disappear. Dead Frenchmen are everywhere and I am sure in the summer that things will begin to buzz. I have had a couple of narrow squeaks and had just left Capt. Newton when he got shot. That was one, and the other was when a stone thrown up by a shell hit the wrist watch given me by the good people of Havelock, taking the front away. How I happened to get hurt was in coming out of the trench. We had been heavily shelled all day and the going was not pleasant. How would you like it, Ike, to be sitting behind a couple of feet of dirt waiting for a bullet to hit and then——. Well, that is the game, Ike, in the day time and the worst of it is you can't hit back, but leave that to our own artillery, who I must say are pretty good at it. Each shell leaves a hole big enough to put a horse in. We had just laid a couple of our fellows in who had been killed and in avoiding them I got in another one and twisted myself a little. Well I guess this letter is not very intelligible but I will tell you better when I come back if I have the luck. Give my respects to all friends.

Yours sincerely,
Pte. A. BLATCHFORD,

ADVANCE OF FOE BLOCKED

Russians Have Frustrated New German Plan of Attack.

Von Hindenburg Has Nearly a Million Men Along His New Front, But His Position is Handicapped by Russian Seizure of Important Points.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The important change that has come over the campaign in Poland can best be gauged by the military estimates of the present disposition of the German forces. They are believed to have barely 300,000 men stationed at selected points outside of the old positions along the Bzura and the Rawka rivers, where the Russians are proceeding steadily with the destruction of the enemy's elaborate underground cover. Von Hindenburg has now in the north from Wloclawek, stretching eastward about parallel with his front, nearly a million men, divided into four armies. These are spread along 180 miles of front to near the Niemen. He has completely reversed the plan which failed against the Bzura and Rawka. Ten weeks' desperate onslaught upon that narrow front convinced him by discounting his most appalling losses that nothing was to be gained by the throwing of great masses of troops in front in all his attacks against the Russians. He reconstituted his main eastern army and spread it over a front where there is ample space to deploy, but he is handicapped by the extreme scarcity of railways and by the fact that the Russians here have already seized and held the positions essential to his plan. One of these positions is Przasnysz, which obstructs the chief rendezvous for the new arrivals across the border railway from Prussia. Another is Evdabno, which prevents the Germans from getting near Bobr, between the fortresses of Ossowiec and Lomza. The Germans have to accept the present position largely against their will.

A wireless report from Berlin says that further obstacles have arisen to prevent the invasion of Russia, and this would seem to confirm reports from Petrograd that the Russians are making a successful stand against the invaders along their fortress lines on the northern rivers.

The Russians, from all accounts, are holding back the Austrians in Bukowina, and it is stated in an official despatch that they have occupied the important railway centre of Stanislau.

There has been little or no change in the Carpathians, where fighting of the most severe character has been going on for nearly two months.

A despatch to The Daily Telegraph from Petrograd says:

"The Russian military leaders expect that a considerable portion of the Russian 20th army corps will succeed in fighting its way out of East Prussia and rejoin the main Russian forces. These hopes are based on the continual arrival of small detachments of the troops, who have extricated themselves from the forest labyrinths.

In the fighting in France the battle of Champagne continues with unabated fury, with the French troops steadily pressing back the Germans and making considerable progress north of Mesnil. Operations near Perthes are calculated to relieve the City of Rheims, which has been suffering terribly from the German bombardment.

Northwest of Verdun the French have gained considerable success. At Les Eparges, where fighting has been violent for the past several days in an attempt to drive back the French from the ground that they gained last week, the French are coming out victorious. They have inflicted serious losses on the enemy, who left 600 dead on a small section of line held by Joffre's troops. Prisoners report that two German regiments, 6,000 strong, which were driven from their positions, lost 3,000 men, or half their strength.

The forest of Apremont is still the theatre for an extensive struggle, in which the Germans have been partially driven from the stage. Progress is reported from Bois Brule.

Spirited artillery engagements from the Lys to the Aisne have resulted favorably to the allies.

FIELD KITCHENS FOR BATTALION

Would Provide Soldiers With Hot Meals

Mayor Buller has received a circular letter from S. M. Gray, captain No. 3 Comapny, C. E. F., Kingston, asking for assistance towards providing the 21st Battalion with field kitchens and other equipment not supplied by the Government.

Field kitchens form a very necessary part of an army's equipment, as the soldiers are assured hot meals at all times, and it has been proven that the efficiency of the men has been greater when the equipment included these field kitchens.

Thus, to provide the battalion, would entail an expenditure of $3,000. Mr. T. F. Matthews has the matter in hand and he will doubtless be glad to add any further information.

"English Scoundrelism."

BERLIN, Feb. 25.—(By wireless.)—Berlin newspapers yesterday charge that Capt. Smith of the American steamer Evelyn was purposely given wrong direction by British warships in order that the vessel might be sunk by German mines, with the hope that friction would result between the United States and Germany.

Diemorgen Post refers to this act as "an English scoundrelism" and asserts an English officer directed the American captain into a field where he knew German mines lay.

INCIDENTS PRECEDING FATAL

ton to extend the bail for Grose over till today. This His Lordship refused despite the fact that counsel advanced the argument that the Attorney General had granted bail when Grose was charged with murder. Grose spent the night in the jail.

This Morning's Evidence.

The first witness called this morning upon the resumption of the Grose trial was Knute Belting, proprietor of Yeotes' pool room. He gave testimony to the effect that O'Brien was in the pool room on the night of December 24th last and was apparently sober. He had a drink or two in him but was not drunk. In answer to question from Mr. Gordon witness said O'Brien had apparently been drinking.

Dr. Gallivan, who gave evidence at yesterday's sitting was again called. The enlarged thyroid gland was of the goitre disease which in serious cases causes suffocation. He thought it was improbable, though possible, for a rupture in a blood vessel to be caused by O'Brien being thrown against the wall.

"Could blood be in the covers of the brain as in this case without a blow being struck?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"Yes."

"Under what conditions?"

"Where blood vessels were diseased."

"Were blood vessels diseased in this case?"

"No."

"Would intoxication cause an increase in the blood pressure?"

"Yes, to a certain extent."

"In this case do you think the abnormally soft brain tissue had anything to do with the hemorrhage?"

"I could not say one way or the other."

"Would the tearing loose of a collar increase the blood pressure?"

"I don't think so."

In witness's examination of the skull no wounds or marks were found. The scar on the neck indicated an operation for tubercular trouble.

In answer to Mr. Shaver, Dr. Gallivan stated that in O'Brien's case the thyroid glands were sufficiently enlarged to stop respiration with a little pressure.

"If O'Brien was not interfered with, would respiration be shut off?"

"No."

Witness further stated that so far as he knew O'Brien's respiration had not been shut off.

"Are diseased glands of the neck frequent or infrequent?" asked the prosecuting attorney.

"Frequent."

Dr. Eastwood who followed Dr. Gallivan to the witness stand gave testimony to the effect that it might be possible for the hemorrhage O'Brien had, to be caused without external violence. If deceased had grappled or struggled with a man he might have caused the rupture. In O'Brien's case the walls of the wind pipe were weakened through the thyroid glands being enlarged.

Toronto Coroner Testifies.

Dr. Jukes Johnston, chief coroner for the city of Toronto, was next called. He was instructed by the Attorney General's Department to make an investigation into this case. He found the deceased came to his death by suffocation. His evidence as to the enlarged thyroid glands was similar to Dr. Gallivan's and Dr. Eastwood's. There was no disease in the brain or in the blood vessels of the brain. It is possible for a blood vessel in the brain to give way through external force. If force was applied to the top of the head, there should or must be a mark on the scalp.

It is sometimes the case that a blow is struck on the front of the jaw and a rupture caused, in the brain. This sometimes occurs in prize fights. Answering to Mr. Shaver, witness said that he would claim O'Brien's death due to shocking. O'Brien's windpipe was in such a condition that it would be a simple matter for his respiration to be shut off. As to the heart, Dr. Johnston said that it could be eliminated as there was no disease there.

Answering Mr. Gordon, witness said that a blow on the back of the head might cause a rupture of a blood vessel. He also knew of cases where a collar had choked a man to death.

This concluded the evidence of the crown.

For the Defence.

The first witness for the defence was Thomas McWilliams who recalled seeing O'Brien and Grose in a shoe shine parlor about the last week of November. Grose was in a chair and he (McWilliams) was sitting beside him. O'Brien passed out of the pool room to the street and he turned back and said to Grose "You're telling around you can put it over me." Grose denied this and also denied calling O'Brien any names. O'Brien's parting remarks were that "he could lick Grose in two minutes."

The Prisoner.

Edgar Grose, the accused, then took the stand. He said he was 26 years of age and resided with his mother. By occupation he was a hack driver. Last winter and this fall he has been laid up with jaundice. On the night of December 24th last he was in the White House and said William O'Brien. He also recalled the conversation he had with Clancy and O'Heron in front of Kingan's hardware store about a month previous. He had his cap pulled down over his eyes as his eyes were sore. Clancy said, "What's the matter?" and he (Grose) told him he got a beating the night before which he did not deserve. Clancy asked what caused it and Grose said nothing caused it, but that O'Brien was urged on.

Clancy remarked that he didn't know anything about it as he had gone home. Grose said that O'Brien ought to suffer for it and Clancy said Grose couldn't make O'Brien suffer. Grose said he would bet fifty dollars he could. O'Heron broke into the conversation at this point and said, "Oh cut the fighting. It's no good." To this Grose said "No it isn't any good."

As to the night in Yeotes' pool room, Grose said he told O'Brien he didn't want to have anything to do with him.

Grose's version of the occurrence in the White House on Christmas eve was, "I was coming out of the lavatory and met O'Brien. He said "You got arrested eh?" I said "I never got arrested." He said he saw me going over with Doc. McGee. He put up his foot or knee and grabbed me by the arm. I shoved him off with my hands. He fell back against the wall and pulled me with him. I thought he was going to strike me and I wanted to get away from him. When we fell against the wall I shoved him away again but he didn't have such a hold the second time."

"Did he strike you?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"Yes right here," said Grose, pointing to his groin.

After he shoved O'Brien away the second time Chris. Graham came in and separated them.

"Had you been drinking?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"I had three drinks and a cigar."

"What were you drinking?"

"Lager."

All Grose could recall Graham saying was "You fellows will have to get out of here," this is no dive." After he went out Grose proceeded to the barber shop on George Street and had a shave. He then went to the Grand Hotel and into the lavatory. He did not know O'Brien had died till early the next morning. He was told about it in Millbrook. He came back to the city and gave himself up.

The first question put to Grose by Mr. Shaver was "How long is it since you were married?"

"Six years."

"How long have you been separated from your wife?"

The Bench ruled that the question could not be admitted.

Grose then proceeded to tell Mr. Shaver what happened the night of December 24th after he left the barber shop. He was in the Grand Hotel and he met a man whom he did not know. The man asked him to get into his sleigh and get away with him as they would want to fight with him again. He did not know at the time that O'Brien was dead.

Grose denied hearing anything of O'Brien's death while in the barber shop.

"Do you remember making a statement to the Chief of Police?" asked Mr. Shaver.

"No."

"Did you make any statement to the Chief of Police?"

"Yes, once."

"Do you deny making a statement to the Chief to the effect that you heard O'Brien died while you were in the barber shop?"

"I do deny it."

"You went to Nixon's Hotel after you left the barber shop?"

"Yes."

"Did you hear in Nixon's that O'Brien was dead?"

"No."

"Have you stated to the Chief that you heard of O'Brien's death while in Nixon's?"

"No."

"How long were you in Nixon's?"

"I went in and came right out."

Grose said he drove with the man who asked him to get into the sleigh until he came to what is known as the Cheese Factory corners. There he found out where he was and got out of the sleigh. He made across country for Millbrook. In his opinion Millbrook was some 17 miles from Peterborough and the Cheese Factory corners was about 8 miles. He got to Millbrook about 5.30 the next morning and went to Billie Leath's who is a friend of his. As it was so near morning he (Grose) thought he would remain up till Leath got up so he went to the stable. Later he met Leath as the latter was coming out of his house.

"Do you deny that you were found asleep in the stable?" asked the crown attorney.

"Yes, I do."

He Walked to City.

Grose went on to state how that when he heard O'Brien was dead he started to walk back, arriving in Peterborough about three o'clock in the afternoon. He gave himself up about eight-ten that night. As to the statement he made to P. C. Kidd, Grose remarked "I didn't tell Kidd all I knew about this case."

Mr. Shaver again questioned Grose as to him striking O'Brien the time they met in the White House on December 24th. Grose said he struck O'Brien with the heels of his hands and O'Brien grabbed him by the arms. When he pushed O'Brien he fell against the wall and pulled him after him.

"He went against the wall with force did he?"

"Yes."

"How hard?"

"Well you could hear it."

"His head struck the wall?"

"Yes."

"Were you sober?" asked Mr. Shaver.

"Three drinks wouldn't make me drunk."

"That's not my question. Were you sober?"

"Yes."

Witness said he thought O'Brien was drunk the way he went after him. He had not however seen him drink.

"You said you got a blow in the groin?"

"Yes."

"Before he grabbed you?"

"Yes."

"You shoved him before he grabbed you?"

"Yes."

Witness again was questioned about the night in Yeotes', and he said that O'Brien was drunk. "Whenever O'Brien had anything to do with me," said Grose, "he had liquor in him. Whenever he was sober, he was good to me."

Denied Statement

Examined as to what he thought of the evidence given by Clancy and O'Heron, Grose said that in part it was false. He wished to deny evidence given by O'Heron and Clancy as to what he said in front of Kingan's hardware store.

"You wish to deny that you said you'd get O'Brien and get him right, do you?" asked Mr. Shaver.

"I do."

"You wish to deny all that?"

"I do."

Dr. Johnston testified that he knew Grose since he was eight years old, and his reputation was good.

Samuel English knew Grose for a number of years, and so far as he could say his reputation was good.

License Inspector Joseph Stewart knew Grose from childhood, and as far as he knew, Grose's reputation was good.

Mayor Buller also knew Grose and said his reputation was good.

"How many times have you heard the character of Grose discussed?" asked Mr. Shaver.

"Many times."

"When was the last time prior to December 24th?"

"About five years ago."

Joseph Batten also testified that Grose's reputation was good.

This concluded the defence.

Chief Thompson

Chief Thompson was then called by Mr. Shaver. Mr. Gordon submitted to the bench that Chief Thompson's evidence should not be admitted and further pointed out that Grose's evidence about the statements made to the Chief could not be contradicted because Mr. Shaver had only used general terms. In criminal cases the time and place must be stated. Mr. Gordon also said that Chief Thompson was assistant prosecutor. The chief remarked that he had only laid the information.

"Well, you've sat behind my learned friend and suggested to him all through the trial, have you not?" asked Mr. Gordon. "I was only endeavoring to bring out fact," answered the Chief.

"Well, you didn't help me to bring out any facts, did you?"

"No; that is not customary. You didn't ask me."

"You didn't say anything about those statements previous to today, did you?" asked Mr. Gordon.

The Chief answered in the negative.

The Bench ruled that the Chief could give evidence, and he proceeded to tell how Grose had told him on December 26th that the reason he left the city on December 24th was because he was excited. He also stated that a man had come into the barber shop and told him that O'Brien was dead. After that he and a friend named Gilgour went into the Grand Hotel, and then Grose got into the sleigh.

This concluded all the evidence and the court adjourned till one-forty-five.

Address to Jury

At two o'clock Mr. Gordon commenced his address to the jury. He drew attention to the smaller physique of Grose compared to that of the late William O'Brien. He recalled the evidence that had been adduced to show that amicable relations existed between Grose and O'Brien after the altercation in East City. He dwelt upon the actions of Clancy, as shown in the evidence, in stirring up feelings of animosity against his client. He described the scuffle which took place in the hotel between the two. He submitted that Grose had done a natural and instinctive act in shoving O'Brien back, and had plainly been endeavoring to free himself from an expected attack, and was only seeking to defend himself.

Taking up the physicians' evidence he emphasized Dr. Gallivan had admitted that O'Brien might have had disease of the arteries, which was corroborated by the evidence of Dr. Eastwood, and that the hemorrhage might have resulted from that source.

Referring to his flight, Mr. Gordon seemed to introduce one of the best arguments for acquittal on showing that Grose had walked directly back to Peterborough from Millbrook upon being informed that O'Brien was dead.

He stated that Grose was entitled to the benefit of doubt as to how O'Brien came to his death, and that there was reasonable doubt attached to the death. It was a misadventure and an accident, and Edgar Grose should be acquitted, if there was a doubt in their minds as to how O'Brien came to his death.

G. N. Shaver, crown prosecutor, stated that he was not prosecuting Grose, but was endeavoring to assist the jury in arriving at a correct verdict. Grose had been ably, eloquently, exceptionally well defended.

Mr. Shaver, however, dwelt with considerable intensity upon the action of Grose, who, upon being informed of O'Brien's death, deliberately went to the Grand Hotel, entered a conveyance with a man he knew, drove eight miles to the cheese factory, left the cutter and walked eight miles across country to Millbrook. As far as the evidence was concerned, Mr. Shaver said he felt he would be safe in going to the jury on the evidence of Grose himself. His widely different story and conflicting statements were sufficiently damaging. Two men went into that hotel. One was in the court room. The other was in the great beyond. He considered that the story of the two wrestling without Grose's knee striking O'Brien was impossible. The evidence showed that it was the grip of Grose upon O'Brien that had to be broken, and not that of O'Brien. It also showed that O'Brien's head had been forced against the wall with a good resounding noise.

In regard to Dr. Johnston's evidence, Mr Shaver said it went to show that O'Brien died as the result of violence. There could not be the slightest shadow of doubt but that the occurrence which took place in the White House was the cause of O'Brien's death.

With regard to Mr. Gordon's argument that self-defence was a justification, Mr. Shaver asked where was the evidence that O'Brien had been the offender. Even if it had been in self-defence, where did the justification for it come in? Grose had not been struck. Every indication found upon deceased showed that he had died from violence. Two men engaged in a conflict. One man dies. That must be manslaughter. It does not matter what was the intent. Mr. Shaver said he was not touching upon the sentimental side of the whole matter. He was dealing with hard, cold facts. He was approaching them on the facts of the evidence and with the feeling that the public must be protected.

Mr Shaver wound up his address shortly after 3 o'clock, and immediately after Justice Britton commenced his address.

THE JUDGE'S REMARKS.

Justice Britton said that the interests of society demanded that when a life was taken, a full investigation be undertaken. Trials of such character should be given all serious attention instead of being a mere traversity of justice as many trials were.

In his experience which extended over a good many years he had found that not so many innocent men were convicted as there were guilty men let go.

The question that they should take into the jury room with them was Grose doing an unlawful act and not whether he was a good fellow or not. The question was did anything that occurred between O'Brien and Grose cause death, regardless of any condition of his windpipe which the evidence showed was in a lax condition.

"If you come to the conclusion that death did not come as a result of anything the prisoner did why then the case is ended."

Manslaughter was something in which the judge was given the very widest scope, and especially singled out from other offences. Manslaughter could be punished by imprisonment for one day or for life.

In such a case character did not count so much, for every man was considered good until he was bad in the eyes of the law.

Justice Britton's words were inclined to discount the theory advanced by the defence that Grose was merely pulled off by Graham because he was the closest to him. If Grose raised his foot or knee it was more likely that he struck O'Brien in the groin by his foot or knee than by a fist.

The jury retired at 3.35.

ASK GOVERNMENT FOR AID IN ERECTING NEW BRIDGE

Would be Located About One Mile Below Locks Bridge

Reeve Kindred and members of the county council will wait on the Dominion Government during the present session, to learn if aid can be secured for a new bridge which it is proposed to erect across the Otonabee River, about one mile below the Peterborough Locks bridge.

It is estimated that a bridge suitable for ordinary traffic could be built for between $17,000 and $18,000. The council would contribute 40 per cent. of the cost and expect that the city will also give financial aid, since the bridge would be, to more or less extent, of benefit to the city. It is claimed that the structure would be of immense benefit to the townships of Otonabee and South Monaghan.

The council have other matters which they wish to bring before the department.

Deer River Bridge.

The joint meeting of the committees from the Peterborough and Hastings counties, which met at Deer River bridge, north of Cordova, and which included Reeve Griffith of Belmont, decided to put in steel stringers and the contract for this was given at $800. The work of repairing the abutments, covering the bridge, etc., was left to Reeve Griffith of Belmont and Reeve Laycock of Marmora township.

THE CZAR'S LETTER

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

In 1862 Napoleon III., who had a scheme in his head for his Mexican empire, was anxious to make a catspaw of England by inducing her to join him in breaking up the American republic. The Emperor Alexander of Russia, jealous of England's growing commercial power, did not propose that she should profit by the troubles in the United States and, believing that she would not intervene without Napoleon's assistance, determined to prevent if possible the Anglo-French intervention.

"Tell your master," said Alexander to the French ambassador, "that if he interferes in America I will strike him."

Now, the emperor was not sure that Napoleon would inform the English government of this threat. He was committed in his Mexican scheme and would proceed despite the czar's protest. England once having entered the scheme could not well withdraw. Napoleon was at the time in conference with the British ambassador to France, and the alliance was about to be perfected.

One day the American minister at St. Petersburg was called to the imperial palace and when he returned to the embassy called the second secretary of legation into his private office and, handing him a paper, said to him:

"This document is a communication to me from the czar expressing his friendliness for the United States and declaring that if the Emperor Napoleon intervenes in the struggle going on there he will make war upon France. It is essential that this document be shown to the British premier with the least possible delay. St. Petersburg is full of the Emperor Napoleon's spies, and it is quite likely that these facts are known to them. There is little doubt that they will put every obstacle in your way to delay your arrival in England till after the Anglo-French alliance has been effected between the two countries. They may also try to obtain possession of the document you bear. Go to London as quickly as possible and do not sleep till you are on the channel."

George Carey, armed with a 42 caliber revolver, made his preparations to leave by the next train at 6 p. m. Expecting that he might be watched and delayed on his way to the station, he called a cab an hour before train time. He knew the shortest route and soon saw that he was being driven in another direction. Tapping on the glass window that separated him from the driver, he appeared to the latter pointing a cocked revolver at him.

"Drive straight to the station," he said.

This had the proper effect, and Carey reached the train half an hour before leaving time. This was unfortunate, for it gave those in the pay of the French emperor plenty of time to make their arrangements with regard to him.

The emissary was put by an official (bribed) into a compartment where there was no one but a girl. The train had no sooner started than she began to puff a cigarette. Carey knew by its odor that it was drugged and tried to open the window. It had been secured. He at once broke the glass with the butt of his revolver.

When Carey passed the border into Germany he was very sleepy and dropped into a slumber in spite of his efforts to keep awake. His suit case was in the rack, and when he awoke, after the train had stopped several times, he noticed that the case was not there. He was troubled only at the loss of toilet articles and a change of clothing, for the czar's letter was under a linen band around his body.

Carey believed that the chain of spies watching him would expect him to pass through Belgium. He therefore concluded to go through France. His bold stroke was successful, and he was not disturbed, passing even through Paris and reaching Calais without adventure. His traveling by an unexpected route threw the cordon of persons watching him completely off the track, and he was not located by them again till he reached Calais.

He was leaving his train at Calais to go aboard the boat for Dover when a man stepped up to him and asked if he were George Carey. Carey, who knew very well that he was spotted, admitted that he was, but in a tone to indicate that he would brook no interference. The man displayed a shield and, producing a paper, began to read a warrant for his arrest on a charge of sedition against the government.

Meanwhile the passengers were passing from the train to the boat. Carey stood listening to the warrant, one eye on the travelers and the boat, the other on the person whom he knew to be personating an officer of the law. When the last passenger had passed over the gangway the American knocked the Frenchman down and ran for the boat. It had left the dock, but Carey cleared the gap of ten feet without difficulty.

A couple of hours on the channel and a few more in a train and Carey reached London. He had no baggage to bother him and took a cab at once for Downing street. There he got into communication with the British premier and was rejoiced to hear that the Anglo-French alliance had not yet been perfected. Producing the czar's letter, Carey went to a hotel and slept for forty-eight hours without waking.

New Bank President

Peleg Howland's Father Launched the Imperial in 1875

In a sense it is a highly fitting thing that the presidency of the Imperial Bank should come to Peleg Howland. The bank probably owes its existence to the energy and financial ability of his father, the late H. S. Howland. It was he who managed to launch it in 1875, after two years had been spent in fruitless endeavor to raise sufficient capital, and it was he who remained at its head for twenty-seven years. The son himself was the first junior on the bank's staff, and ever since has been identified either directly or indirectly with the management of the institution. It is largely Howland's Bank, and as such it is quite desirable that a Howland should be its president again.

The Howland family have had a long and honorable connection with Toronto. The preceding generation—that to which H. S. Howland belonged—came to Canada from New York State towards the middle of the last century. They were of English descent, though long settled in America. Indeed, a Howland had come over on the Mayflower, though it is understood that he was not the forbear of the Toronto branch of the family. At any rate, the Howlands made homes for themselves in New England, where there are still plenty of the name.

The four members of the family who crossed the border from New York were William P., H. S., Peleg, and F. A. Howland. They went first to Brampton, but shortly after sought other places of abode. William P. Howland bought a flour mill at Lambton, said to have been the second mill in York County; and H. S. Howland entered the milling business at Kleinburg. Peleg and F. A. Howland followed William to Lambton. With these two villages, Kleinburg and Lambton, the fortunes of the family were for some years associated.

Both William P. Howland and his brother, H. S. Howland, removed to Toronto a good many years ago, the former to enter the wholesale grocery, grain and feed business, and the latter to establish the wholesale hardware business which still bears his name. William P. Howland was a man of considerable prominence politically. He represented West York at Confederation and became a member of the Government at Ottawa. The following year he was named Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, and held office as such until 1873. Two of his sons, W. H. Howland and O. A. Howland, served terms as mayors of Toronto, and the latter also was elected to the Legislature.

Peleg Howland himself was the second son of the late H. S. Howland, and was born while the latter was living at Kleinburg. His first work after leaving school was as a clerk in the new Imperial Bank. After that he became associated with the hardware business, in which he is still engaged. He has served his term as president of the Board of Trade, and has been president of the Wholesale Hardware Association, both positions calling for the exercise of special administrative ability.

He is a man who differs appreciably from the ordinary type of business man. There is a certain culture and refinement, both of mind and manner, about him, that is more usually associated with the professional man. His disposition is retiring, his habits modest, and his personality entirely unassuming. Withal he is extremely well read and thoroughly posted on more than financial and commercial conditions.

Three Ages.

The Berlin botanical gardens, says Lustige Blatter, are wonderfully beautiful, but to small children they are a forbidden paradise. Boys and girls under ten are not permitted to enter.

Herr and Frau Muller found this out to their disappointment when they planned to take their little Paul on a Sunday trip to view the beautiful gardens. Nevertheless they gave their young hopeful a few instructions and started out. At the gate the porter stopped the young Muller. "How old are you?" he inquired. Paul answered, "Six for the electrics; really eight; for the botanical gardens, ten."

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 24.—Wheat opened under some little excitement this morning at $1.53, ranging to $1.54⅜, and July at $1.54¾. A sharp upturn occurred, and May was sold previous to noon as high as $1.56 and July at $1.53¾. Trading was not heavy in futures, and opinions expressed were in effect that yesterday's had been oversold. Oats opened ¼c to ⅜c higher and advanced fractionally later, with a strong undertone.

Cash demand while not so good as yesterday was fair. Oats were fair, while offerings of all grades lessened perceptibly.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Feb. 24.—The demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat was better today, and as cables were stronger at an advance in prices, sales of several loads were made, but owing to the scarcity of ocean grain room for March and April shipments from Canadian winter ports the volume of business was checked to some extent. There was no further change in the condition of the local market for coarse grains, except that the feeling is firmer. The demand for all lines was quiet.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Feb. 24.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market receipts of live stock for the week ending Feb. 20 were 1085 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 1690 hogs and 300 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 300 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 450 hogs and 250 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle, owing to the fact that supplies were very small, but they were ample to fill all immediate requirements, as the demand was light, and only for small lots, on account of the continued unfavorable weather for the season of the year. The trade on the whole was quiet, with sales of a few choice steers at $7.50 to $7.75, good at $7 to $7.25; fair at $6 to $6.50, and lower grades at $5 to $5.30, while butchers' cows brought from $4.55 to $6.50, and bulls at from $5 to $6.75 per hundred pounds. The trade in canning stock was quiet, at $3.75 to $4.70 per hundred pounds.

The tone of the market for small meats is firm, on account of the very limited supplies coming forward for which there is a good demand, and sales of lambs were made at $8.25 to $9, and sheep at $4.75 to $5.50 per hundred pounds. There is also a good demand for calves at prices ranging from $6 to $15 each, as to size and quality. A weaker feeling developed in the market for hogs, and prices scored a further decline of 25c per hundred pounds with sales of selected lots at $8 to $8.25 per hundred pounds, weighed off cars.

Home Use of Pulp.

Sixty-four pulp mills in Canada report a total consumption, in 1913, of 1,109,034 cords of pulpwood. Nearly an equal amount was exported to the United States in an unmanufactured condition. Thus, for the first time in the history of the industry, more than half of the pulpwood produced in Canada was manufactured into pulp in Canadian pulp-mills.

Quebec leads in the consumption of pulpwood, followed, in the order named, by Ontario, British Columbia, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. As the pulp industry on the Pacific coast is still in its infancy, steady increase in British Columbia may be expected. Over two-thirds of the wood used for pulp was spruce, and one-fourth balsam fir. The percentage of fir used has increased steadily, as the prejudice against this wood has been overcome. Jack-pine is also beginning to be a factor, though still a small one, less than 20,000 cords being reported as manufactured in 1913.

CASE OF TETRAULT TO BE FURTHER INVESTIGATED

Matter Has Been Placed in Hands of County Crown Attorney Hatten

TORONTO, Feb. 25. — Secretary W. A. Hewitt, on behalf of the Ontario Hockey Association, has written to the Peterborough Hockey Club, asking for the explanation for playing Joe Tetrault, the professional hockey player, under the name of Joe Moinse.

Tetrault was identified when he turned out with the Shamrocks after Peterborough were beaten in their O. H. A. group series.

The matter has also been placed in the hands of County Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton of Peterborough, who has advised the O. H. A. that he will locate Tetrault alias Moinse and immediately lay information against the player on a charge of fraud. Tetrault to date has not been located.

Tetrault was a member of the Wanderer team two years ago. Sammy Lichtenhein farmed him out to the Maritime League. He dropped out of sight for a time, but turned up this winter with the Peterborough club in the intermediate O. H. A. Some of his former comrades in the N. H. A. identified Tetrault and he appeared before the O. H. A. governors, denying that he had ever played professional hockey. He escaped until he signed with Shamrocks.

"Jeff" Tesreau Settled Jilted Girl's Suit

NEW YORK, Feb. 25. — The $25,000 breach of promise suit brought against Jeff Tesreau, the Giant pitcher, by Miss Clara Young, of Perryville, Mo., was compromised yesterday through the payment by Tesreau of a sum of money which counsel for Miss Young said was entirely satisfactory to her. The attorneys then got Supreme Court Justice Page to sign an order discontinuing the suit. Counsel refused to disclose the actual terms of the settlement.

FIGHT MAY BE HELD MARCH 17

There Isn't a Chance to Jack Johnson to go to Mexico

EL PASO, Feb. 25. — Willard has no hope of the fight with Jack Johnson being pulled off here. He has stoped training, giving the excuse that he does not want to go stale. He will not take up the hard work of conditioning himself until he finds out where the fight will take place. If Johnson comes to Mexico, the cowboy will start in again. Jack Curley says the fight will be pulled off in Juarez on March 17th — but he is the only one who thinks so.

Tom Flanagan, of Toronto, who was preparing to leave for Juarez to look after Johnson's interests, received the following wire last night:

Havana, Feb. 24, 1915. — Will fight Willard here. It will draw as much as the Jeffries-Johnson fight. There isn't a chance for me to go to Mexico.

JERSEY CITY LOSES FRANCHISE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25. — Ed. Barrow of the International League announced yesterday that he had forfeited the franchise of the Jersey City club held jointly by William S. Devery and Tom Fogarty. This drastic action was taken because it is alleged by the executive that the former ownership refused to meet contractural obligations, variously estimated at from $7500 to $15,000. A stock company is now being formed to operate the Skeeters.

LINDSAY AT VARSITY.

Toronto Varsity and Lindsay juniors will meet tonight at the Arena, Toronto, to decide which team shall go into the junior O. H. A. semi-finals. The Lindsay septette has a lead of one goal over the Collegians, but Varsity should overcome this margin. Dr. Gilfilian of Uxbridge will be referee.

WIARTON IN O.H.A. FINAL

Defeated Sarnia Last Night in the Semi-finals

WIARTON, Feb. 25. — Wiarton Sarnia locked horns here last night in the second game of the round in the semi-finals of the O. H. A. intermediate series, and Sarnia went down to defeat by 6 to 0, making the total score on the round 11 to 4 in favor of Wiarton. The game was played on rather soft ice, upon which there was considerable water. Overskating the puck was the order of the night and there was very little combination.

The game developed into individual work, and the back-checking on both sides was fierce. The Sarnia septette could not handle their sticks with one-half the skill of the Wiarton seven, and they scarcely got the puck until it would be taken away. The Wiarton defence was simply impregnable. The wing work was easily superior to that of Sarnia, while Miers and Simmie were far too good for their opponents. Wiarton now go into the finals. The team are in excellent condition, and if they do not win it will be a surprise.

The lineup:

Referee, Hancock, of Owen Sound.

A Trick With a Watch.

Borrow a watch from any person in the company and request the company to stand around you. Hold the watch up to the ear of the first in the circle and command it to go. Then demand his testimony to the fact. Remove it to the ear of the next and enjoin it to stop. Make the same request of that party, and so on through the entire party.

Explanation:—You must take care in borrowing the watch that it be a good one and goes well. Have concealed in your hand a piece of loadstone, which as soon as you apply it to the watch will occasion suspension of its movements, which a subsequent shaking and withdrawing of the magnet will restore.

No Negotiations With Cuba.

Though interested parties have made suggestions looking to a reciprocity treaty between Canada and Cuba, no direct negotiations or official correspondence on the subject have taken place, according to information in high circles of the Trade and Commerce Department at Ottawa.

Though there is a treaty of reciprocity between Cuba and the United States, the latter has no monopoly of trade, but Canada enjoys a substantial traffic. Last year she sold potatoes valued at $537,302, fish $432,357, and lumber $262,949, and many smaller items.

It is felt that to mutual advantage the trade between the two countries might be extensively developed, and there has been such a move in Cuban centres, but it is denied in Ottawa that the negotiations reported from Havana have been opened.

BIG SCORES MADE IN BASKETBALL

Good Shooting by Teams in Y.M.C.A. League

Last night's trio of games in the "Y." Basketball League gave both players and followers of the league food for thought and speculation. All six teams in last night's contests were out to win.

In the first game, between Cressmans and De Laval, the individual players seemed very evenly matched and no player on either team scored more than one basket more than his opponent. Where the Cressman team had the edge was in the fact that they have been together and had more practice. This is what tells, and it wins games. By the time the De Laval reach the second round they will be hard to beat. The first half ended with the score 16-11 in favor of Cressmans. In the second half each team scored six baskets, making the final score 28-23 in favor of Cressmans.

In the second fixture between the Excelsiors and Unknowns, the "Lofty" boys held up their name, although it must be said that the muses were certainly with them in their shooting. Long seemed to have a strangle hold on luck, scoring no less than seven of the Excelsiors' thirty-four goals. Some of these were shot from beyond centre floor. Knapman showed up well, scoring six of the baskets. For the Unknowns, Robertson, who is a veteran, was the fastest man, encouraging his team to pass the ball and work in some combination. His deadly shooting was responsible for most of the baskets.

The third clash of the night occurred between the Maple Leafs and the Boosters, the former coming out second best in a score of 22-14. This was a rattling fast game every minute of the way. By appearances, Veteran Ray Best's team had the edge all the way on Richardson's septette. Best was responsible for 16 of the 22 points netted by the Boosters.

Referee Ross Dobbin wondered if he should preserve neutrality upon seeing two of his brother veterans trying to bring home the bacon. Richardson's adipose tissue did not retard his speed, in fact speed is Bill's middle name. It looked, however, as if Best had his number all the way.

COMMENT

As You Like it

The time for making donations to the fund for the Peterborough Canadian League team has been extended till Saturday next. The committee in charge are putting forth every effort to raise the $2500, and in fact are confident that the amount can be realized. There are many who could but have not "come through," and the committee intends getting after them today and tomorrow. If you haven't put your name down, don't wait to be asked. There will be a general meeting of the former directors and fans on Saturday evening.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

MAKES A DIFFERENCE.

WE think we would enjoy the heat
And revel in July
When winter loafs around the job
It's features to supply,
Quite certain that it couldn't bring
So neatly baked a bluff
That it could overdo the thing
And make us cry "Enough!"

But when it's Johnny on the spot,
On all the spots to boot,
It in the full, minute details
Does not exactly suit,
And lucky we may call ourselves
If we have got the price
When it is running unrestrained
To trim it off with ice.

When snowballs in the air are thick
Wherever boys are near
We do not quite appreciate
A ripe one on the ear,
But when it's ninety in the shade
And humid is the air
We feel at such a time as that
We'd take it anywhere.

Around the sulky winter stove
We sit and have a chill
And think that August and its kind
Would surely fill the bill,
But when it comes with all its force
With heat blasts unconfined
It doesn't seem exactly then
The thing we had in mind.

A PAINTERS' PARADISE.

Capri's Quaint Inn, Where Poor Artists Can Get Free Board.

Capri, beautiful in itself, offers an irresistible invitation to artists, since it has an inn where any one, by painting a picture on the wall, can get free board.

To the lovely island of Capri, with its perennial summer, its blue grotto and its lemon groves, came some fifty years ago a ruined artist. He opened an inn and died rich. In his will, leaving the inn to his heirs, he made these conditions:

"The charge per day, two bottles of red Capri wine included, is never to be more than 6 francs.

"If any artist is too poor to pay he shall paint a picture upon some wall space, receiving all the accommodation accorded to those paying the highest price.

"If any German artist shall come to the inn he shall be accommodated and shall receive the amount of his fare to Germany upon his promising never to return to Italy."

The inn is conducted today on these conditions. Its walls are covered with paintings. Now and then a German artist gets his fare home.

SUN LIFE TAKES OVER FEDERAL, GOOD DEAL FOR ALL PARTIES

The event of the week is the approaching absorption of the Federal Life into the Sun. It was not merely an event. It was a sensation. Although the negotiations must have been proceeding for some time, nobody outside the Sun Life had the least idea of what was taking place.

Who It Benefits.

A few things are absolutely clear in the deal. It is a profitable arrangement for

(1) Federal Life policyholders.

(2) Federal Life shareholders.

(3) The Sun Life policyholders and shareholders.

The Saving in Expenses.

The details are not disclosed exactly so far. But approximately the result of the amalgamation will be as follows: Last year the Federal Life premiums were $1,007,545. Of this the expenses were 28.44 per cent. Under the arrangement with the Sun Life the Federal business will be temporarily kept in a separate class and administered at an expense of 10 per cent. This means to say the expenses of these premiums will be 18.44 per cent. less or a saving to Federal Life policyholders of $185,806 per annum. The increase in the Federal surplus last year was $111,000 against this figure. Federal Life policyholders will therefore probably receive very much bigger dividends immediately and when their business is finally merged into the Sun in the near future will get the Sun Life dividends.

The Different Dividends.

How much bigger the Sun Life policyholders' dividends are can be seen from the cash dividends declared last year on whole life policies. These particular dividends I give were first dividends paid at the end of a period of twenty years on life policies with premiums payable for the whole of life. The figures are as follows for $1,000 policy, the premiums being much the same in both companies.

	Federal.	Sun.
Age 25	$60	$126
Age 35	83	191
Age 45	156	339

Federal Life Shares.

As regards Federal Life shareholders the information as to the purchase price paid per share has not yet been made public. Hamilton papers stated it at $650,000 for the $130,000 paid up capital and later denied the statement. The exact figure has not yet been given to the shareholders, and it has not yet transpired whether the price is to be cash or partly cash and partly in annual profits from the Federal Life business. As the Federal surplus at the end of 1914 was $588,357, I am not disinclined to think that the shareholders will receive cash within that amount of surplus and the balance out of the earnings of the Federal business. But if the purchase price is anything approaching five years purchase it is clear that the Federal shareholders must approve the purchase, as they now only receive 10 per cent. in dividends per annum.

Where the Sun Gains.

As regards the Sun Life, too, I should imagine both shareholders and policyholders will approve of the absorption. The Sun Life will, so far as I can see, get the business eventually without any cost to its own policyholders or shareholders. The mere fact that it can administer the business immediately at 10 per cent. and save $185,806 per annum in Federal expenses will not only enable it to pay the Federal Life policyholders much bigger dividends but will make it possible for the Sun to partly recoup itself for the purchase price payable to the Federal stock. The Sun will probably also save considerable in its own expenses. By the mere growth in size of its business it should be able to administer its affairs relatively more economically. At the present moment the Sun has approximately $200,000,000 of business in force and the Federal not far short of $30,000,000. The premiums of the Sun are approximately $9,000,000 and the Federal are over $1,000,000 so that the combined premiums will be over $10,000,000 altogether.

Sun's Reducing Expenses.

Now the Federal Life business is very well concentrated. If I mistake not, its Ontario business comprises the best part and it is in the most concentrated territory in the Dominion and fits in extremely well for the purposes of the Sun Life agency organization. The Sun Life's record in expenses for the past ten years has been that with its growth in size it has reduced its expenses proportionate to its premiums. Since 1905 the Sun Life expenses have decreased over 4 per cent. of the annual premiums and the immediate addition of 11 per cent. income should enable it to make a further reduction.

Big Business From Federal Connection.

Apart from that the connection brought by the Federal business will be an excellent additional field for new business. It is a well known fact that, of all the new business obtained by any life company, anything from 33 to 75 per cent. of it comes from existing policyholders. The Sun Life therefore should be able to obtain a considerable portion of the $5,000,000 new business per annum which the Federal has done every year. That is the chief way in which the Sun Life shareholders or policyholders will benefit by the deal.

The Size of the Sun.

Sentimentally they will have the proud record of having $250,000,000 business in force, of doing by far the bigger business than any other life company in the British Empire, of being the largest Canadian company with the enormous surplus of $6,503,794 plus what no other company possesses, viz., a super-surplus of $11,000,000 investments in the shape of its contingent assets.

The Common Sense.

That is is the common sense aspect of the deal. The other aspect is a sentimental one only.—Canadian Insurance, Feb. 24, 1915.

TENSION IN HOLLAND

Queen Has Cancelled Her Trip to the Frontier

THE HAGUE, Feb. 25.—The British and French Ministers held a long conference with the Dutch Minister of Foreign Affairs yesterday. Both are reported to have transmitted messages from their respective Governments to Holland.

Queen Wilhelmina has cancelled plans for a visit of inspection to the troops on the eastern and southern frontiers, and a feeling of tension is apparent in official circles.

QUEEN WILHELMINA NAD PRINCESS JULIANA.

The failure of Germany to reply to the Dutch note in reference to the German submarine blockade is causing much unfavorable comment in Dutch newspapers, though they have been warned to avoid any expressions that might strain the relations of Holland and Germany.

The Dutch Government is considering calling to the colors the men of the 1915 class.

MANY WERE BURNED.

Lt.-Col. Halleck Testifies at Enquiry Into Boot Charges.

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—It was made evident at the resumption of the inquiry into the boots furnished to the Canadian expeditionary forces that the scope of the investigation would be enlarged and that its functions would be judicial, as well as inquisitorial.

E. M. MacDonald said that the scope of the inquiry extended to the boots furnished the second contingent as well as the first, and to boots now furnished.

Lt.-Col. Halleck, chairman of the departmental commission, said that most of the complaints of the boots had come from England. In many cases the boots had been found to be burned.

Lt.-Col. Halleck said that it would have taken the manufacturers a month to change their last for the manufacture of militia boots. Thus, if the Militia Department had changed the shape of the shoe he did not think the boots could have been secured in time.

Mr. MacDonald objected that many of the manufacturers had never before manufactured military shoes. Col. Halleck replied that some of them had used their own last, which were in certain cases better than the militia last.

PREFERENCE IS NOT IMPAIRED

Still a Margin in Favor of Britain Says Mr. Wright

MR. BURNHAM SPEAKS

OTTAWA, Feb. 25. — The House spent the greater part of the day upon the budget debate. The opening speech was made by Mr. Burnham (Con., W. Peterboro), who was followed by J. G. Turriff (Lib., Assiniboia). Mr. Wright (Con., Muskoko) moved the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. Burnham said that the Opposition speakers bad criticized the budget without suggesting any plan in lieu of it. He denounced free trade as the yellow peril and declared himself a thorough-going protectionist. The British preference, he thought, might be well decreased if thereby additional protection was given to Canadian industries.

J. G. Turriff said that when the people of this country came to understand that no part of the revenue from increased taxation would go for military purposes they would overthrow the Government. The revenue to be raised from the war stamp tax would be needed to make up the $10,000,0900 which the Finance Minister had illegally paid to the Canadian Northern Railway. Mr. Turriff then took up a number of items upon which taxation is increased, declaring that the new tariff duties would greatly burden the farmer. He was specially severe upon the increase in British duties, and dramatically warned the Government not to lay disloyal hands upon the British preference.

Mr. Wright said it was absurd to charge the Government with disloyalty, because it saw fit to raise the duty on British imports. Great Britain made her tariff to suit herself, giving no preference to the colonies, and she left Canada entirely free to make her own tariff. The preference was really not impaired, because while the general tariff was advanced 7 1-2 per cent., the preferential tariff was only advanced 5 per cent.

Deadly "Decoy Submarines.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—On their dash away from Cuxhaven, after the recent aerial raid, the British saw a German decoy submarine for the first time. They observed what appeared to be a periscope. The first impulse was to attack it, but time was precious, so its position was signalled to the next vessel in the fleeing line.

This ship was almost upon the "periscope" when the officers saw a pole standing out of the water from the centre of a submerged raft, to the sides of which were attached fifteen mines.

Serbians Invading Austria.

GENEVA, Feb. 25—Serbian troops invaded Austrian territory on the night of Feb. 20 and 21, near Bjelina, opposite Ratcha and at Mitrovitsa, penetrating from one to four miles across the frontier, according to a despatch received here. The object of the Serbian offensive, it is believed, probably is to force the Austrians to send back to the west part of the troops operating against the Russians.

The Wicklow branch of the Northumberland County Women's Institute has raised in cash and work $199 for patriotic purposes.

SOLDIERS OF THE KING

Separation allowance has been granted by the Canadian government to the dependents of volunteers serving in the Canadian Overseas Contingent as follows: Privates, $20 a month; sergeants $25 a month; warrant officers $30 a month; lieutenants, $30 a month; captains, $40 a month; majors $50 a month; lt.-colonels $60 a mouth.

"Dependents" include only:— (a) wives, (b) Children of a widower, if they are in the care of a guardian. Girls over sixteen and boys over fourteen years of age not eligible. (c) Widowed mothers, if the son is unmarried and her sole support. A certificate to this effect must be obtained from the local Patriotic Fund Committee or from a clergyman. The allowance is not payable to the dependents of a soldier who is an employe of the Dominion or any Provincial Government and in receipt of a Government salary in addition to his military pay, or who is a member of the Permanent Force.

Mr. Jas. McFarlane, of Marmora, has received a telegram from the Department of Militia at Ottawa to the effect that his son was badly wounded in action in France. No particulars were given by the telegram, but it would appear that some of the Canadians of the First Canadian Expeditionary Force were already in the thick of the fight.

Mr. McFarlane had two sons with the first contingent and one in Kingston with the quick-firing section of the 21st Battalion

CANVAS SHOES FOR TROOPS

Government Has Bought 45,000 Paris

OTTAWA, Feb. 25.—The question of slippers and shoes for the Canadian soldiers came up in the House yesterday.

Hon. Mr. Lemieux was informed that the Government had purchased 2,350 pairs of slippers for the Canadian contingents at $1.50 a pair. Forty-five thousand pairs of canvas shoes were ordered from seven firms at $2 per pair.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier enquired when the Government intended to appoint a successor to Lord Strathcona. The Premier replied that Sir George Perley had been acting since early last summer under order-in-council, and had been commissioned to make some inquiries as to certain changes in the status of the office. Until the Premier and his colleagues were able to confer with him upon this subject the present arrangement would continue.

The Premier also stated in reply to Mr. Lemieux that the Government did not intend to introduce legislation this session to reimburse the depositors of the Farmers' Bank.

Cathedral is a Wreck.

PARIS, Feb. 25. — The glorious cathedral of Notre Dame at Rheims is a wreck, according to a refugee who arrived here yesterday and told of the eleven-hour bombardment of Rheims on Monday by the Germans.

In an interview with a member of The Petit Parisien's staff, the refugee said:

"The cathedral has suffered fearfully. One tower is wholly destroyed, having been shot to pieces. One shell which fell on the roof caught between two rafters and was removed later by firemen, it having failed to explode."

Stratford Presbytery yesterday nominated Rev. Dr. D. D. McLeod, Barrie, for moderator of the next general assembly.

SENTENCE OF NINE MONTHS

Jury in Grose Trial Found Prisoner Guilty of Manslaughter

Edgar Grose was found guilty of manslaughter by a jury yesterday afternoon at four forty-five and at seven o'clock in the evening was sentenced to nine months' confinement in the common jail. His Lordship Justice Britton spoke briefly in passing judgment but what he said was to the point. As the court heard his sentence, a noticeable stir arose within the crowded room and immediately court was dismissed many of the youthful prisoners' friends hurried to the dock to congratulate him upon the lightness of the sentence. The prisoner showed his relief plainly and thanked His Lordship for the leniency of his sentence. A few minutes later he was led away to commence his term of imprisonment.

Has Been of Keen Interest.

With the sentencing of Edgar Grose the keen interest that has been shown in the two days of his trial comes to an end. Sympathy for the young man was widely entertained. The peculiar and unusual circumstances surrounding the case which resulted in the death of William O'Brien on Christmas Eve following a scuffle with Grose; the prisoner's subsequent flight to Millbrook; his pursuit by the police and his surrender the next day all served to awaken interest in the affair. In addition the measure of doubt as to how O'Brien came to his death, whether it was by violence and whether Grose was directly responsible, also served to increase this feeling. Grose was ably defended but the evidence, and also the fact that his stories in the box did not tally, carried weight with the jury who were compelled to find the young man guilty after slightly less than two hours' deliberation.

When the jury filed into the room and had seated themselves, the atmosphere bristled with a hushed expectancy.

"Gentlemen of the jury have you arrived at a verdict?" It was the clerk of the court who spoke the words.

"We have," replied Foreman Tully.

"What say you, is the prisoner guilty or not guilty?"

"We find the prisoner guilty, with a strong recommendation to mercy."

His Lordship then announced that he would adjourn court until seven o'clock before passing sentence.

Court Was Jammed.

Long before that hour had swung round, the room was again crowded, even to the farthest benches and the gallery. Before sentence was delivered Mr. Gordon requested that His Lordship take into consideration the fact that the offence with which his client was charged was entirely one that lacked premeditation. He asked that the prisoner's good reputation and his respectability be considered and hoped that as light a sentence as possible, consistent with the ends of justice would be imposed.

In addressing the prisoner, Justice Britton expressed his complete approval of the jury's verdict.

He considered it a most unfortunate think for the prisoner that he went out into the passageway of the hotel on the fateful night. Assuredly he could not have been fearful of bodily harm from O'Brien in view of the evidence that he had the support of his gang and apparently there had been no necessity for provocation of a fight. Justice Britton said it was one of the hardest things for him to do to pass judgment upon a prisoner. It was usually the case that some one other than the prisoner suffered just as much from his decision. There was a heart-broken mother for the sinfulness of her son. But some punishment had to be awarded and he would bear in mind the strong recommendation for mercy expressed by the jury; also that some enquiries had been instituted regarding his character which had been found to be good. "The sentence of the court is that you be imprisoned in the common jail for a period of nine months."

SIEGE WARFARE IN CARPATHIANS

Hand-to-Hand Fighting Without Any Material Advance --- Seventy Per Cent of Wounded Will be Invalids for Life

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

GENEVA, Feb. 26. — Fighting in the Carpathian mountains between Russians and Germans and Austrians is becoming rapidly very much like siege warfare, according to despatches reaching Geneva from points near the line of battle. These messages declare that since February 18th over 200,000 men have been fighting hand to hand in the Carpathian trenches without making any material advance. Wounded are pouring into Ungvar and Eperies in Hungary.

During the night of Friday, February 19th, taking advantage of a lull in the hostilities, the Austrians picked up at Swidnik 8,600 wounded men and over 3,000 dead.

The wounded had been lying on the ground, some of them for eighteen hours, without food or succor.

The chief officer of the Austrian medical department is authority for the estimate that seventy per cent. of them will be invalids for life. The majority of the men at Swidnik were wounded in the head by blows from rifle butts and twenty per cent. of them will be either partially or totally blind.

LIFE IN THE TRENCHES WITH PRINCESS PATS

Sergt. Major Brittain, Formerly of 57th Regiment Tells of His Experiences

Mr. George W. Haley has received a letter from Sergt.-Major A. E. Brittain who is on the firing line in France with the Princess Patricias. The writer was Sergt.-Major in the 57th regiment for a number of years and was very popular with the officers and men. He gave up his business in Toronto when the call came and enlisted with the Patricias. Sergt.-Major Brittain and Mr. Haley both came from Sheffield, England. He writes as follows:—

Dear George,—

Just a few lines to say I am, after about six months of active service, still quite well and doing duty, without a single report to the medical officer, so I have done well.

We have had about one month of duty in the trenches and our casualties are about an average and that's bad enough.

Relieving the regiments and being relieved in the trenches is a very hard, risky and tiring job, as one marches many a mile, after wading through mud, bumping into wire entanglements and so on, in the dark, occasionally just missing a bullet or shell. I assure you one seems to get into a kind of Nietzsche-like philosophy and plods along only thinking how a pipe and a biscuit and cheese will be when one gets safely under the parapet. I cannot explain what horrible trenches some are. So far ours have been all bad ones. Those nice dry ones I have not yet seen.

A lot of newspaper yarns about how well we are fed in the trenches are all wrong but I must say we don't starve. So far I have not had the full ration that I am supposed to get, since I came to France. There has always been something short. Still it is very wonderful how we get as much as we do. We have never really been without something, though in the trenches once or twice we had short rations. Still take it all round, it is very good.

As for tobacco and cigarettes I get more than I can smoke and give some away every week. I came out of the trenches the day before yesterday and marched seven and a half miles to rest in a miserable cold barn after doing double duty in the trenches. This was owing to a big fight delaying the relief till too late.

A sergeant of my platoon was instantly killed a few yards from me and it was a big shock as we were god friends. He was always joking, singing and reciting poetry all the day. It was his own fault as he was too eager to shoot, but he was a good one, and only 23 years old. This is a very strenuous life and consists of trenches, marches and a well-earned rest and then the same all over again.

Give my regards to all old friends in Peterborough.

WAS FATALLY HURT BY FALL

Proprietor of American Hotel Sustained Fracture of Skull

From the results of a fall last night shortly after ten o'clock, Arthur Mulhall, proprietor of the American Hotel, 189 Hunter Street, expired this morning at nine o'clock.

Particulars from different sources state that he was coming up the cellar steps when he stumbled and fell backwards. His head struck against the furnace, which is close to the foot of the stairs, fracturing his skull at the base. Dr. Gallivan was called in and had him removed to one of the rooms of the hotel where every attention was given. He was unconscious and his condition was seen to be critical. He passed a restless night without really becoming conscious and death occurred at nine this morning.

A Popular Proprietor.

The late Mr. Mulhall was in the borhood of fifty-five years of age. Although he only came to the city nine months ago to take over the American House, he soon became well acquainted and very popular. Under his management the hotel became a popular house and his unfortunate and tragic death comes as a shock to his many friends.

Played Professional Ball.

The deceased was born in Cobourg. For many years he played baseball in the lakeshore towns and when Cobourg won the Canadian League championship in the year 1893, Arthur Mulhall was behind the bat and playing first sack throughout the season. He played professional ball for many years in Cobourg and Peterborough and played in the days when Mr. Dan McCabe of Peterborough was a twirler. The latter has often played against him and remembers his prowess well.

Will be Buried in Cobourg.

The deceased leaves a wife and little child to whom widespread sympathy will be extended in their bereavement. The remains will be interred in Cobourg although definite arrangements for forwarding the body had not been completed today.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1915

THE CONTRAST OF TWO HEMISPHERES.

IN THE EASTERN hemisphere, famed since the beginning of recorded history for its empires, its government, its art, literature, architecture, and science, millions of men are engaged in a titanic death grapple. The hallowed associations of great events of the long ago receive no consideration in view of the brutal necessities of destroying armies. The sacred spot that inspired many an enduring monument of its civilization has been levelled, turned into a shambles or a dirty barracks. A great, devastating conflagration is taking place, which is not without its heroism, its lofty examples of unparalleled human sacrifices, but it leaves in its wake the tragic ruins of terrific war. Bare walls of finely designed cathedrals that have heard the prayers of mediaeval worshippers, battered towns whose history, like that of Liege, goes back to the days when it was a principality in itself, burnt homesteads that in Canada would be considered old but not less charming, fields turned to huge, mile-long burrows, cemeteries of nameless thousands, other countless thousands, halt and maimed, who saw the battle smoke and heard the thunder — these are the memorials, the residue of the great refinement when nation rises against nation and armies slaughter armies.

Now, look at the western hemisphere, without war, save for one half-civilized part, in which strife is carried on in desultory fashion. On the western slope of the California Rockies there has arisen a most beautiful memorial to one of the greatest triumphs of science and peace. Beneath a turquoise sky, surrounded by mountains in a purple haze, that ever look out like age-long, deathless sentries on the sunny expanse of the Pacific, there has been built a small city of palaces and parks and towers which rival the famed gardens of the great Chinese Khans. It is the world Exposition commemorating the completion of the Panama Canal and the passage of a hundred years of peace between the British Empire and the American Republic. There are grand palaces to the arts and crafts, stately domes and arches that visualize progress and skill in some branch of human activity. The Panama Canal, which shortens the route around the globe by 8,000 miles, and which was long held to be a vain dream impossible of realization, has become an actual fact. At the same time, two great democracies have lived side by side for a hundred years without actual war between them. Hence this beautiful memorial has been built.

This Panama-Pacific Exposition, in meaning and conception, is a concrete contradiction to what is termed the Old World. Both peace and war have their compensations and disadvantages. If war destroys, is also creates incentive to higher things such as nothing else does, and, while peace preserves, it also enervates and commercializes a people, plodding on undisturbed in the even tenor of their way. Such has been the accepted view, and such is, in most respects, true. But here we see the force of the contradiction. The meaning of this Exposition is to commemorate a triumph of science and of peace that has taken more then a century to complete, that has cost many lives, and an incomprehensible sum of money, but which, at the same time, has cost very much less than six months of the present great war, and has not drained the best blood of the nation in the task. The feat called for the highest skill, the best resources of mind, of body and of money; its return for labour and wealth invested will be inestimable; it may not inspire poems or novels, but it will occason a just pride in the conception of such a gigantic undertaking, and in the difficulties overcome in its construction.

The glory of war is the glory of the grave—a desolation, a ruins, a sightless skeleton, cold and spiritless. The glory of peace is a garden, a palace, homes, achievements of science and art. The former is the story of all that was or might have been, the latter, of all that is. The one is grander and deeper but less beautiful. Thus do the two hemispheres present the contrast of a great war in Europe and a magnificent Exposition on the Pacific Coast. It is war and peace in the same setting.

MUNICIPAL ABATTOIRS AND PUBLIC HEALTH.

UNDER THIS HEAD the Agricultural Gazette of Canada has an article by F. Torrance, Veterinary Director General, in which the importance of municipal abattoirs as a factor in public health is brought out. In Canada, with a large number of urban centres fast growing into large cities, the question of public health and inspection of food will have to receive much attention.

The inspection of meat is necessary from many points of view, but chiefly for the preservation of the public health against such diseases as may be communicated from diseased meat.

Inspection of meat after it has been prepared for the consumer is far from being efficient, and as a protection against the communication of disease, is of little practical value. A skilful and unscrupulous butcher can easily remove all evidence of disease from a carcass of meat in nine cases out of ten, and the meat so prepared would easily pass the scrutiny of the average meat inspector.

The only inspection that is of any value is that which is conducted at the time of slaughter before the butcher has had the opportunity of removing the diseased organs from the carcass. Considerations of this kind have led many municipalities in the older countries to establish municipal abattoirs, where meat is killed under the supervision of appointed officers, and in many cases these municipal abattoirs have been in successful operation for a great number of years.

There are other advantages, such as the use of by-products, and economy of operation. One reason why municipal abattoirs have not been advocated more generally is the fairly high quality of cattle raised in the province. Still, there are many unscrupulous farmers and dealers who do not or would not hesitate to sell the meat of a diseased animal, and, as the population grows and demand becomes greater, a closer inspection will have to be made. Toronto is the only city in Canada possessing a municipal abattoir, but there are a number of cities that in size and wealth are quite able to have them now.

ONTARIO'S NEW TAXATION.

THE BUDGET SPEECH of the Hon. T. W. McGarry, Provincial Treasurer, has received attention in most Liberal newspapers. The general criticism is that the new minister has made the best of a bad state of affairs. The Hamilton Herald has little adverse criticism to offer, while that of the Globe and the Toronto Star might be described as desultory. The Star says Mr. McGarry should have taxed incomes and that a direct tax on land is an undue burden on the smaller land-holder. This is a very doubtful statement. If land and incomes were both taxed, double taxation would result, for many whose incomes would be taxed, derive their incomes or a large part of them from land. There is enough double taxation as it is. Mr. McGarry's plan is to be commended for its simplicity and the equality with which it falls on rich and poor alike. Mr. McGarry might have been a little less severe on the life insurance companies. They are testing their claim in the courts, and until it is settled, criticism of them should be reserved. A very difficult situation has been met, and it is probable that any other method would not have solved the difficulty so well, so simply, or so expeditiously.

"All I could ever be
This I was worth to God."
Rabbi Ben Ezra.

He stood one morning bright
Beside the harvest field,
Whose bending grain, all white,
Unto his strength appealed.

His sickles' edge was keen —
It had been polished long,
And he had often been
There with a fancied throng.

He turned away, high-souled —
His task to others fell;
He sleeps within the mold;
"'Twas in his heart — 'twas well!"

The Contented Unemployed.

(Farmers' Advocate.)

The towns and cities of this country have a problem to deal with for which they have no solution. The fact that two hundred unemployed in the city of Toronto prefer the hospitality of the city soup kitchen rather than the honest employment on a farm in Huron county is conclusive evidence that the unemployed are not a result of economic conditions which exist in this country. They are unemployed by choice, and will remain unemployed so long as they receive free meal tickets or free soup. Toronto does not stand alone as a city with this class of unemployed; they exist in every city in Canada, and the cities which harbour them are at present not altogether to blame. There is a certain class of manhood which has little ambition for work, and they are stealing from the working people just as much as the "honest" labouring man with a large family who steals a few bushels of coal with which to warm his home. The provincial secretary has initiated a commendable scheme in the northern part of this province where people out of work "may" assist in clearing waste lands and transforming it into productive areas. The word "may" should be changed to "must" in relation to these satisfied unemployed in our cities. They should be compelled to work or starve in a pursuit that will result in production in some shape or form.

Babylon and Nineveh

The first man to undertake extensive and important explorations among the ruins of Babylon and Nineveh was Sir Henry Layard. It was due to his friendship for a young man who had a great fear of seasickness that he was led to begin what was to be his life work. Layard was educated in the law and started for Ceylon to practice his profession.

He was accompanied by another lad who had a horror of the ocean, and Layard readily agreed when his companion suggested that they make the trip by land across Europe, Asia Minor, Persia and India. It was while on this journey that Layard was inspired with the ambition to delve among the ruins of the ancient cities of Asia.

"When I first beheld the mounds of Nineveh," he wrote, "a great longing came over me to learn what was hidden within them."

He yielded to the desire and largely at his own expense carried on these excavations at Babylon and Nineveh which were chiefly responsible for the discovery of the lost records and relics of a people who lived 3,000 years ago. Many cities and palaces, including the palace of King Nebuchadnezzar, were unearthed by Layard, and the most valuable treasures in the British museum serve to commemorate his name and fame.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

WOOD AND METAL AND MUSIC.

A Theory Born of the Patter of the Raindrops on the Roof.

Since Mittelburger, the German musician, while sleeping under a roof of cedar shingles in Philadelphia, in 1754, was entranced with the resonance produced by raindrops falling on the shingles, until the present time, wood has held an indisputable place in the manufacture of musical instruments. Mittelburger's first work under his theory that wood was more musical than metal was when he built a pipe organ—the first in America—with the pipes of southern white cedar, the same wood which had charmed his ear while he listened to the rain on the roof.

The superlative quality of spruce as material for sounding boards is due to the long, straight, regular fibers of which the wood is composed. The microscope reveals what the unaided eye cannot see. The minute cells forming the wood are extremely long—full one hundred times as long as their diameter measurement—and each cell or fiber is stretched like a taut string. Although these cells, all lying lengthwise of the wood, are packed and stretched closely, side by side, there is room for vibration when they are struck.

All woods possess this quality or resonance, but in vastly different degrees. Some are dull and nearly dead, others emit tones quick and sharp, and still others give out sounds that continue a long time and gradually die away as if vanishing in the distance. Spruce is of the latter kind.

Wood possesses resonance, metal has ring. That may not wholly conform to dictionary definitions, but it classifies the two materials pretty accurately. The singing of a tightly stretched telephone wire across an open field in the autumn wind is a most pleasing melody to one who has an ear for the delicacy of the simpler sounds. But how much softer and melodious that singing wire becomes if the ear is pressed against the telephone pole so that the vibrations come through the wood to reach the ear, instead of directly from the wire.—Hardwood Record.

Woman's Body Found in Ice.

ST. CATHARINES, Feb. 26.—The badly decomposed body of a woman was found in the melting ice of the beach of Lake Ontario, just west of Jordan harbor, but identification was considered impossible. The body was taken to Beamsville. The body had been in the water all winter and likely came from the other side of the lake.

John McMillan, lessee of the Cavour restaurant, Collingwood, was fined $100 in the police court for violation of the provisions of the local option by-law. Another conviction means a term in jail.

Humor and Philosophy

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

SUCCESS seems to justify the means. Still, you occasionally meet a man who feels like keeping the means out of sight.

Blessed are the uses of adversity, and we piously hope that our enemies only may enjoy them.

It takes herculean efforts to raise a man, but most any old chump can pull him down.

ISN'T IT WORTH ANYTHING?
YES, NOTHING!

We can run away from our plain duty, but consequences have an extremely ugly way of hunting us up and driving us into a corner.

Attending to others' business is certainly worth a salary. Either see that you get it or let them run the job themselves.

Sometimes the difference between a man and a dog is largely in favor of the latter.

Some men seem to be entirely immune from any amount of sense or reason that you may attempt to infect them with.

Poverty is said to be a barren thing, but it breeds discomfort and disease very rapidly.

The Problem.

Mother thinks she'll make a doctor out of Jim.
Father thinks he'd better fill a judge's chair.
Uncle John would mold a preacher out of him.
Really choosing a profession is a care.
Cousin May would like to see him grace the state.
Uncle George is sure a soldier's trade would fit.
Charley says that millionaires are all the rage;
For a fine profession that is surely it.

Mother says that able doctors heal the sick
And are useful to the world in many ways.
Father says the legal trade is still his pick,
For the lawyers have such fine and winning ways.
Uncle John is sure his choice would be the best.
Uncle George is pleading strongly for the gun.
Cousin May is just as certain as the rest.
Charley's pick appears to him the only one.

Oh, it's surely lots of trouble picking out
A profession for the little coming man!
Each relation is a self appointed scout
With a diagram his future life to plan.
You may wonder when they all are taking hold
Why they do not give the lad himself a show.
There's a reason—he is only six weeks old.
How is one of tender years like that to know?

While He Waited.

"Are you the girl that took my order?" asked the old grouch as the pretty waitress tripped in under the weight of her load.

"I sure am," replied the girl, who wasn't addicted to slang, but could use it on occasions.

"I want to compliment you on one thing."

"What's that you're giving me now?"

"It is this: You don't look a day older than when you took it."

Cautious.

"You never kissed a girl in your life?"

"Never!"

"You don't know what you are missing."

"Yes, I do."

"What?"

"Microbes."

"How Shall I Know I Have Kidney Trouble?"

Do just as every doctor does when he suspects that a patient has Kidney Trouble —— EXAMINE YOUR URINE.

In the morning, see if the urine is highly colored—either reddish or deep orange. (Natural urine is a light straw color). Notice if the odor is strong or foul. If highly colored or offensive in odor, your Kidneys are certainly in need of attention—and AT ONCE.

Get a box of GIN PILLS now, and take them regularly.

If you have a Pain In The Back—if the hands and feet swell—if you suffer with Rheumatism, Sciatica or Lumbago—if you have deposits of reddish matter-like brick dust or mucus in the urine in the morning, you may be sure that your Kidneys are not as strong as they should be, and need the help of GIN PILLS to be well.

Crookston, Ont., Dec. 4th.

"A few years ago, I was a great sufferer from Rheumatism. I had frequently read that Gin Pills were effective in cases like mine. I got a box and after taking them for a short time, the twinges became less frequent until they finally disappeared. Rheumatism is a terrible affliction and it is a blessing to know of a remedy like Gin Pills that will drive it out of the system and relieve the sufferings."

JOSEPH STEVENSON.

Don't put off this treatment. If your Kidneys show any of the signs given above, you need Gin Pills. To delay taking them is only inviting Bright's Disease, Stone in the Bladder, chronic Rheumatism or some other terrible form of Kidney or Bladder Trouble.

Gin Pills are sold at all dealers—50c. a box, 6 for $2.50. Gin Pills are "Made in Canada". Sold in U.S. under the name "GINO" Pills. Trial Treatment free if you write

TRAPPING A FLIRT

The Trap Didn't Spring the Right Way

By JOHN Y. LARNED

"Hello, Duncan! You look as radiant as a morning glory! Had a fortune left you?"

"Better than that!"

"What could be better than the sudden coming into a lot of money?"

"Sit down and I'll tell you."

This brief dialogue took place in the cafe of the B. club in New York. William Duncan led his friend, Edward Archibald, to a table, pushed the button for refreshments and said:

"Ten years ago I met a girl of sixteen—I was then twenty-six—who attracted me more than any one else I ever met. She was far beyond her age in some ways, most especially in flirting. I knew she was playing with me, but it didn't make any difference. I became infatuated all the same. Of course she was too young to be married, and we drifted apart, but I've never forgotten her, and it had been my intention never to marry unless I married my little sweetheart.

"But I have never since that time found it practicable to renew my suit. I have spent some years in South America, as you know, and more time in Australia. Besides, I have only recently come into a financial condition to enable me to marry. A few months ago I met an aunt of my sweetheart, who chided me for having won her niece's affections for pastime. I assured her that I would never marry any one else. Through the aunt we have been placed in correspondence, and I have just received her culminating letter agreeing to marry me on her return from Europe, which will be next month."

"Well, now, that's a romance and no mistake. I congratulate you heartily, old man; very heartily." And Archibald grasped his friend's hand in his viselike grip. "May I ask the lady's name?"

"Ellison—Edith Ellison."

Archibald gave a slight start.

"Ever met her?" asked Duncan.

"No, but I've heard of her. She threw a friend of mine over her shoulder."

"You don't mean it!"

"I do, and, to make a confession, I've always had a desire to see her caught in one of her own traps."

Duncan looked grave.

"Oh, don't worry," said the other. "You should feel flattered. Doubtless the reason she has declined others is because she wanted you."

"That's comforting, I assure you. You say you would like to see her caught in one of her own traps. A plan occurs to me. Edith and I have not met for ten years. Did I say ten? It will be twelve next month. I'm not sure she will know me when she sees me. Suppose we go abroad, meet her, you as Duncan, I as Archibald—we're not unlike—and see if you can win her away from me."

"Now it is you who are flattering me."

"Nothing of the kind. If my personality won her originally it should hold her against all comers."

"I'm not so sure about that. Few girls of twenty-six would marry the man they admired at sixteen."

There were more talks between the two friends on the subject, and Archibald finally consented to go abroad with Duncan and, on meeting Miss Ellison personate her fiance, while the real fiance personated Archibald. Duncan wrote her to delay her departure; that he would join her and come back with her.

It was December when the two friends started for Rome, where the young lady was spending the winter. Duncan had changed a good deal in twelve years. His hair had become very thin, and he was much heavier than formerly. He took with him a photograph of himself taken about the time he first met Miss Ellison, thinking he might have occasion to use it. He tried it on several friends, none of whom recognized it as a likeness of himself.

Archibald insisted that a letter be written to the lady in Duncan's name that he would not claim her as his betrothed or any privilege of a fiance until awhile after they had met. Time had changed him, and he thought it best that she should have an opportunity of seeing what manner of man he had become before feeling bound to him. This suited Duncan, and the letter was written.

One morning a card bearing the name of William Duncan was carried to Miss Ellison, who was staying with friends at a hotel in Rome, and Mr. Archibald followed the card. The lady advanced with outstretched hand, but stopped short.

"I am changed," said Archibald. "I knew you would be disappointed in me."

"Yes; you are changed, very much changed. I would not have supposed that a dozen years could make such a difference. But of course I am changed too."

"Very little, and whatever change there is in you has been an improvement."

"Permit me to return the compliment."

Mr. Archibald was ill at ease. He did not like the part he was playing and felt that the meeting lacked that warmth there should be between two persons who were intending to be married. But it was not long before Miss Ellison began to appear more used to the change she found in him and seemed especially desirous for a return to the former feeling that had existed between them years agone. But she gave no hint that she expected the caresses to which lovers are privileged. This was a comfort to Archibald.

The day after this meeting Archibald informed Miss Ellison that he had brought a friend with him from America who knew no one in Rome. When about to start out with her to see the sights he asked permission to introduce him. This was granted, and Mr. Duncan was introduced as Mr. Archibald.

"I am pleased to meet you, Mr. Archibald," said the lady. "Indeed, any friend of Mr. Duncan's is a friend of mine if he cares to be such."

Duncan winced. There was not the slightest sign that she recognized her fiance. A party, the two men and the lady being among the number, was driven to the coliseum, then to the forum and other objects of interest, and during these visits Miss Ellison devoted herself to the real Archibald, leaving the real Duncan severely in the cold. She seemed inclined to get her pretended fiance away from the others and was not at all careful of her speech in referring to Duncan, who was much disgruntled at the success of the ruse and his position with reference to his fiancee.

"Your fat friend doesn't seem to be in a very good humor," she said loud enough for Duncan to hear. "What's the matter with him?"

This put a quietus on the "fat friend's" sightseeing with the others for that day. He disappeared while the party were exploring the forum and did not return.

Archibald mildly remonstrated with the lady, saying that his friend was a fine fellow, very sensitive, and his overhearing her remark had doubtless wounded him to the quick. Miss Ellison professed regret and promised if Archibald would bring the gentleman back she wouldn't do so any more.

That evening when the two men were together at their hotel Archibald had great difficulty in keeping Duncan from returning at once to America. "What's the use of my hanging about here?" the latter exclaimed. "The romance of a dozen years ago has gone up in smoke. Great Scott, man, I'm your 'fat friend!'"

Archibald finally secured a promise from Duncan that he would see Miss Ellison once more before returning to America, and when he did so she received him so graciously that he was sufficiently mollified to join a party for a visit to the ruins of the baths of Caracalla. On this occasion Miss Ellison shifted her favors from the spurious to the real Duncan. This was not to the former's satisfaction, and when the two men met for dinner it was Archibald who would return to America.

"She's as much of a flirt," remarked Duncan, "as she ever was. It was born in her."

"What a fool I have been," replied Archibald, "to permit myself to be used in such a matter. I'm out of it from this time forward."

"I heard you promise to go with the party to St. Peter and the castle of St. Angelo tomorrow morning."

"Well, that shall be the last of it. I'm off the next day for Genoa and thence home."

At St. Peter's and St. Angelo the wind shifted again, and the spurious Mr. Duncan came in for all the favoritism. And so it was that Miss Ellison kept the two men on the eve of going home, first one, then the other, till it looked as if their friendship would not only be broken, but they would have each other's heart's blood.

One day a little note came, addressed to Mr. Archibald (for the real Mr. Duncan) from Miss Ellison, asking him if he could find it convenient to call upon her that evening. He accepted the invitation with alacrity and found the lady alone in her private parlor.

"I have sent for you, Mr. Archibald," she said, "to tell you that my engagement with Mr. Duncan, of which you are aware, must be broken. I should be obliged if you, as his bosom friend, would break it to him as gently as possible."

"I—you—you don't mean it!"

"I am dreadfully sorry, but I can't help it."

"Am I to tell him that there is another attachment?"

The lady cast her eyes on the floor. Then she suddenly threw her arms around her companion's neck.

"Will," she said, "what did you mean by foisting your friend upon me as yourself?"

"You knew me?"

"Yes; at once."

"But I've changed. I'm bald, and I've grown fat."

"You haven't lost the smile that made me love you from the first moment I saw you when I was young. That smile, which denoted your inner self, is the same today as it was then, and I love it and you as I did then."

That was the end of the ruse that was played, or, rather, attempted to be played, on Edith Ellison. She returned to America as Mrs. Duncan.

But for some time the friendship between the two men was not the same as before. Duncan bore no ill will whatever against his friend, but Archibald naturally felt very sore.

However, in time the lady accomplished what the man could not. She won over Archibald, and before the trio returned to America there was the best of feeling among all of them.

Legal Phraseology.

"To wit, to wit," the lawyer says,

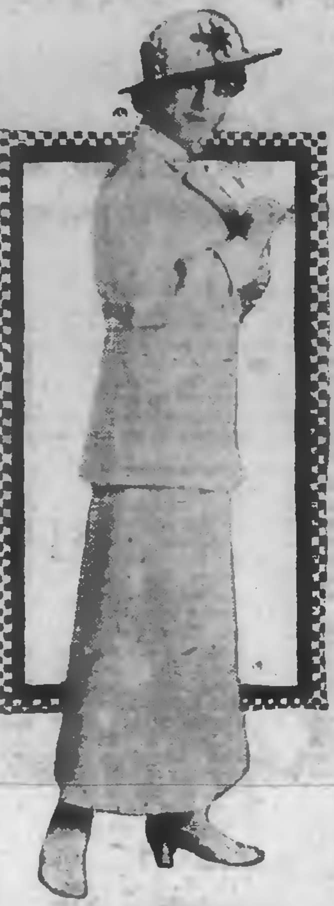
SPRING STYLE HINT.

White Outing Gown on Severely Tailored Lines.



WHITE GABARDINE GOWN.

The attractive outing suit pictured here is fashioned of white gabardine. The effect is quite tailored, the skirt being plain and short and the jacket belted and of hip length. The patch pockets are finished with crescent shaped flaps, and the collar and cuffs are of white uncut velvet. While designed for wear at one of the southern winter resorts, the suit may quite suitably be worn later, since in its chief features it anticipates spring and summer modes.

PUTTING ON GLOVES.

The Way This Is Done Will Affect Their Wearing Qualities.

Gloves are an expensive item of dress, especially for the business woman. The drawing on and off of gloves three or four times a day causes greater havoc than the actual wear that they get while on the hands. To minimize the strain gloves should always be "coaxed" on, finger by finger, thumb and hand.

A finger twisted when the glove is first put on will invariably remain twisted until the glove is worn out. A hasty jerk or an impatient push between the fingers will often result in an unsightly, unmendable tear that is not the fault of the kid.

When gloves are removed the top should be turned back over the hand to the fingers, then back and fingers should be firmly grasped and the glove gently drawn off. When turned back to normal position the glove should be pulled lengthwise.

What to Do With Piano Stools.

Discarded piano stools—and every one ought to discard them and use either a piano bench or chair—are just the thing for the bathroom. They can be so easily enameled any color and, with a bath towel placed on top, ready to unfold when one wants a comfortable dressing seat, will be found quite as useful as ornamental in the room. They are really better than the regular bathroom stools sold in stores because they may be adjusted to any height to suit the comfort of the user.

How to Mend Buttonholes.

If buttonholes have become torn or frayed on a woolen garment sew a small piece of cloth over each side of the old buttonhole, stitching it down flatly all around. Then cut and make a new buttonhole right over the worn one. If you have no pieces of the cloth dark colored linen tape may be used in the same way.

SMART SLEEVES.

Some of the new evening gowns, despite the sleeveless vogue, have sleeves—pretty little ruffled and puffed affairs of tulle or chiffon or other light and gauzelike fabric. They are decidedly dainty, especially on frocks for the young girl.

* *

A charming evening sleeve is simply a square of tulle fastened into the armhole and falling like a wing as far as the belt.

* *

The set in sleeve is now considered as fashionable as the sleeve that is cut in one with the bodice.

* *

The narrow, long fitting sleeves have replaced the short ones entirely for day wear.

* *

All frocks for day wear seem to have adopted the long sleeve.

* *

The one piece frock is, as a rule, long sleeved.

SALAD SUGGESTIONS.

Here Is a List of Hints For Luncheons and Tea Parties.

Here are 15 salad possibilities that may help the busy housewife to attain variety in preparing salads:

Sliced cold tomatoes and sliced hard boiled eggs served on watercress with French dressing.

Sliced pickled beets mixed with chopped celery and served with a scant dressing made of two tablespoonfuls of cream beaten with one tablespoonful of vinegar.

Sliced cold bananas, sprinkled with chopped parsley, dressed with French dressing and served on lettuce leaves.

Chopped cabbage mixed with small dice of tart apples, dressed with French dressing.

Minced celery dressed with French dressing combined with cut of walnut meats mixed with mayonnaise dressing, served on lettuce leaves.

Young okra pods boiled tender, sliced cold with shredded green peppers, served on lettuce leaves, with a dressing of oil, vinegar, salt and pepper and a little horseradish.

Peas cooked with mint leaves, served with chopped chicken on lettuce leaves with French dressing. Minced lamb may be used instead of the chicken.

Watercress served with a dressing of equal parts of lemon juice and olive oil, sprinkled with grated egg yolk.

Cold boiled Brussels sprouts served on lettuce with a French dressing to which are added a few drops of tobasco sauce.

Cold baked beans dressed with the juice of a lemon and minced celery, served on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise dressing, garnished with olives and sliced cold tomatoes.

Young carrots which have been cooked in stock, cut thin and served on lettuce leaves with peas dressed with mayonnaise or French dressing.

Sprigs of boiled cauliflower, slices of hard boiled eggs and slices of tomatoes served on a bed of watercress dressed with French dressing.

Two sliced beets pickled in vinegar, four boiled potatoes sliced in the vinegar juice of the beets, served on watercress or lettuce leaves with salt and olive oil dressing.

Sprigs of cold boiled cauliflower served on lettuce leaves dressed with mayonnaise.

Thin sliced boiled potatoes, sprinkled with chopped parsley, over lettuce leaves with French dressing.

Remember in making all salads that the vegetables should be of the best. Raw vegetables should be well chilled. Boiled vegetables should not be well done. Lettuce leaves should be torn, never cut.

FOR THE CUISINE.

How to Serve Cheese Daintily and With Satisfaction.

The housekeeper of economical mind should not fail to make a thorough study of cheeses. They go far toward giving zest to a meal and are really nourishing. They contain nitrogenous matter and are therefore a muscle or tissue building food. Cheese is a concentrated food, however, and should be eaten in small quantities as a relish rather than as the fundamental element of a meal.

The common Canadian cheese is generally supposed to be the most digestible of its family. In reality it is not so easily digested as those which are known as ripe or old cheeses such as Camembert, Roquefort and Brie. The housewife of systematic habits will stock up her pantry with different cheeses for different purposes. For flavoring, making rarebits and for cooked dishes she will use a good grade of cheese or Parmesan. The latter can be bought ready grated in bottles.

The best cheese to serve with salad are the medium rich, such as pineapple, Edam, English dairy and Canadian full cream. The Neuchatel or cream cheese is also served with salad, but is less easy to digest than are the medium rich cheeses mentioned before.

The most popular after dinner cheeses are Roquefort, Camembert, Stilton, Limburger, Brie, Schweitzer and Gorgonzola, all very rich and ripe. Presumably they are imported cheeses. Quite often, however, they are made in Canada and it is found they give just as good satisfaction as the imported article.

When cheese is served both with the salad and with the coffee course a very dainty accompaniment for green salad with French dressing is this: Spread thin saltines with a mixture of grated Canadian cheese and butter in the proportion of two tablespoonfuls of cheese to one of butter. Dust lightly with cayenne pepper and stand for a moment or so in a quick oven. For cheese served with the final dinner course there is nothing more appropriate than hard crackers split and toasted a golden brown.

At the Frontenac Conservative Association at Kingston Mr. William McNeilly, Storrington, was elected president. Addresses were made by Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P., and Mr. A. M. Rankin, M.L.A.

Hot Potato Salad.

Three potatoes boiled and sliced rather thickly. Fry three or four slices of breakfast bacon and remove from the drippings. Into this put one heaping teaspoonful of flour, one chopped onion, one teaspoonful dry mustard, one tablespoonful vinegar, a few sprigs of parsley, salt and pepper as desired. Let this boil until consistency of cream and pour over the potatoes while still hot. This is very nice served cold also, but a more delicious dish if steaming hot and a delightful accompaniment to cold meat.

Ironing Shirt Waists.

To give a soft finish to shirt waists and delicate fabrics when laundering them use corn starch. Take one tablespoonful of corn starch, mix it with a little cold water, stir into one quart of boiling water and boil two minutes. A piece of French gloss the size of a bean adds to smoothness. Dilute with cold water to desired consistency.

MANY RELATIVES ON FIRING LINE

Mrs. Phipps Has Thirteen at the Front

There is one lady in Peterborough who has reason to glance with interest at every casualty list of British soldiers which appears in the press. She is Mrs. Arthur Phipps, residing at the corner of King George and Lock Street, who has no less than thirteen relatives on the firing line. When war first broke out Mrs. Phipps had six first cousins, one nephew, three brothers-in-law, three brothers and one son answer the call. Since then one of the brothers-in-law has been discharged on account of illness. All with the exception of her son Arthur enlisted in England. He joined the first Canadian Overseas Contingent and is now in France.

Mrs. Phipps stated this morning that her friends on the firing line do not forget her and she is the recipient of many interesting letters. The last letter she received from her son was written on the sixth of February and on that date he was 21 years of age. Thus far none of Mrs. Phipps' fighting relatives have been wounded.

CONFISCATING GRAIN.

Austria is Making a Complete Monopoly of Wheat and Flour.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Venice says:

"The Austrian Government is confiscating entire stocks of grain and flour in the monarchy. After an approximate estimate is made of the available supply, a per capita apportionment will be announced and a distribution made through the local authorities.

"Severe fines and other penalties will be inflicted on any person for attempting to secrete supplies of grain and flour.

"The Government has issued an order under which 300,000 acres of land, which had been used in the cultivation of the sugar beet, are made available for grain production. It is said that Austria will receive only maize from Hungary."

Illicit Dealers Said to be Doing Good Business

LINDSAY, Feb. 26. — From a most reliable source comes the information that an investigation is pending in regard to finding out who the parties are that supply the soldiers with liquor.

From reports, it is understood that Sunday is a harvest for the illicit dealers who do a thriving trade with citizens who enjoy a booster. Parties other than licensed dealers who place this temptation within the reach of the defenders of our homes and lives will be ferreted out and dealt with according to the magnitude of the offence.

REPEAL OF SCHOOL LAWS DEMANDED

WINNIPEG, Feb. 26. — Not only does the Grand Orange Lodge of Manitoba demand that the so-called Caldwell amendments to the public schools be wiped off the statute books, but it also demands the repeal of the entire Laurier-Greenway agreement, which Hon. George R. Coldwell stated recently in the Legislature the Government of Manitoba would not be a party to violating. This fact became apparent at the second day's meeting of the grand lodge convention in Scott Memorial Hall, in the report of the correspondence committee, which was presented and unanimously adopted.

Four Men Killed.

LISBON, N.H., Feb. 26—Four men were killed and ten others badly injured in a rush of ice and water in the Ammonoosuc river yesterday. The accident occurred while a wrecking crew was trying to remove ice from the flooded track of the White Mountain division of the Boston & Maine Railroad, in the meadows a mile above this town.

ALLIED FLEETS DESTROY FORTS

After Being Held up by Bad Weather the Franco-British Squadron Resumed the Bombardment on Thursday and in Long and Close Range Fight Reduced Turkish Defences.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The forts at the entrance of the Dardanelles have been reduced after an all-day bombardment by the Franco-British fleet, according to the following announcment made by the Admiralty shortly after midnight:

"The weather moderating, the bombardment of the outer forts of the Dardanelles was renewed at 8 o'clock yesterday morning (Feb. 25). After a period of long-range fire, the squadron of battleships attacked at close range. All the forts at the entrance to the straits were successfully reduced, and the operations are continuing."

The successful forcing of the Dardanelles by the allied fleet would, in the opinion of many military experts, be the most decisive and important event of the war up to the present. Once the Franco-British fleet makes its entrance into the Sea of Marmora the city of Constantinople will be at its mercy, and Turkey wil be virtually eliminated from the military situation.

With the opening of the Bosphorus, which would be a simple matter after Constantinople had been taken, Russia could be easily supplied with the guns and munitions which she sorely needs, and the enormous stores of wheat which have been collected on the shores of the Black Sea would be released for the benefit of the western allies.

The political effects would be even more important. Turkey's power has consisted in the supposedly impregnable position of Constantinople, which has held Russia in check by preventing her egress to the open sea. The announcement of the destruction of the Dardanelles forts is peculiarly significant from the fact that it is made on the day when Sir Edward Grey stated in the House of Commons that Great Britain would not oppose Russia's aspirations for access to the sea.

That announcement marks a reversal of the policy which Britain has maintained for generations. Hitherto Britain has exerted every effort to prevent Russia from obtaining that access. Now British guns are battering down the forts so that Russian ships may go through.

The forts are not all yet destroyed, however. The Dardanelles are 33 miles long, and from 1,300 yards to four miles wide. Impotrant fortifications which have recently been supplied with German guns manned by German officers are built upon the shores. Some twelve years ago Lord Charles Beresford estimated the cost of forcing the Dardanelles at "50 per cent. of the ships making the attempt," and the defences at that time were not what they are now.

A Constantinople despatch to The Morning Post states that the Sultan has everything packed up ready for an immediate departure into his Asiatic dominions. Troops have been drawn from Adrianople and Kadikeny, and the Princess Islands have been fortified and trenches dug by the forts at Carak, on the European side.

LOTS OF MEN IN CANADA

Could Send Three Contingents in Three Weeks Says Gen. Hughes

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—Upon the assembling of the House yesterday afternoon, Hon. Geo.. P. Graham said that he had been privately assured that recruiting was going on in a satisfactory way, any newspaper reports to the contrary notwithstanding. He thought it might be well for the Government to make a statement on the subject to the House and the country.

Maj.-Gen. Hughes said in reply:

"So far as my Department is concerned, and that is the one to be interested, I shall reply to the hon. gentleman's question by giving a number of instances. In raising a cavalry regiment a few weeks ago, in six hours 650 enlisted. In some towns in eastern Ontario, within 24 hours after the call for the third contingent we had far more men than the quota desired. In places where the men have not responded it has been due to the fact that the corps have not been encouraged or that we have not had accommodation wherein to place the men just at the time. We have now every regiment in Canada up to full strength. Edmonton recruited in 12 days up to full strength. The Nova Scotia cavalry regiment is over strength to-day. I could raise a regiment in Cape Breton in four hours if I wanted to. In short at the present moment I could raise three more contingents inside of three weeks according to the returns we have got, if necessary."

The Minister's statement was received with loud applause.

Asked if he intended to go to the front, Maj.-Gen. Hughes said he had other duties to attend to.

The House then passed after brief discussion the bill preserving the sessional indemnity for members at the front and making them eligible for re-election.

CANADIANS ARE SAID TO HAVE SEEN FIGHTING

The Belief is Based on Private Messages and Despatches from Correspondents---Nothing Official.

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—According to private advices received here by relatives of men with the Canadian Expeditionary Force in France, the Canadian troops were in action as early as last Friday.

The Globe prints the following despatch from its staff correspondent in London:

"According to a report here the 'Little Black Devils' (presumably the 90th Regiment, Winnipeg) in a brilliant charge won some German trenches, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. It is said that one company of the Canadians had several men killed.

"The infantrymen of the Canadian Expeditionary Force have had their baptism of fire. They were sent forward to relieve Imperial troops in the trenches.

"Letters from Toronto officers state that the men behaved splendidly under a fierce shelling. Lt.-Col. Rennie of the Queen's Own Rifles reports that several men have been wounded by shrapnel and snipers. The casualties all around have been unusually light. The censor prohibits the sending of unofficial casualty lists."

Sergt. Harry S. Hamilton, who was a member of the 51st Sault Rifles, with the Canadian force, has been wounded. The message came in a cablegram to his father, Mr. H. C. Hamilton, 170 Albany avenue, last night, from a friend in London. The message said: "Harry wounded right leg, shrapnel, nineteenth instant. Flesh wound only. Now in hospital; doing well."

Another message said that Private Davis of the Second Battalion had also been wounded. He is a Renfrew man.

Another message of much interest which reached the city yesterday was addressed to Lt.-Col. W. N. Ponton, of Belleville, who is a delegate to the Associated Boards of Trade Convention. Col. Ponton's message concerned his son, Lieut. Richard Ponton, who is with the Ontario Brigade. The cablegram came from Mr. G. McL. Brown, European manager for the C.P.R. at London, son of Mr. Adam Brown, the veteran postmaster at Hamilton. The message, which was read at the convention, was as follows:

"Cheerful letter from Richard, France, Feb. 21. Is quite well.

"First time in line of trenches; within 100 yards of Germans past 48 hours.

"Canadian behavior splendid. Returned O.K. to billet for day's rest, after baptism of fire. All fit. Slight casualties in Canadian infantry from snipers. Artillery quite equal to the occasion."

Mrs. J. A. Currie, wife of Lt.-Col. Currie, of the 48th Highlanders, received a cable from her husband yesterday, stating merely: "All well."

Nothing Official Says C. A. P.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The Canadian Associated Press have official authority for stating that no message has been received at Salisbury base of two Canadian brigades having been in action on Sunday.

If it was permitted to make known the real disposition of the Canadian forces at the present time the inaccuracy of any such intimation as the foregoing would be apparent.

It may be stated, though, that a few days ago a certain portion of the Canadian infantry were expecting to move into the trenches within a short time.

Any statements that Canadian artillery have been engaged are pure imagination.

Aviators Caused Great Scare.

GENEVA, Feb. 26.—(Via Paris.)—A despatch received from Constance says that as a result of the two allied aeroplanes having been seen Tuesday night from Constance flying southward, there was great excitement in Friedrichshafen. The Zeppelins there, it is said, were covered with metal netting, the lights in the town were extinguished and the people took to the cellars. The aeroplanes flew over Meersburg and later reached Belfort safely.

BOARD OF WORKS APPROPRIATION

The sum the Board of Works will ask the City Council for this year as an appropriation will be $26,710, a decrease of $2,540 over the figures for last year which were $29,250. Ald. Green, Chairman of the Board of Works, and City Engineer Parsons came to the meeting of the board last night with a draft of the estimates and as had been previously announced the chairman had them pared as low as possible. The total, according to his figures, was $27,910 and his colleagues further assisted him in the work of pruning by transferring one item for $1,200 to the Legal Committee.

The following was the draft of the estimates which had been prepared by Ald. Green and the City Engineer and which was submitted to the Board:—

Approaches	$50
Board of Works, miscellaneous	2,000
Board of Works, horses	825
Boundary Roads	400
Bridges, County and City, repairs	900
Concrete walks, maintenance.	500
Crossings	150
Culverts	300
Cement testing outfit	235
Flagging railway crossings	650
Damages	1,200
General street work	5,500
Gravel	6,000
Office supplies	250
Opening water courses	600
Salaries	3,806
Sanding walks	200
Sewage pumping station	300
Sewer maintenance	800
Street cleaning	2,500
Trimming trees	300
Weed and grass cutting	200
Wooden walk repairs	250
	$27,910
Snow cleaning	2,500
Street sprinkling	5,000
	$35,410
Surface drainage	3,000
	$39,410

New Items in Estimates.

Ald. Johnston wanted to know what the total estimates amounted to. Ald. Green explained that when snow cleaning ($2,500) and street sprinkling ($5,000) were left out as they usually are, the total is $27,910. With the snow cleaning and street sprinkling included the total is $35,410. If the surface drainage is also added the total is $38,410. Although snow cleaning and street sprinkling expenses have never been included in the estimates Ald. Green deemed it advisable to do so this year.

The Board approved all the items till "damages $1,200" was reached. Ald. Green explained that in other years no preparation was made fo expenditure for damages to citizen for injuries. The total damages o the year are charged to the Board o Works at the end of the year. Ald Johnston thought that the item might be transferred to the Lega Committee. Mayor Buller contended that the endeavor of the council is to keep down the tax rate as much as possible and transferring the item to another committee would not assist any.

Ald. Johnston followed up his idea by moving a resolution that the item of "damages $1,200" be struck off and a recommendation made to the chairman of the Legal Committee to include it in his list. The motion carried.

Everything floated along peacefully till "salaries $3,800" was reached. It passed with a long sigh by a couple of the aldermen.

The next items discussed were "snow cleaning $2,500," and "street sprinkling $5,000." They were not included in the estimates in former years but this year's chairman decided to include them. City Engineer Parsons stated that already this year some $1,700 has been spent in snow removal. The items passed.

Surface Drainage.

The proposed surface drainage work which would cost $3,000 was the last item brought up. Several aldermen thought some work should be gone on with but not to the extent of $3,000.

Mayor Buller was of the opinion that the surface drainage proposition should be gone on with on a big scale. He asked the Board to remember that the unemployed must be cared for during the coming summer when the Patriotic Fund has become exhausted. Now is the time the workingmen need assistance and the proposed drainage system will afford an opportunity. Ald. Johnston also thought the Mayor's idea the correct one.

Ald. Green pointed out that if the Mayor's idea was carried out it would be necessary to go to the people and any proposed expenditure at the present time would not, in his opinion meet with the support of the electors He stated however that he would be willing to work hard in an endeavor to have such a by-law pass. Believing that such a by-law could not carry he had asked the Board to spend the $3,000.

It was decided to strike the item of "surface drainage $3,000" off and in the meantime the City Engineer will continue preparing plans for a surface drainage system which would embrace all parts of the city.

AUSTRIAN RIGHT WING AT STANISLAU CUT OFF

Slavs Have Opened an Attack on a Large Force Wedged in Front of Roumanian Border—Supplies Can Reach Them Only by Long Route.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 26.—The Russians have now opened an attack on the main foundation of the Austro-German campaign for the Carpathians. This key position, stretching south from Stanislau, has only a shallow strip in the rear to the Roumanian frontier. It took the Austrians 18 days to bring their forces from Bukowina, with large floating reserves which were outside Roumania and Serbia, into the Stanislau position for the attack on the Russian left flank in eastern Galicia. The Russian rear columns withdrawing from Bukowina, halted the enemy often enough to give time for the main Russian army to range itself north of the Wyzkow Pass. The opening movements of Batele succeeded in separating this numerically strongest Austrian army from the mountain defences and from Austro-German columns further west.

Early on the first day the Austrian battalion south of Stanislau, during a general development, began doubling towards the Russian lines, waving several white flags. The Austrian commander turned his machine guns on these men, killing most of them. Russian tactics in southeastern Galicia have been rewarded by an Austrian concentration in this exposed field, whither supplies can be brought only from Hungary across the trackless southern Carpathians. This line is now threatened by the Russian advance southward along the Munkacz road.

Russians bayoneted the last remnants of the Germans and now have thrown the eastern Austrian army on its own resources. It is believed the German staff sent most of the Bavarian and Saxon troops who were recently in Hungary into the lines of the Dunajets river for the reinforcement of the approaches to Cracow. Probably less than 400,000 Germans remain in western Poland.

Developments for a gigantic trial of strength in the north produce incessant changes. Enormous numbers are engaged now from the northwest of Novo Georgievsk to the centre of the German position above Przasnysz. This has weakened the enemy's eastern army, which still is unable to overpower the small Russian force that has been fighting for a fortnight on all sides for an outlet from the Augustowo forest. The Russian Grodno column, advancing westward through Lipskow, forced an opening, and two more regiments came through, Gen. Bulgakoff, with five regiments, still valiantly holds his ground inside the forest. A German cavalry outpost crossed the Niemen on Monday but was pursued and captured by the Russians, who found prisoners supplied with explosives.

Forward Movement Continues.

PARIS, Feb. 26.—The French forward movement in the Champagne district is slowly forging its way northward in the teeth of serious German opposition. Further success was recorded yesterday in two spheres—the region of Souchain and Beausejour, and north of Mesnil. North of the last-named post, a German field work was captured and a German column which was on the march to the southeast of Tahure was surprised and scattered by artillery volleys. A hostile battery was put out of action, and several caissons of ammunition for the guns were blown up by some well-directed shots.

The little stream of Meurissons near Four-de-Paris, in the Argonne, was the scene of some heavy fighting. Here the French destroyed a German blockhouse. The French artillery dispersed a German attack on Marie Therese, when the column was attempting to debouch for a charge.

A German battery was destroyed in the region of Lombaertzyde, in Belgium, by the French heavy guns.

Montreal Mayor Charged.

MONTREAL, Feb. 26. — A summons was yesterday issued for Mayor Mederic Martin, M.P., at the request of Samuel Thompson, president of the Hackmen's Protective Association, on a charge that his worship violated a city bylaw by driving in an automobile on Mount Royal. No automobiles are allowed by law on this section of the city.

Mayor Martin has stated as an explanation of his action that as he had given permission to the chauffeur of the Duke of Connaught to drive on the mountain he did not see why he could not grant the same permission to his own driver.

Can Live on Potatoes.

BERLIN, Feb. 26.—The Prussian Minister of Agriculture, Baron von Schorlemer, discussing the food question in the Diet yesterday, said that quantities of potatoes would be brought in from Poland, and that large supplies were left in East Prussia, where the Russians had been.

"I believe I can express the hope," he added, "that the potato supply for human food will suffice."

PRINCE ON FIRING LINE

British Heir Pays Visit to Trenches in France

LONDON, Feb. 26. — The Daily News special correspondent, writing somewhere from France, describes the visit of the Prince of Wales to the firing line. A major led the way, and immediately behind was a short, slight figure, clad in the regulation khaki. He was wearing a "British warm" with collar turned up, and a Sam Brown belt, revolver, etc., outside the coat. His boots were covered with familiar mud and he looked a keen young officer. Following were two or three staff officers. The major explained the nature of the defences at this point, and then from a spy hole pointed out the German lines, about 500 yards distant, with our front line trenches between. Meantime, occasional bullets cracked overhead. The Prince of Wales was actually on the firing line. He listened eagerly to explanations by various officers, and after a stay of a few minutes the party returned.

THE PRINCE OF WALES.

TO REMOVE ALL MINES

Is the Recommendation From United States

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26. — The United States Government has suggested informally to Great Britain and Germany that in the interests of humanity and the safeguarding of legitimate commerce all mines be removed from the high seas except those directly necessary for the protection of coast defences and harbors.

This suggestion, along with proposals designed to obtain Great Britain's acquiescence in a plan to permit the distribution of imported foodstuffs to the civilian populaton of Germany and bring about the abandonment by the latter of its submarine warfare on merchant ships, has been submitted by Great Britain to her allies, France and Russia, for consideration.

Intimations have come to the Washington Government that until the British Government acts and until the attitude of France and Russia is learned no reply can be given to the American proposals. This may require several days.

In the meantime, Germany already has manifested a willingness to make concessions, which gives officials here ground for hope that a conciliatory spirit will be adopted by Great Britain. It can be stated authoritatively that in the American communication made identically to Germany and Great Britain no mention was made by the United States of what course it would pursue in the event of rejection of its proposals. The United States assumed rather the role of mediator in an effort, secretly for the present, to reach an agreement without the embarrassments of public discussion in the belligerent countries, where passions were thought likely to stimulate influences that would defeat impartial consideration of questions involved.

There is every evidence that neutral Governments are working in close harmony with the Washington Government.

Secretary Bryan denied yesterday that an embargo by the United States on exports of foodstuffs was contemplated.

Should Limit Powers.

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—Fearing that the Government bill to validate expenditures of municipalities for patriotic purposes was "giving them a blank check without any check as to spending," Mr. Rowell, K.C., yesterday suggested the amendment of the measure when it appeared for second reading. He made it clear that he was not opposed to the principle of the bill, but claimed that it tended to grant the power to incur obligations without the consent of ratepayers.

Hon. I. B. Lucas acknowledged that the point was a good one, but that it was a very difficult matter to limit municipal authority in his regard. Committee consideration would mould the clauses into shape.

G. A. GILLESPIE TAKES PART IN BUDGET DEBATE

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, the new Liberal member for Peterborough West, and Mr. J. W. Johnson, the Conservative member for West Hastings, carried on the udget debate yesterday afternoon, says the News. Mr. Gillespie wanted to know why it was not as practicable for cities to bonus the adjacent rural communities as it was to bonus the manufacturing industries. He complained of the falling off in the rural population and blamed the government for not appointing a commission some time ago to investigate rural conditions.

Resented Sermon.

Mr. Johnston touched on a number of subjects. He had it in for the clergymen who took an active part in the last provincial election. On the Sunday before election he had taken his family to church and had heard from the pulpit a political diatribe. If he had not been with people who had considerable influence over him he would then and there have asked for the privilege of replying to the statements made against the Conservative party in its relation to the liquor interests. As a result of the campaign carried on in the interests of the policy advocated by Mr. N. W. Rowell, neither Sir Mackenzie Bowell nor himself, or a number of other leading citizens of Belleville had been in a church since the election. It was the preacher's duty to save sinners, but instead of that Mr. Johnson affirmed he had driven them away. (Laughter.) He said that it would be a mistake to do away with licenses, because if they did the province would have no control over the liquor industry and Ontario would be flooded with liquor. While he took a drink himself when he wanted it, Mr. Johnson maintained that he was as good a temperance man as any member of the House.

Raise Big Families.

Mr. Johnson regretted the falling off in the rural population, but laid the blame for it at the doors of the people who led frivolous lives. If they did their duty to the state they would raise big families.

Touching on the navy, the member for West Hastings regretted that Canadians did not have a battleship in the North Sea. He said that it was the great bulwark that saved Canada from Germany as this was the country of which she most desired to gain control. Canada should pay her share for the upkeep of the navy in the same way as men paid their life insurance premiums.

Submarines for Mediterranean.

GENEVA, Feb. 26.—(Via Paris.)—Three new German submarines arrived by railroad Wednesday at Pola, the chief naval station of Austria-Hungary, according to a telegram to The Tribune, and will soon begin operations not only in the Adriatic, but in the Mediterranean.

A despatch from Munich says that Germany is arranging to send several other submarines to Austria.

New York Sailings Suspended.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 26. — All New York sailings have been suspended temporarily by the British Admiralty. All the regular lines booked to sail from Liverpool, London or Glasgow for New York on Saturday are to be held in port.

MR BOWSER'S TWO WEEKS

He Went That Long Without a Row

By M. QUAD

Mr. Bowser sat in his office thinking.

It had been two whole weeks since there was a row in his house.

This was unprecedented.

Was he growing old and absent-minded?

Was he neglecting the things that should not be forgotten?

By neglecting to raise a row wasn't he holding out false hopes to Mrs. Bowser? Wouldn't she soon be taking advantage of his peaceful state of mind?

Hadn't there been two or three indications of late that she wanted to take the bossing of things into her own hands?

Mrs. Bowser was no serf, but there were limits beyond which no wife should be allowed to go.

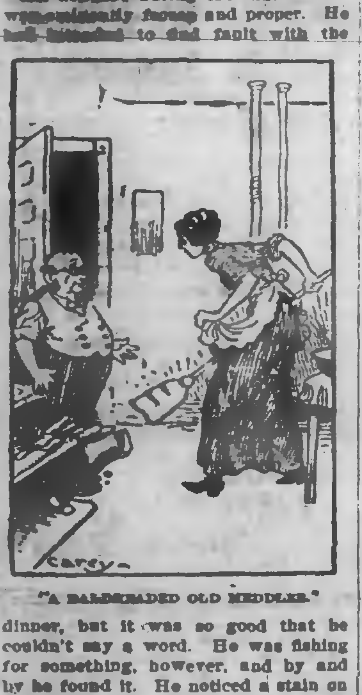
A husband shouldn't be a tyrant, but he should rule his own house and charge his wife with extravagance.

Perhaps a husband should talk things over with his wife, but he shouldn't pay much heed to what she says.

Mr. Bowser made up his mind that he had been remiss and that he must make up for it.

He had his dignity on when he entered the house at the usual hour.

His attitude during the dinner hour was consistently suave and proper. He had intended to find fault with the dinner, but it was so good that he couldn't say a word. He was fishing for something, however, and by and by he found it. He noticed a stain on the carpet and exclaimed:



"A BALDHEADED OLD MEDDLER."

"So the whole house is going to ruin for the want of proper attention! No matter how much I buy, you manage to destroy it."

"What's the matter now?" asked Mrs. Bowser as she turned on him.

"The matter is that you hunted up the ink bottle and poured the contents on this carpet. Look at that spot over there. Nice sight to greet the eye of a husband, isn't it?"

"This carpet is three years old, Mr. Bowser, and that stain has been there for two years. You made it yourself by upsetting a bottle of hair dye, and, though I have used everything I could think of, I have been unable to take it out."

"What! What! You talk that way to me!" he shouted as he sprang up. "Woman, I permit"—

"Sit down!" commanded Mrs. Bowser, as she pointed at him. "Now, then, I want to have a little talk with you. You are dissatisfied as to the way this house is run."

"Yes; I am dissatisfied," replied Mr. Bowser as he sat down in surprise.

"Then why don't you leave it? There is no rope around you—no reason why you should stay here and feel yourself a martyr."

"You—you are talking to me?"

"I'm talking straight at you, sir! Every week or so you raise a row about your shirts, collars or socks. I want you to stop such conduct. If you don't I'll gather them all up and pitch them out the window!"—

"This—this is Mrs. Bowser!" he gasped as he rubbed his eyes and stared at her.

"This is Mrs. Bowser, sir, wife of Mr. Bowser, the biggest crank in America! She has put up with your nagging just as long as she can. If there is any more of it you will hear something drop! There are a few little things that I want to speak about. You always find fault with the gas bill no matter whether it is more or less. You either quit that or we'll turn to tallow candles. I don't inhale the gas or give it to beggars!"

"Say," said Mr. Bowser as he looked around the room to see if he was in his own house—"say, I—I"—

"And the coal," she continued as she waved him to silence. "Coal is so much per ton. We burn about so much per month. I don't eat it or trade it off for caramels, and yet you raise a row every two or three weeks about the coal bill. If I hear another word from you this winter about coal I'll put out every fire and turn this house into a cold storage establishment!"

That was Mrs. Bowser sitting there before him—the same Mrs. Bowser whom he had bulldozed and browbeaten for years and years—and she was now talking to him in that fashion. It was the same woman sure enough, but he looked at her as one in a dream, and her words seemed to come from far away.

"I buy the meat and groceries," she continued, "and I buy as economically as I can. I save at least 15 per cent more than you could, and yet you are always finding fault. I am tired of it. You either cease to talk or I cease to buy. You are also constantly meddling with the kitchen help and thereby usurping my authority. If you think you can run the kitchen then stay home and do it. The best girl I have had for a year left me yesterday because you were always poking your nose in the kitchen."

"P-poke-poking my nose?" murmured Mr. Bowser as he grew white around the mouth.

"That's what I said. You thought yourself a philanthropist when you sneaked down and said it was too bad she had to work for a living, but she called you a baldheaded old meddler!"

"She—she called me that, did she? Why, the—the"—

"And here's another thing, Mr. Bowser. You come home and want to play cards to pass away the evenings. We sit down to play, and because I beat you three or four straight games you get mad and kick things about and wish you had spent the evening at the club. I don't know where your club is or what it is like, but any time you prefer it to my society don't hesitate on my account. As a matter of fact, you hardly know one card from another and should take lessons from me for two or three months. However, as I shall never play with you again it's a matter of indifference."

Mr. Bowser rose up and gasped. Then he sat down and choked. Mrs. Bowser could see his lips moving, but no sound came from them.

"And you talk about my extravagance in clothes," she said as she looked him up and down. "Yes, that is a pet hobby of yours, and yet you know you spend more for cocktails than I do for gloves, more for cigars than I do for shoes, more for worthless patent medicines than I do for dresses. There isn't a husband in the state earning $30 per week whose wife does not dress like a queen compared to me. You have got to stop throwing away money and turn it over to me to dress on!"

"Woman—w-o-m-a-n!" Mr. Bowser managed to gasp, but she pointed her finger and said:

"Once in a great while you open your heart and give me a dollar for pin money, but you expect it to last me for three months. I want to change right here and now. I want a weekly allowance, and a liberal one at that! You simply drink fewer cocktails and smoke fewer cigars and I'll take the money! It's a favorite theory of yours that no woman can be trusted with money, but if I can't make 75 cents go further than your dollar I'll be willing to mend my own shoes!"

Mr. Bowser got up to walk about, but his knees wabbled so that he had to sit down again.

"There's another thing, while we are talking matters over. Whenever you get mad at me you talk divorce, alimony and all that. If you want a divorce from me go and file your application, and I won't contest it. I'm young enough and good looking enough to find another husband in a year or two, and I'll take care he isn't a crank! As to alimony, I've helped you to make all you have, and I shall want half of it. If there's a separation one of us will have to leave this house, and it won't be me, Mr. Bowser! I think this is about all. I am now going up to my room, and should anybody call you will say that I am not at home. Should you wish to talk with me on any subject we have missed just come upstairs and give three raps on the door, but I think we have gone into matters pretty thoroughly."

She vanished upstairs, and then Mr. Bowser sat with his head in his hands and thought and pondered for the next half hour. He couldn't make it out, try as he would, and when Mrs. Bowser came downstairs at midnight she found him asleep on the lounge with a tear in the corner of either eye.

So far as we now recall, our first real appreciation of the fact that we should always be kind and courteous to representatives of the other sex, as in some respects less fortunate than we, came when we noticed that the little girl across the aisle had no warts on her hands, whereas we were the proud possessor of seven fine big ones.—Columbus Journal.

FACTS ABOUT ARTILLERY GUNS

What the Terms "Quick Firer," "Inch" Guns and "Pounders" Mean

To the average man such phrases as "three pounders" and "six inch" guns are familiar, but he nearly always reads them without fully understanding their meanings.

A pound gun is a cannon which receives its name from the weight of the shell it fires. Thus a gun known as a "three pounder" is so called because it fires a shell which weighs three pounds, and a gun firing a five pound shell would be called a "five pounder." The size of most small guns is still described by the "pound," but the majority of large guns made today are "inch" weapons. In this case the size of the gun is obtained from the size of its bore, a ten inch gun having a bore of ten inches in diameter and a twelve inch weapon a twelve inch bore.

The largest British naval guns in use at present are the fifteen inch weapons. They fire a projectile weighing almost a ton. Next to these comes the 13.5 gun and then the most popular weapon of all—the twelve inch, which fires an 850 pound shell.

There are several smaller kinds of guns now in use—mostly of the quick firing type. These weapons are "inch" guns. The six inch, the 4.7 inch and the four inch are all quick firers and throw shells weighing 100 pounds, forty-five pounds and thirty-one pounds respectively.

Quite a lot of people misunderstand the term "quick firer." They imagine a quick firing gun to be a weapon which pours out a stream of shot with enormous speed after the style of a Maxim. Instead, however, it is just an ordinary breechloading gun, which is fitted with such vastly improved methods of loading and aiming that it can be fired far more rapidly than a weapon without those fittings. A gun that fires a number of shots automatically in rapid succession, as the Maxim, is not called a quick firer. The name given to it is "machine gun." There are a large range of these weapons of all sizes and firing from 1,200 right down to forty rounds of ammunition a minute.

The gun which generally accompanies a column into the field on active service fires a shell of sixty pounds and is known as the "five inch," or, to use the old term, a "sixty pounder."—Pearson's Weekly.

Papal Sermons Rare.

Strange are the restrictions which hedge about a pope, and one of the strangest is that he should not be allowed to preach. Only once in 300 years has a pope delivered a sermon, and that was under exceptional circumstances in 1846. On the Octave of the Epiphany a celebrated preacher, Padre Ventura, was to have occupied the pulpit in St. Peter's, but was suddenly taken ill. To prevent disappointment to the vast crowd which had assembled Pius IX. broke through the custom of ages and, ascending the pulpit, delivered a simple, homely sermon that perhaps impressed its hearers more than the finest eloquence might have done, because of its uniqueness.—London Chronicle.

Judging a Cow.

A cow with a bright eye is to be preferred to one with a dull appearance. She will tend to business more than the other; also the one with large nostrils is to be preferred because the large nostrils indicate that she will always have a good supply of air to operate her lungs and so her other bodily functions will be performed promptly and regularly. A good cow will have short legs, and they will be smooth and without extra meat.

OLD TIME DETECTIVE WORK

By EVERETT P. CLARKE.

I have been a detective for many years, though now that I am getting old I seldom take a case, and then only one that promises to interest me. My leisure time I spend in study. And what do you suppose is the subject of my studies? I will tell you. I am searching the past when there were no detectives that I may learn how criminals were traced.

I have found a succession of conditions, beginning with confession by torture—to this may be added confession by influence of the clergy—and ending with our present highly perfected detective system. I regret to say that there still exists one relic of the practice of obtaining confessions by influence of the clergy. I refer to securing them by means of the "third degree."

A curious instance of confession I have found in a record of the latter part of the eighteenth century.

During the year 1790 an altercation occurred between James Thorpe and Pardon Winston in Bradford, a small town in Massachusetts. Robert Thorpe, a brother of James, came on to the scene while the fight was in progress and struck Winston on the head with a piece of wood, knocking him senseless. However, he revived in a few minutes, and the brothers, who had been friends of Winston, frightened lest he had been killed, assisted him to his home, expressing great regret at the occurrence.

Winston did not seem any the worse for the blow he had received and remained in Bradford some time after the scuffle. But one day he was missed, and, when months passed and he did not show up, among the various causes for his disappearance that were suggested was one that the quarrel between him and the Thorpe brothers had been renewed and the missing man had come to his death through their instrumentality.

However, since there was nothing but inference in the matter, the suspicion died down. Several years after Winston's disappearance Abner Twitchell, a citizen of Bradford, dreamed one night that the ghost of Winston had appeared to him and said that the Thorpe brothers had killed him, burned his body and buried the residue under a beech tree, the only tree standing in the back yard of his home. Twitchell gave the civil authorities an account of his dream.

At this point in my narrative it is well to remember the conditions of that period. The belief in witchcraft that had reaped so many victims had died out among educated persons, but still prevailed among the lower classes. Today a belief in revelation by dreams, though not what it was then, is not entirely extinct.

The Thorpe brothers were arrested, the ground about the roots of the beech tree was dug up, and some buttons and the metal parts of a pair of suspenders were found. This evidence was considered so strong that the Thorpe brothers were urged to confess in order that justice should be meted out to each in accordance with what he deserved. James, under the incessant pleadings of his spiritual adviser, finally gave way and confessed that he had been the murderer. But later Robert confessed that he, too, had taken part in the killing and had done the principal part in getting rid of the body.

Now, if we consider the evidence in this case as it would be regarded today there is nothing in it. First, we would not accept the dream as of any value whatever; second, the articles found under the beech tree might have been thrown out in the yard or burned with other refuse under the tree and become mingled with the soil; third, we have numerous confessions in murder cases that are not true.

But in those days, when the people were emerging from a period wherein an organized court of justice would convict a woman of vomiting crooked pins and sailing on the water in a sieve, the evidence against the Thorpe brothers, backed by the confession of both, was considered quite sufficient to hang them. They were tried, convicted and sentenced.

One day a man rode into Bradford and while sitting around the tavern stove was told that the next day there would be a hanging in the town and he had better remain over and see it. On mention of the name of Winston he said that he had seen a half witted man in Hadley of that name. A friend of the Thorpe boys was present, and he went to the judge with the story, asking for a stay of the execution in order that the matter might be investigated.

A constable was sent to Hadley and returned with the man for whose murder the prisoners were to have been hanged. The brothers were released and received an ovation, the townspeople really rejoicing that they had been saved by a mere chance from having committed murder themselves.

The blow that Winston had received from Robert Thorpe had caused an indentation of a bit of his skull on the brain. Even nowadays we are never sure when or what vagaries may be caused by such a pressure, though it can now be removed by surgeons. Whether the surgical process of trepanning was done in those days or not I don't know. I found no record of the subsequent condition of the injured man.

COST OF A THUNDERBOLT.

What It Would Take In Kilowatts and Cash to Make One.

A Belgian engineer has been making a novel calculation, which he publishes in the Bulletin de la Societe Belge d'Astronomie. It is nothing less than the value of a thunderbolt in kilowatts and in cash!

He took as the basis of his calculation the price that the electric plants of great European cities charge their customers for current.

Measurement of the magnetism of certain rocks containing iron ore, he says, proves that the electric current which magnetized them must have had a strength of at least 6,000 amperes. In reality the strength of the current must have been much greater, since the rocks were at a considerable distance from the spot at which the thunderbolt fell. However, one must be conservative in treating of such matters, and the modest figure of 27,800 kilowatts may be taken as fairly correct.

The lowest price at which current can be supplied industrially when obtained under the most favorable conditions—that is to say, by hydraulic power—is one-fifth of a cent per kilowatt. So the minimum value of a thunderbolt would be $55.60.

But the author notes that in Brussels, where he lives, the price of electricity is 10 cents a kilowatt. This is the price of current for ordinary household use in New York. At this figure a thunderbolt would come to $2,980. As the price of electricity varies very widely in different cities, according to the conditions under which it is produced, every one can calculate for himself what it would cost to produce a thunderbolt in the city in which he lives.—New York World.

HOCKEY CURLING ATHLETICS

VARSITY WINNERS BY FOUR GOALS

Midgets Made the Collegians go the Limit to Win in Semi-finals

TORONTO, Feb. 26. — Varsity earned the right to go into the junior O. H. A. finals and meet the winner of the Collingwood-Berlin game by beating Lindsay last night in the last of the home-and-home games by the score of 12-7, thus giving them the round by four goals, as Lindsay defeated the Collegians at Lindsay by the score of 4 to 3.

The visitors gave Varsity a stiffer argument than was expected, and the game was not decided till the last period. Varsity led at the end of the first period by the score of 3 to 2, thus making it a tie on the round, while at the end of the 40 minutes' play the locals were in front by the score of 6 to 4, although they should have been further ahead with the opportunities they were having.

It was practically a six-man game, as after the first four minutes there were only twelve men on the ice. Haugh, the Lindsay defence player, received a slight cut on the forehead, taking Gouinlock off with him. He was out watching the game shortly after, but at the end of the first period refused to go on, as he claimed his stomach was upset. The referee was helpless under the conditions, and the teams remained six men a side.

The visitors presented a very heavy junior aggregation, who displayed good combination, although painfully slow in their efforts at times. They had plenty of speed, but failed to utilise it, owing to their slow breaking. Their strongest forte was their shooting, A. Carew at left wing having one of the best wrist shots seen around here by any junior in a long time. McElroy at centre and Sandercock were the pick of the others while O'Loughlin in goal did some great blocking. Flavelle on the defence is a tall, rangy player and a hard man to get by.

Lindsay played a peculiar game. In the second and third periods they played only one man back on the defence. The result was that when Varsity broke away together they had only one man and the goalkeeper to beat. Many times they were right in on O'Loughlin and then failed to bulge the net by their inaccurate shooting. Had they scored every time they got right in on O'Loughlin the score would have been more than tripled.

It was an interesting and clean exhibition outside of a few minor trips. Both teams played the puck with the Varsity defence being especially strong in their poke checking. Saunders and Stratton did good work on the offensive for the Collegians, this pair getting eight of the goals between them. The teams:

Varsity — Goal, Malone; defence, Sheldon and Ramsay; rover, Gouinlock; centre, Smythe; right, Stratton; left, Gouinlock.

Lindsay — Goal, O'Loughlin; defence, Flavelle and Haugh; rover, C. Carew; centre, McElroy; right,

"Say, old chap, lend me a dollar, will you?"

After complying the lender suddenly has his memory refreshed.

"Look here!" he declared to the borrower the next moment. "Come to think of it, I lent you a dollar over a year ago and you never returned it!"

"That was odd."

"What was odd?"

"Dollar No. 1."

"What of it?"

"Well, this is dollar No. 2; that makes it even. See?"

BOWLING

In one of the worst exhibitions of bowling that has been given in the Y.M.C.A. Bowling League this year, the Gladiators who gave the Brighten-Ups a 33 pin handicap per game were successful in carrying off the large number of two out of three games. They were featured by the low rolling of men from each team and when the smoke had all cleared away it was easily seen that the Brighten-Ups could not be beaten for low scoring. Following is the score which some of the men did not want to be published.

STUDENTS GET DEGREES.

Toronto University Men Going to the Front Given Rare Honor.

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—For the first time since the university company in the Queen's Own Rifles left in 1885, to assist in quelling the Northwest Rebellion, Varsity students were given their degrees clad in the King's uniform. The ceremony was witnessed in Convocation Hall yesterday afternoon, when forty-four students of the graduating year were given their degrees prior to their departure for the front. Every available seat in Convocation Hall was occupied long before the ceremony commenced. Students of all faculties gathered to pay their respects to the men who had left the college halls to don a uniform. The members of the faculty filled the platform, with the officers of the university battalion in uniform.

Of the total number of degrees granted twenty-three went to fifth medical students, most of whom will be attached to the clearing hospital in France. Dean Clarke presented wrist watches to the third, fourth and fifth year men who were leaving for the front, on behalf of the wives of the members of the medical faculty.

No trace has yet been found of the negro hold-up who robbed and shot Mr. William Lindsay in the village of Ridgeway. It is thought he made good his escape to the United States.

"Scientific Police."

The University of Lausanne (Switzerland) has a faculty named the "Scientific Police Department." It is on the same footing as the classical and scientific faculties, and is the only one of its kind attached to any university in the world.

At the head of the "Scientific Police" is Prof. R. A. Reiss, who, by reason of his wonderful deductive work in tracing crime and criminals has obtained a world-wide reputation in the inner police circles of the world's capitals. He is also widely known as the "Swiss Sherlock Holmes," and has often been consulted by the Berlin, Vienna, London and Paris police departments. He has just returned from Brazil, where he went at the request of the Brazilian Government to reorganize the whole police system.

Wisdom From Inexperience.

Mr. Brown met Mr. Jones.

"Any news, Brown?" asked Jones.

"Nothing special. I've just been reading the Sunday paper, and I find one peculiar thing in it that may be news to you."

"What is it?"

"The Sunday paper says that women in ancient Egypt used to act as they pleased, live as they pleased and dress as they pleased without regard to what the men thought. Lucky we don't live in those times, what?"

"Mr. Brown, are you married?"

"What has that got to do with it? As a matter of fact, I'm not."

"I thought not."

DUMDUM BULLETS

Dumdum bullets have their name from a little town in India, near Calcutta, where the ammunition factory for the British government in India is situated. For the benefit of Afghans, possible Indian mutineers, negroes and other barbarians the British had a bullet manufactured here which is half covered with steel, but with a soft leaden nose. When discharged from a modern rifle of high power this soft nose expands, or "mushrooms," turning the bullet in the air into a horrible bulging object, which tears through the flesh of a man, surely bleeding him to death.

The purpose of this bullet is to kill the man every time. The purpose of the ordinary humane bullet of modern warfare, which is wholly incased in steel or nickel, is merely to put the man out of the fight. It makes a small, clean wound. If it does not strike a vital part the bullet may go entirely through the man without wounding him seriously. But it abuts him out of the fight for the time being.

The British military authorities in India considered that a humane bullet like that would be of little use to fight savages with, and therefore, at Dumdum, they manufactured the soft nosed expanding horror. But the international conference at The Hague in 1899 decided against the use of this bullet in war and adopted a rule forbidding it.—New York Mail.

CHARLOTTE ST. POLES.

In the endeavor to have the Bell Telephone Co.'s poles removed off Charlotte Street and have them placed in lanes and private property, several property owners have signified their unwillingness to permit the poles to be placed on their property without consideration. At last night's meeting of the Board of Works the chairman and Mayor Buller were appointed as a special committee to approach the property owners in question and report to the next meeting of the board.

JOINT MEETING TO BRING IN REPORT ON SCHEME TO INSURE EMPLOYES OF CITY

City Solicitor Gordon had a communication before the Board of Works last evening, in which he explained how the Compensation Act affected the Board of Works Department. Ald. Green, the chairman of the board, said it is up to the city to do something along the line of insuring its workmen. Although a manufacturer himself, he agreed largely with the step the Provincial Government took when the Compensation Act was passed. He did not believe the city could afford to go on the same as it has been.

City Clerk Armstrong reported that the same matter is being discussed by the Utilities Commission, and that body was willing to go in with the Council in any scheme that appeared feasible.

Ald. Green urged that the matter be threshed out at an early date, as the work being performed on the outfall sewer is exceedingly dangerous.

It was decided that the chairmen of the Board of Works, Finance Committee, Fire, Water and Light Committee and Property Committee act as a committee to go into the matter carefully and prepare a report to be presented at a special meeting of the Council to be called in the near future.

HALF PAY OF SOLDIERS TO DEPENDENTS

Unless Objection of the Soldier is Upheld

The finance committee of the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund Association and Peterborough Relief Association has received the following report of the committee of the privy council:—

"The committee of the privy council have had before them a report dated 18th January, 1915, from the acting Minister of Militia and Defence, stating that many of the soldiers of the First Overseas Contingent, whose dependants are in receipt of separation allowances, have not assigned any pay to these latter, and that the committee of the Patriotic Fund complain that this drain will be heavier when the additional troops now being raised are sent away.

That at a meeting of the executive committee of the Patriotic Fund held in Ottawa on the 13th November, 1914, a resolution was passed recommending the government to issue an order requiring all non-commissioned officers and men, whose dependants are in receipt of separation allowance, to contribute one-half of their pay to these dependants. Such an order has been issued by the British Government in respect of army troops.

That this matter having been referred to the Department of Justice, the Honorable the Minister of that Department has caused to be drafted the following:—

> "That one half of the pay earned by non-commissioned officers and men who are members of the Overseas Expeditionary Force of Canada and whose dependents are in receipt of separation allowances, shall be paid to such dependents respectively unless upon the objection of any such non-commissioned officer or man the government see fit, in view of the government see fit, in view of the special facts or circumstances of any case, to pay the full amount to the non-commissioned officer or man by whom the pay is earned."

The Minister, having regard to the foregoing recommends that one-half of the pay earned by non-commissioned forces of Canada, be paid to dependents under conditions as set forth in the preceding paragraph, the same to have effect from 1st April, 1915."

TENDERS FOR SEWER PIPE AND CEMENT

At the meeting of the Board of Works last evening tenders were received as follows for supplying sewer pipe for the year:—

H. B. Taylor and Son, 73 per cent. and 5 per cent. off list price for straight pipe, and 70 per cent. and 2 per cent. off list price for fittings. Toronto Sewer Pipe Co., 75 per cent. and 2 per cent. off list price.

On motion of Ald. Saunders and Weir the tender of H. B. Taylor and Son was accepted.

The tender for supplying the cement to the city for the year were:—

Peterborough Hardware Co., per barrel of 550 lbs., $1.46, storage room at 2 cents per barrel.

H. B. Taylor and Son, per barrel of 550 lbs., $1.47.

The tender of the Peterborough Hardware Co. was accepted.

Recommendations of the Grand Jury

That an inspection of the fire protection and fire escapes of all public buildings should be made at once with attention being particularly directed to the House of Refuge, Protestant Home and House of Providence and the Children's Shelter which is without protection whatever was the first recommendation made by the grand jury in their presentment to Mr. Justice Britton, the presiding judge at the Supreme Court, which was brought to a close last night.

The presentment continues:—

A girl named Duncan, age about 16 years, who was sentenced to one year in the Mercer Reformatory is at present in the gaol and has been there five and a half months. She is pregnant and about to be confined. She should be removed to where she could be given proper care.

Two old men apparently insane are confined in rooms on the third floor of the House of Refuge. One of these men is totally blind. They should be removed to the ground floor.

In the House of Refuge on the third floor there is an uncovered water tank about 8 feet by 8 feet by 5 feet. This tank should be covered.

Mr. and Mrs. Beavis, the caretakers of the House of Refuge, deserve great credit for the manner in which the house has been kept.

We found all other public institutions save as mentioned above, well run and in good condition.

Foreman Grand Jury.

DEPUTATION WAITED ON MINISTERS

In Regard to Another Bridge Across Otonabee River

Ottawa, Feb. 26.—A deputation from South Monaghan and Otonabee townships interviewed Hon. Robert Rogers and Hon. Frank Cochrane today regarding a new bridge below the Peterborough locks. The deputation which was accompanied by J. H. Burnham, M.P., was introduced by J. H. Sexsmith, M.P., East Peterborough. Warden Kindred and Messrs. Deyell and Matchett placed the matter before the ministers.

Hon. Frank Cochrane asked if the locks bridge was to be given up and the swing saved. If so the department might consider a new high level bridge.

Hon. Mr. Rogers said that as the Highways Bill had been killed by the senate the government had no money for the purpose.

COL. BRENNAN WRITES FROM SOUTH AFRICA

Daily Routine of Fatigues and Outpost Work With Occasional Scrap

Lt.-Col. Brenan, whose recent elevation to the command of a regiment in South Africa was noted in the Review, has written to his sister, Mrs. A. Brault, of Norwood. Col. Brennan gives an interesting description of the country as follows:

If you take up your geography and look at the map of Africa you will find just on the tropic of Capricorn the spot marked Walfish Bay. At this place I landed on Christmas morning. I cannot, of course, give you any idea of the number of troops here or tell you anything of the operations of war, but I can tell you something of the country about us and incidents of our daily lives.

This is, of course, the hot season of the southern hemisphere, and you would naturally think that we should be suffering much from the heat, but as a matter of fact our weather since we landed here has been delightful; days warm but freshened by the sea breezes; nights quite cool. No rain ever falls here, so I am told, but there is a heavy mist in the early morning that is like a fine rain, and the ground is then quite damp and wet. Sometimes the wind is high and then the sand blows about us and things are not so pleasant, but so far there have been but two nights that the wind was so bad as to be distinctly disagreeable.

Picture to yourself a sandy flat surrounded by sand dunes — you can imagine what these sand dunes are like, in all probability, if you look at the huge snowdrifts you are getting, I suppose, just now, and just imagine them to be of sand and many times larger. There is no vegetation except a course kind of bush called "Narra," and which bears a sort of melon, very bitter, but eaten, I believe, by the natives. Such is the country about us, and here we live, some of us in tents and some in holes dug in the sand, while all about are our trenches and blockhouses erected by us for protection from attack.

Our daily life is one of fatigues and outpost work, with the occasional scrap that provides the variety that soldiers desire. Our casualties up to the present have fortunately been small, but the heavy work will come later.

Galley 82—— Brennan writes— MHM

There is no animal life here, no food growing for game to feed upon. Black and white crows, flamingos and sea fowl are about us but I have not seen many varieties, and fish are to be had by those who may go down to the sea and fish. Just at present we are getting the benefit of a peculiar occurrence that repeats itself annually in January, viz., a shoal of fishes that come ashore with the tide and that can be picked up on the sand as the tide recedes.

The Port of Walfish is a very small place, about a dozen houses in all, and two miles from it is the whaling station. Whales are quite common in these waters, but of course all whaling operations have ceased since the war began. The German town of Swakopmund you will see marked on the coast, 23 miles north of Walfish. We had some men killed there today in attacking that place, but captured it all right.

Personally, I am feeling all right, I am of course burnt by the hot sun, and am a good mahogany color down to the collar line, and up to the elbows, for the sleeves are usually rolled up, my men too have kept well, perhaps because I give an especial eye to the sanitary condition of my lines.

I am sorry that I cannot give you more details of our work, but such is not permitted. When, however, news is too old to be of use to the enemy, if he gets it, we can write about these events. So I can send you news that will not be old to you, I suppose, from time to time.

Well send on the news to our mother and the rest. I can more safely send news to you than to United States. I have not seen a Canadian paper for months. We spent two months in the field in the Transvaal and Orange Free State, and it is nearly a month since we left Capetown on this expedition. Love to all the folks at home

Your brother, Fred.

A SHORT COURSE AT ENNISMORE

The short course in agriculture, which has been held in the parish hall at Ennismore for the past six weeks, was brought to a close this week. The course has been a decided success in every way. A great deal of credit for the course being such a success can be claimed by Messrs. McRae and McDowell of Norwood, who are district representatives of the Department of Agriculture. Besides the regular teachers, seven or eight specialists from the Agricultural College at Guelph were present and spoke.

LOCAL PHYSICIANS HAVE QUALIFIED

Two local physicians, Dr. Frederick and Dr. Kelly have qualified themselves for army medical corps service, having been in Kingston for the past few weeks taking a course in that particular work.

Dr. Frederick accompanied by Dr. Kelly came back today. The former stated that they did not expect to be called to the front, as a great many physicians throughout the province had volunteered and qualified and consequently it would be difficult to secure an appointment.

Should the call come they would both be prepared.

Jury Return Verdict of Not Guilty After Thirty Minutes Deliberation

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Feb. 27. — The jury, after being out thirty minutes, returned a verdict in the Carrie Davies murder trial of "Not guilty."

The verdict was received with cheers and the court room had to be cleared.

TORONTO, Feb. 27. — In addressing the jury in the case of Carrie Davies, on trial for killing Albert Massey, the prisoner's counsel, Hartley Dewart, said this morning if they could not find criminal intent—and there was no evidence of any—they must reduce the charge from murder to manslaughter, as it was in their competence to do, but he would ask them to go further and find that there was justification, and acquit the girl. Threatened assault which she feared would be "grievous bodily harm" within the meaning of the statute, and if she believed that her honor was at stake, they must acquit her. If she had not defended herself, she would have been an outcast. It was not manslaughter, it was brute slaughter.

"She a murderess?" continued Mr. Dewart. "No, indeed; rather a heroine."

As counsel drew a pathetic picture of the home in Bedfordshire, where a widowed mother with five children waited for the message from the jury, the prisoner silently wept.

Crown Counsel Du Vernet asked the jury not to let their sympathies go too far. The killing of a defenceless man on the street who was not making any assault at the time is culpable homicide. According to the evidence of the prisoner, Massey had committed an offence for which, on conviction, he would probably have got six months, but he got the death penalty.

The case went to the jury at 11.45, after Chief Justice Sir William Mulock had summed up dispassionately, pointing out to the jury the difference between murder, manslaughter and justifiable homicide. His Lordship was deeply affected and almost broke down in the middle of his address.

CORONERS JURY WILL INQUIRE INTO DEATH OF MISS HELEN BROWN

The Authorities Deem an Investigation Necessary Owing to Suspicous Circumstances

That unfortunate and mysterious circumstances of a suspicious character, surround the death of eighteen-year old Helen Brown who died on Thursday morning seems to be borne out by the action of the authorities in deeming an investigation of the cause of death necessary. This action was instituted last night when Coroner Dr. Greer empanelled a jury and had the body viewed in Comstock's undertaking parlors after which they adjourned till Monday night at eight o'clock. A post mortem examination was ordered which was performed this morning.

Though shrouded in secrecy certain facts have leaked out which tend to indicate that Helen Brown, who was a stenographer and an orphan, came to her death from other causes than a weak heart, the cause first stated.

Came Here Last April.

It is known that she came to Peterborough to reside last April from near Boston, Mass. Her parents being dead, she made her home with an uncle, Mr. A. W. Patterson, who lives on Cameron Street. For the last few months she was a student at the Peterborough Business College and had completed a commercial course. About two weeks ago it is stated that she left her uncle's home for some reason and went to live with a girl friend on Hunter Street. There she was taken ill and later passed away from the effects of what is said to have been an operation performed upon her, by other than a physician. Before the girl died two doctors were called in but their attempts to prolong life were unsuccessful.

Circumstances Were Suspicious.

Chief of Police Thompson received notification of the suspicious circumstances attending the girl's death and got in touch with Crown Attorney Hatton and Dr. Greer was informed. A consultation was held late yesterday afternoon the outcome of which was the decision that an inquest was advisable to get at the bottom of the affair. At the coroner's inquest last evening after the jurors had viewed the body of the girl, Coroner Greer stated that there was no evidence to present but owing to the fact that there were suspicious circumstances surrounding the girl's death the authorities had thought it well to hold an inquest. He had deemed it best [illegible] post-mortem examination performed and had asked Dr. Eastwood who was experienced in such operations to perform it. The crown attorney had the privilege of naming a physician to assist. As there had bene a couple of doctors called in on the case to attend the deceased before her death, he thought it unwise that either of them should be asked to assist. They would however be subpoenaed as witnesses for the inquest Monday night.

The jurors are R. Deane, foreman; J. M. White, John Alexander, Jos. Picard, Wm. Martin, C. B. Routley, John Allan, George Evans, H. J. McCannon, F. C. Cubitt, Jas. A. McWilliams and Thomas Henry.

The adjourned inquest will take place at eight o'clock in the police court room Monday night.

The funeral of the late Miss Brown was held this afternoon from the home of her uncle, Mr. A. W. Patterson, Cameron street, with service at the house, at two-thirty. Rev. Jas. Rollins, of St. Andrew's, conducted both services.

PETITION THE GOVERNMENT

Churches Want an Amendment to Act Respecting Garbage

In a comprehensively worded petition, the Ministerial Association of this city are memorializing Hon. W. H. Hearst, Premier of the province, for an amendment to the Garbage Act, making the churches exempt from taxation, by declaring that the act was not intended to apply to churches.

In the petition there is set forth that the twenty churches in Peterborough are valued at about $750,000, and that the assessment laid upon them, of one mill on the dollar, to cover the cost of garbage removal is excessive.

Churches Do It Cheaper.

The said churches in 1913 and 1914 removed the ashes which is the only garbage they make, in the spring of each year. The garbage collectors never called for garbage and removed none, yet the city is exacting the assessment. The cost to each of the churches to remove their garbage was less than $10 per annum, but the assessment laid upon them by the city was about twelve times the actual average cost when done by themselves.

Similar petitions to this effect from other Ontario cities are being addressed to Premier Hearst.

Major Hal Rogers and Capt. Guy Rogers Receive Important Appointments

Word has been received in the city that Major Hal Rogers, who until lately has been in the War Office, London, has been sent to France on Gen. French's staff, and that Capt. Guy Rogers has received the appointment of staff officer commanding at Simla, India.

They are sons of the late Colonel H. C. Rogers and nephews of Miss Burritt, Water street. Both are graduates of the Royal Military College, Kingston.

Peterborough friends and acquaintances, and there are many, will be very much pleased at this announcement, carrying with it, as it does, very important appointments. Major Rogers has been mentioned in despatches from Sir John French, for distinguished service.

LENGTH OF FIRE HOSE WAS LOST

Radial Railway Company Have Refused to Pay

After six o'clock one evening some two or three weeks ago fire broke out in Cowan's Studio on Charlotte street. The brigade was called and a line of hose strung from a hydrant on the east side of George Street. A street car coming north on George Street run over the hose cutting it in two and thereby destroying the fifty foot length. The city requested the Peterborough Radial Railway Co. to pay for the hose and at last night's meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee the reply of W. H. Munro, manager of the Radial Co. was heard. He pointed out how the motorman on the car had no warning whatsoever that a fire was in progress, no policeman had been stationed at the corner to protect the hose and as the hose was about the same color as the snow the motorman had very little opportunity to see it stretched across the track. For these reasons he declined to pay for the hose.

Position Justified.

Several of the aldermen felt that the position taken by the manager of the Radial Railway Co. was justified and it was decided to have the letter received, or in other words let the matter drop. Mayor Buller expressed himself as being in favor of having Chief of Police Thompson send a man to every fire the brigade answers and the duty of this man would be to protect the hose and apparatus and control the crowd. Other members of the committee thought the suggestion a good one and Chief Howard was instructed to take the matter up with Chief Thompson.

Accounts Settled.

Ald. Duffus reported that City Treasurer Frank Adams, W. H. Munro of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. and he had held a joint meeting and all the standing accounts between the city and the company which have been hanging fire for a long time had been cleared up with the exception of an account of $5.00 the company claims to have against the city for permitting the city employes to use their tower wagon. Ald. Duffus stated that he intended having Mr. Munro come before the council and get the matter cleared away. Ald Green said the money was not owing to the company and he voted against paying it last year, would vote against paying it this year and will vote against paying it if he is in the council next year.

SILVER TRAY FOR MAJOR S. T. MEDD

Is Honored by the Members of Local Bar Association

Hearty cheers in quick succession coming from the law offices of Mr. R. R. Hall in the Bank of Commerce building about five-thirty last evening had occupants of the adjacent offices guessing. It was one way of conveying to Major Medd the feelings entertained by fellow members of the Peterborough Law Association towards him, and of bidding him good-bye ere he leaves with the Third Canadian Contingent for overseas service.

He was presented with a handsome silver tray upon which was engraved the following:—

"Presented by the Peterborough Bar Association to Major S. T. Medd, O. C. "B." Squadron, C.M.R.; Canadian Expeditionary Force, 1915."

Was Sincerely Eulogized.

Major Medd did not know how highly he stood in the esteem of the association until he entered the room. Eulogistic but sincere addresses were made by Mr. D. W. Dumble, the oldest member of the association, and also by Mr. R. R. Hall, who has been in partnership with the departing officer for twelve years. Their words conveyed to Major Medd their genuine appreciation and admiration of his conduct and courage in the present great crisis.

In looking over the pages of history said Mr. Dumble one could not help but revere most the men who had made the greatest sacrifices. It was such that stood highest in the country's estimation.

Referring to his own military qualifications Mr. Dumble genially remarked that there was a failing in his military structure, not in his head however but in his shins. He believed that Major Medd ranked high in the respect of the profession and the community.

Amicable Relationship.

Mr. R. R. Hall in a few eloquent remarks bore testimony to the con-

Burning Liquid Sprayed by Enemy Drives Men From Trench but Counter Attack Checks Attempted Advance

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 27. — This afternoon's official statemnet says: "There is no change to report in the situation from the sea to the Aisne. In Champagne nothing has developed since yesterday's communication.

"Our artillery in the Argonne exploded an ammunition depot near St. Hubert. In a wood near Melincourt, between the Argonne and the Meuse, the enemy again sprayed one of our advanced trenches with burning liquid, necessitating an abandonment of the trench, the occupants of which were seriously burned. A counter-attack immediately checked the Germans, who suffered losses, including a number of prisoners.

"In the region of Voidun and on the heighths of the Meuse our heavy artillery wrecked some German guns, exploded about twenty ammunition waggons, annihilated a detachment, and destroyed an entire camp.

"In the Bois Brule the battle continues to our advantage."

BRITISH SHIP TORPEDOED IN CHANNEL.

DISASTER TO SUBMARINE U-9.

CHRISTIANIA, Feb. 27. — Wreckage picked up near Christiania seems to indicate a disaster to the German submarine U-9 which was reported as long ago as November 1st by a Dutch trawler to be in a disabled condition off the coast of Holland. She has not been heard of lately. It was the U-9 which sank the Hogue, Cressy and Aboukir on September 22nd, and the Hawke on October 10th.

MANY PRISONERS FROM NEW GERMAN CORPS.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 27. — The official news agency says that many prisoners have been captured belonging to the newly-formed German Fortieth Army Corps. The large number of prisoners taken was owing to the suddenness of the Russian attack and the inexperience of the German officers. Prisoners say their corps sustained very grave losses.

PREMIER SALANDRA IS APPLAUDED.

ROME, Feb. 27. — Premier Salandra, in the chamber of deputies yesterday, defended the issue of instructions to prefects to prohibit meetings likely to result in disorder between those who favor Italy's participation in the war and those who favor continued neutrality.

When Extremists shouted that this prohibition was a plan to prevent Italy taking part in the war, the Premier answered amid applause: "I do not know whether our nation is destined to march to war, but if this shall be the case, we must all unanimously obey the orders of the Fatherland and the King."

AUSTRIAN ADVANCE IS CHECKED.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1915

HAVING EYES, THEY SEE NOT.

MEN give finality to many things that time soon alters. This is well brought out by an article in an old copy of the Glasgow Advertiser of November 5th, 1859, that a resident of this city submitted to the Review. In that year there was a terrible gale which strewed the English coasts with many bodies and the wreckage of many ships. This was the time when armoured ships of war, partly propelled by steam, were first coming into use. The article describes the storm and mentions how anxiously Englishmen watched the performance of four first line battleships of the Channel fleet. The article says:

> "The vessels were of novel construction and armament, utterly different from those with which Nelson kept the seas; the crews were but newly organized."

The performance of these ships under the action of a great storm gave complete satisfaction, and the writer of this article attributes the success of the squadron almost entirely to seamanship, although he had previously said the crews were newly organized. He says further:

> "Steam, in fact, can never be more than an auxiliary, and for the obvious reason that no vessel can carry fuel for more than a few days' cruise. In times of war, a squadron would be compelled to reserve its coals for the actual period of an engagement, and to rely, in the main, on its sails, or, in other words, on its sailors. Manoeuvres during action will be greatly facilitated, and probably, indeed, altogether changed, by the introduction of steam power, but beyond such assistance, on that and other emergencies, the new element will do but little. To steam thirty or forty days on end without taking in fresh supplies of fuel, a vessel must be as big as the Great Eastern; in fact, it was that very condition which first determined the dimensions of the great ship. Ordinary vessels of war must either be dependent upon fresh supplies week after week, or they must rely upon their sails, as they did forty years ago."

Note that this was written only a little more than fifty years ago. What was stated with emphasis and finality as never becoming more than an auxiliary, has become the sole propelling power of the largest and strongest ships, of war vessels, as well as of merchantmen. It was stated, because the mind could not see beyond the difficulties of the new motive power for ships. The same incapacity to see beyond difficulties or to admit the impossibility of overcoming them, is the difference between progress and inactivity, between reform and stagnation, between a prophet and a man of no vision. The world is full of the blind. Note what the Liberals thought, or at least asserted, of Germany. They said there was no emergency, no fear of Germany, when that country had been preparing for this war for years, and preparing for the most brutal and barbarous strife among civilized nations that has taken place in modern times. Note, also, what was said of Sir John Macdonald's proposition to build a transcontinental railway, the C. P. R.—it would never pay for its axle grease. The same criticism applies to many modern inventions; they were impossible until someone performed them. The finality with which many men of short vision or of blinded perception give to their statements, time often puts to scorn.

PATRIOTISM AND PRODUCTION.

PATRIOTISM without production is an empty sound. If ever there was a time when, by your deeds, you are required to be known, it is now. Now, when the Empire is at war; now, when many of the regular channels of supply are closed; now, when men in millions have been summoned from the paths of industry to the inferno of destruction; now, when Britain is fighting for Belgium's right to live; now, when the world's liberties are at stake; now, when Germany seeks to prostrate Britain even as she has prostrated Belgium; now, when Germany threatens the forty million people of England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales with starvation; now, when the enemy is bombarding peaceful towns and vilages, slaughtering innocent and harmless women and children; now, when fertile fields and fruitful gardens of other lands are lying in waste and swollen with death; now is the time when Canada is called upon to put forth her mightiest effort to help stem the tide of destruction, to aid the Empire, and to profit herself.

In entering upon the campaign in which it is now engaged, the Department of Agriculture of the Dominion has entered upon a task that should do untold good. It is not that our farmers needed altogether to be prompted to benefit themselves, but that perhaps some of them do not entirely recognize the seriousness of the present and the more than probable critical conditions of the future. If the war were to end tomorrow, there would still be need for every effort in productiveness, for many years must elapse before the devastation that has been caused can be remedied or repaired. Unhappily, the probabilities are that the gigantic conflict will continue for many months yet, in which case the mind of man cannot fathom or foresee the damage that will have been done to every form of industry, to agriculture in particular, by the waste of life, by the wrecking of property, and by the spreading of desolation. It is in repairing the damage others cause that the farmers are called upon to aid. It is their mother country that cries to them.

The Agricultural Department is not alone holding conferences at many points in the country, but it is engaged, as will be seen by the announcement elsewhere, in distributing large quantities of literature telling how the farmer can best serve the interests of the Empire, display his grateful sense of patriotism and bring profit to himself. In brief and explicit language, that all who run may read and understand, is pointed out the needs of the situation and how those needs can be met. Above all, the advice is given to avoid waste. Everything can be utilized. Nothing need be thrown away as valueless. The economy of production is in saving.

The wisest can learn something by reading, and in the bulletins and reports prepared and written by experts and men of practical science, farmers will find hints, suggestions and information of the greatest possible value at this season, and such as will advantage both their land and themselves for all time. They will also aid them in that duty to the Empire which is of such pressing and instant importance that to shirk it is to be criminal. Copies of the publications of the Department can be had upon addressing the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. No postage is required on the application.

WAR CONTRACTS.

THE REVIEW has received the following clipping from Mr. Burnham, M. P., who remarks that those people in Peterborough who wished him to interest himself in getting war contracts and similar favours for them and for Peterborough, will now see how improper such an act is considered by Parliament. Many such requests are innocently made, but a closer inspection of the reasons why and why not will show why a member of Parliament must not do any such thing as is referred to in the following parliamentary comment, taken from Friday's issue of the Ottawa Journal (Con.). The statement regarding Mr. Garland is said to be incorrect:

> "The sensation of the day is the information contained in a return that W. F. Garland, the Conservative member of Parliament, had interested himself in securing war contracts for one E. Powell, of Ottawa, and had defended the charges made for the goods."

A LIBERAL NEWSPAPER'S CRITICISM.

THE OTTAWA FREE PRESS is the Liberal newspaper in Ottawa. Dealing with the Ontario tax, as proposed by the Hon. T. W. McGarry, the Ottawa Free Press says the Ontario Government has not dealt with conditions of a state of war like individuals, that is, by cutting down expenditure and buying fewer luxuries. This is precisely what many leading economists do not advocate. They say hard times, such as those arising from war, should be bridged in a measure by governments proceeding with as many public works as possible. The Ottawa newspaper says in part, and the Toronto Star should note the last paragraph in particular:

> "There are three points in favour of Hon. Mr. McGarry's special war year tax that are lacking in the special taxes of the Dominion Government, namely: It is in a sense a war tax; it is spread fairly over the people of the province, hitting rich and poor in proportion to their wealth, and by it every man will know exactly how much he is paying.
>
> "As individuals, we meet the extra expense of the war conditions by cutting down on the luxuries we have been accustomed to. We try as far as we can to save on things that are not altogether necessary, the money we are called upon to pay, because of the special conditions imposed by the war. But the governments who are managing our public affairs for us do not follow this plan. There is no indication that it has even been considered.
>
> "There will be some complaint that the Ontario tax should not have been confined to property alone. We don't sympathize with this, however. If the people of Ontario are to be called upon to pay extra for war conditions, then all should pay, the man who puts the surplus of his income in the bank, as well as the one who puts it into a home. If the tax is necessary, it seems to be fairly apportioned."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

MR. NORMAN HAPGOOD, who is to address the Canadian Club in Montreal on Monday on "War and Progress," is editor of Harper's Weekly, and one of the outstanding literary men in the United States. He was born in Chicago in 1868, and educated at Harvard University. After a lengthy journalistic experience he became editor of Collier's Weekly, a position he retained for ten years. A year and a half ago he became editor of Harper's Weekly. He is the author of numerous essays, including one on Daniel Webster, another on Abraham Lincoln, one on George Washington, and also one on "Industry and Progress."

OFTENTIMES an acrimonious debate loses much of its unpleasantness and sting by having a happy turn given to some of its phases. Speaking in the House of Commons on Wednesday with reference to the naval question. Mr. Burnham was asked what he would do with the Rainbow and Niobe, if the Naval Act had been repealed. He replied:

"I would have taken the Niobe and Rainbow, put them on the end of my tooth-pick and presented them to the first passerby."

HE MAY NOT BE A HOLDUPMAN- BUT IF HE ISN'T HE SURE MISSED HIS VOCATION!

OFFICERS FOR SECOND CORPS

Names of Heads of Various Branches are Announced

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—The names of the officers commanding the different branches of the services which will compose the second contingent are announced.

Col. Sissons of Medicine Hat, will go as brigadier in command of three regiments of cavalry from the west. Col. Thacker of Halifax, will command the artillery. The medical service will be under the command of Col. Fotheringham, of Toronto, and the engineers will be commanded by Col. Houliston, of Halifax, formerly of Quebec.

The infantry will be divided into three brigades, the eastern brigade to be commanded by Col. Landry, of Quebec, with Major T. M. McVicty, of St. John, as brigade major; the Ontario brigade will be commanded by Col. Septimus Denison, of Toronto, with Col. Stewart, of Ottawa, as brigade major; the western brigade will be commanded by Col. Ketchan, of Winnipeg.

One View of the War

When I but consider the word war I feel a shock, as if one spoke to me of witchcraft, inquisition, some dead and distant thing, abominable, monstrous, unnatural.

When we hear of cannibals we smile with pride and proclaim our superiority over those savages.

What are savages, real savages—those who fight to eat the victims or those who fight to kill, merely to kill?

Those youthful soldiers of the line speeding along yonder are destined to death, just as the flocks of sheep driven along the roads by a butcher. They are destined to fall on a plain, their heads cleft by a stroke from a sword or their breast pierced by a bullet. And these are young men who could work, produce, be useful. Their fathers are old and poor; their mothers, who during twenty years have loved and worshipped them, as mothers can worship, will learn in six months or perhaps a year that the son, the child, the big child, brought up with so much trouble, with so much money, with so much love, was thrown into a hole like a dead dog after his body, riddled by a bullet, had been trampled and crushed into pulp by the charge of cavalry. Why have they killed her boy, her noble boy, her only hope, her pride, her life?

She cannot tell. Yes, why?—Guy de Maupassant.

No Heart in It.

A Broad street employer of a temperamental stenographer is a man of practical sense and real kindness who wants the girl to succeed at her business. The other day he called her into his private office and had a fatherly talk with her. Later one of her colleagues in the same building met her in the elevator.

"Say, Gladys," she said, "what's this about your boss having a heart to heart talk with you this morning?"

"Heart nothing," responded the temperamental creature, tossing her blond locks like an oriflamme of war. "What he handed to me hadn't no more heart in it than there is in a slab of liver at a ten cent beanery. See?"

Which is one reason why girl stenographers can be hired at $6 a week.—New York Sun.

Morocco Leather.

Sumac, the powdered leaf of the sumac plant, the finest varieties of which grow in Sicily, is used in tanning goatskins, and sumac gives a clear, white tannage, unaffected by the action of light and therefore suitable for dyeing into colors where permanence of shade is desired. A genuine "morocco" is goatskin tanned with pure sumac, but there are many upholsterers who could not give this definition offhand. Goatskins dyed with babool pods or similar barks are only imitation morocco, although it takes an expert to discover the difference. Long wear, of course, reveals the deception. Roan leathers are sumac tanned sheepskins.—Manchester Guardian.

DIVINE ORDER TO THE KAISER

Speech Made by Emperor Seven Years Ago

A remarkable speech, said to have been made by the Kaiser at a secret council meeting in Potsdam in June, 1908, at which the German Emperor announced his decision to go to war, forms a chapter of William Le Queux's new book, "German Spies in England," published today. The author says he has obtained the report of the proceedings from a German in high position holding pro-British views, who was present at the meeting.

The Kaiser began by declaring that "after long years of fervent prayer, light has at last come to me. The outlook is, I admit, dark, but we need not despair for God, our great ally, has given into our hands the means of saving our Empire from the dangers which are threatening its happiness and welfare.

You know what I mean. It is that wonderful invention which His Excellency Count Zeppelin was enabled, through the grace of the Lord to make for the safeguarding and glory of our beloved Fatherland.

To Lead Germany Out.

"In this invention God has placed the means at my disposal to lead Germany triumphantly out of her present difficulties and to make once and for all the good words of our poet, 'Deutschland, Deutchsland Uber Alles.'

"Yes, gentlemen, Germany has everything in the world. The first power on earth, both in peace and war. That is the peace which I have been ordered by God to conquer for her, and which I will conquer for her with the help of the Almighty."

The Smperor, according to this sercet report, then went on to unfold a scheme by which this end was to be accomplished. When sufficiently large Zeppelins were built, England's North Sea channel and Atlantic fleets would be destroyed. "After which nothing on earth can prevent the landing of our army on British soil and its triumphant march to London. "Fast steamers belonging to the Hamburg-American and North German lines would be relied on for the transport of the invading army."

At Kaiser's Bidding.

The war would be against Great Britain and France, said the Kaiser. Russia was suffering too much from the effects of her war with Japan to enter the conflict. The Emperor went on to speak of the United States as a country "where even now I rule supreme, where almost half the population is either German birth or German descent, and where three million German voters do my bidding at the presidential elections.

"Their country would next be taught a lesson. German power would be supreme in South America and South Africa, among other things, the German flag would 'wave over the holy shrine of Jerusalem.'"

The program ends with the declaration: "That accomplished, I shall unite all the people of the white race in a powerful alliance for the purpose of coping, under German auspices with the yellow peril, which is becoming more formidable with every year."

Mr. L. Queux says he handed this report to the British Goverament for its consideration, that it was placed before certain members of the Cabinet, and that it is still in the archives of the confidential department.

Major H. F. Leonard, city clerk of Brantford, officer commanding D. Squadron 25th Brant Dragoons, has been gazetted Brevet Lieut.-Colonel.

Her Husband's Twin Brother

A Story of a Deserted Wife

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

Donald Brewer, a handsome young fellow with light hair, blue eyes and a pleasant smile on his lips, was walking on Main street swinging a light cane. Pretty girls were moving hither and thither, for Donald was in the shopping district, and it was the hour when the stores were much crowded. He was an admirer of beauty, and his expression indicated that he was reveling in the display. His heart was light, and when a young man is in happy mood the appeal of fair faces and trim figures is especially strong.

Who is this young woman advancing slowly with a little girl not four years old clinging to her skirt? Donald thought her prettier than any one he had yet met. Her glance met his, and with a cry she sprang to him, threw her arms about his neck and cried out in a sweet, appealing voice:

"Oh, Walter, why did you leave me? Come back! Do, Walter, dearest, come back and all will be forgiven."

Donald Brewer's admiration for the fair sex was general, and he preferred that the favors he received should be general. This was altogether too particular. Besides, it was too public, and, like most men worthy of the name, he detested "scenes."

He assured the lady that she had mistaken him for some one else. This only occasioned a burst of grief and reproaches. The child began to cry, a crowd collected, and a policeman came hurrying up to discover the cause of the blocking of the sidewalk. He saw a young woman clinging to a young man who was evidently not as well pleased as he should have been. Donald explained that she had mistaken him for some one else. The lady explained that he was her husband, who had deserted her. The policeman evidently believed the latter story and viewed Donald with disfavor.

"I think," he said to the woman, "we'd better go to the police officer. You can make a charge against him if you like, and that'll bring the matter into the courts."

"Don't, Walter; don't force me to do that. Come home, and we will again be happy."

And she wept on his bosom.

Walter signified to the policeman that he preferred to go with him. So the party adjourned to the police station, where Walter sent out for his mother and other friends to identify him, and the lady sent for a sister-in-law. All of the former pronounced him Donald Brewer, and the latter declared that, though he resembled him, he was not her brother. This satisfied every one except the lady, who was amazed and disappointed that they should be so obtuse. When Donald left her she took his hand and, looking at him appealingly out of a pair of liquid brown eyes, made a last appeal while the pretty little girl begged papa to come home and not make mamma cry.

It makes a lot of difference to a man when appealed to by a pretty woman whether he is free or wedlocked. Under certain circumstances—action for alimony, for instance—the word wedlock is suggestive of bolts and bars. Donald, being exonerated from being a fugitive husband, assured the poor woman of his deep sympathy and that he was deeply touched by her faith, despite proof to the contrary, that he belonged to her. If she would give him her address he would call upon her and would be glad to serve her in any way.

A beautiful hope shone in her eyes, and, giving him a parting look, she said that she would trust him once more, sure that he would not fail her. Then, to evade observation, she asked him to call a carriage, and, getting into it with her little girl, who insisted on giving papa a parting kiss, she was driven away smiling through tears.

A few days later Donald called upon the grass widow. He found her a good deal changed. Her sister-in-law had convinced her that there was a doubt as to Donald being her husband. When she came into the room to receive him she paused on the threshold, searching every line of his countenance. Then beautiful blushes rose to her cheeks at remembering the caresses she had given him, and she hung her head in shame at the remembrance of the caresses she had bestowed upon one who had turned out to be a stranger.

What is forced upon us we don't want. What we cannot get we crave. Donald, who up to this moment feared the lady would claim him, was now disappointed that she did not. Those who are chained wish to be free; those who are free wish to be chained. In the words of the crusty old bachelor, marriage is something one half the world is trying to get into and the other half is trying to get out of.

Donald had not experienced any pleasurable sensation in the caresses he had received the day before; he was dreading being forced into great trouble at establishing his identity. Now he longed to have those arms about his neck and those appealing eyes looking into his. An idea occurred to him. It was an idea not worthy of him, but it was irresistible. While a few days before he had been telling the truth to keep out of trouble, he now yielded to a temptation to tell a lie that would get him back into trouble and keep him there. Why is it that a man who will protect himself circumspectly against ordinary entanglements will plunge into a slough of despond where a woman is concerned?

Donald Brewer was young and reckless and behaved accordingly. He smiled at the lady in a way to cause her to doubt a decision she had just made that he was not her husband. A quick glance of inquiry, followed by a step forward, then a step backward, and she sprang toward him. He caught her in his arms, and her head sank on his bosom.

Donald was facing, as it happened, a mirror, and when he caught sight of his reflection holding in his arms a woman whom he had permitted to think was her husband a sense of the dishonor of his act and its probable consequences rose within him to plague him.

"What a confounded fool and villain I am!" he mentally exclaimed.

Shocked at what he had done, he began at once to conjure up some method of getting out of the trap he had laid for himself. Taking her hands in his, he disengaged her embrace, and, holding her apart so that he could look her in the eyes, he set about framing a statement that would put the matter back where it was before he had made the break. But one look out of those brown eyes bereft him of the will to do so. He was like one in deep water struggling to rise. As soon as he got to the surface a heavy hand pushed him back again. He felt as though he were sinking deeper and deeper in a moral quicksand.

"Forgive me," he muttered and took her in his arms again.

Now, it doesn't matter whether he asked her to forgive him for thus deceiving her or for having deserted her, for at that moment he saw reflected in the glass the sister-in-law who had freed him from the imputation of being the deserter. She was looking at the pair locked in a mutual embrace with an expression of extreme dissatisfaction.

He was appalled.

The lady he was holding in his arms, fortunately for him, looked and, seeing the intruder, relieved him from the necessity of disengaging himself.

"Given!" said she who had entered reproachfully.

"Ruth," replied the other, "you were mistaken, after all. He is Walter."

Ruth gave Donald a look which he remembered to his dying day.

"I grant," she said, "that you may be Walter's twin brother, for villainy seems to run in the blood."

This opened the door for at least a temporary escape.

"You are right," he said, catching at a straw. "I am Walter's twin brother."

Both women drew back and stared at Donald, who stood like Ajax defying the lightning.

"Walter Schofield had no twin brother," said Ruth.

"None that he would acknowledge. I was regarded as the black sheep of the family. At twelve years of age I run away, and my name was never after mentioned in the family."

The grass widow by this time had returned to a state of wondering doubt.

"We have had," said Ruth, "one black sheep of your family in ours, and we have no use for another."

She pointed to the door.

Assuming a proud innocence the very opposite of what he felt, Donald said:

"I am aware of my brother's injustice to his angel wife. I have been tempted to do evil that good might come. I was disposed to take advantage of the resemblance between us to right the wrongs he has done. I have failed. Au revoir."

With a low bow he strutted out of the room and the house, Ruth looking after him with a glance of indignant contempt, while Given evidently did not know whether to let him go or detain him.

A month passed, during which Donald Brewer dreaded every day lest he should in some way be punished for having yielded to temptation and formed innumerable plans to set himself right in the matter. There is but one way for persons who have erred to set themselves right, and that is confession. When Donald had turned down a plan or two a day he finally arrived at the confessional state.

He wrote a long letter to the "wife of his twin brother," giving a detailed account of his temptation and the cause of it and acknowledging that his final statement was false from beginning to end. His excuse was one which with a woman will always win. It was that he had found her so charming and sympathized so deeply with her and her lovely child that he simply couldn't help it.

And here is the beginning to a sequel of this story of which only the bare facts can be given. Donald called by invitation on the widow and was forgiven, and his call was followed by a number of others. The lady was about to apply for a divorce in order that she might marry him when her husband conveniently died, thus saving trouble, expense and time, which last to Donald was the most important of the three, for he was madly in love and had been waiting long enough already.

All this happened years ago. What was at one time a serious matter is now one on which Donald Brewer occasionally ventures to crack a joke. He is an affectionate stepfather to his wife's child, and her aunt Ruth has come to a point where she considers that he had some excuse for his altogether objectionable action. But women are apt to think that love covers a multitude of sins.

Points for Mothers

Bedtime Romping.

Do not let the children romp too much just at bedtime and give only a light supper if they are to sleep well. A little child is active all day, and as bedtime approaches the brain and body must be quieted.

One of the greatest dangers to a child is nerve fatigue, which leads to more serious troubles in later life, and the two best preventives of nervousness in children are nourishing food and plenty of sleep. One of the best authorities says that for the first six months a baby should sleep from sixteen to eighteen hours a day; from six months to one year a child needs from fourteen to fifteen hours sleep; at two years, thirteen to fourteen hours; at four years, eleven to twelve hours, and from six to ten years, from ten to eleven hours.

Nine hours' sleep is needed for children from ten to sixteen, and it remains for parents to see that they get it at this most important period, when school hours and lessons are long and the physical body is changing from childhood to young man and womanhood.

This is the time when nervous disorders are most apt to show, and the child who has been trained to get plenty of restful sleep at regular hours will get through the best.

Does Food Influence Our Looks?

You can, according to the opinion of a distinguished food expert, alter your children's features by varying their food.

If your little daughter, for instance, has too heavy a face, too massive a chin, and you are afraid that she will grow up unprepossessing cease to give her foods with starch in them, and she will become dainty and graceful.

Should she, on the other hand, be too slender of feature, with a tiny chin, you can develop rounded curves by giving her more starch than she has been having.

Man is what he eats, says the expert, and he then mentions such divergencies from the normal facial type as "starch chin," "onion chin," "tea drinker's teeth," "full lipped sugar mouth" and "potato lip." These divergencies, he says, are caused by the articles of diet named.

The food eaten makes an enormous difference in people's appearance, and, though it cannot alter the framework of the adult face, it can that of young children while their bones are still growing.

Girls Who Ape Their Elders.

The schoolgirl nowadays wears her hair in the latest style; her skirts are as tight as the law allows and as long as her height permits. Her feet are covered with the smartest French heeled slippers, and the sheerest silk gauze stockings pretend to cover her ankles. She affects the debutante slouch and a languid air, and no one could tell by looking at her face that it had ever known soap and water, for it is often so caked with rouge and powder that the natural complexion is quite concealed.

Where are the maternal eyes when the girls' clothes are ordered? It is decidedly time that girls became girls again and not young ladies of the world at fourteen or fifteen. Mothers should insist on their daughters remaining children in dress and custom until they have left school. They will be women long enough. They should not be allowed to cut their childhood short.

Teaching Consideration.

A wise, loving mother will make it her special duty to train her little ones to be willing to please others. They so quickly learn to regard it as an honor to be allowed to carry a message, they soon find a pleasure in resigning a toy to a younger brother or sister. Some children are difficult to manage, but generally they are tractable, and so much depends on how we treat them. We forget too often the injunction, "Fathers, provoke not your children to wrath." We are very prone to be polite to our casual guest and most abrupt in manner to our children. A child's employments are to him as momentous as our own occupations, and to be hastily told to run a message when he is absorbed in a thrilling fairy tale and to expect him to obey with smiling alacrity is perhaps not a little unreasonable. Yet if he is addressed gently the chances are he will not only obey cheerfully, but be pleased to help you.

Too Much Amusement.

It never seems to occur to some mothers that they are responsible for the nervousness of their children by trying to amuse them too much. Sometimes it is just as well to set the baby down on a blanket with some pretty toys near at hand and then leave him to himself. He may set up a howl, but that will not do him any harm. Let him cry for awhile. It will help expand his lungs, and then he will begin to look at the toys and may be found later playing with them or tickling his own toes. He will be quiet and may have learned a few things for himself. Don't try to amuse your child all the time, as it prevents his taking the initiative, makes him dependent upon you, and you often weary him with too much attention.

Sterling Coin.

An example of the romance of words is to be found in "sterling," a word early associated with British coinage also with Easter. Fred W. Burgess, in his "Chats on Old Coins," remarks that "sterling" was applied to the quality of the mintage, which was examined periodically at Easter. Hence the term "Easterling," or "sterling," denoted coins of true weight and value as last attested. It is interesting to learn that Queen Mary was the first English sovereign to date her coinage, which she did in 1553, using Roman numerals. The type of the Mary shilling is historically of particular interest in that it is the only period of English coinage on which joint sovereigns were represented face to face. This peculiarity gave rise to the lines:

Still amorous, fond and billing,
Like Philip and Mary on a shilling.

SILVER TRAY

genial relationship that had always existed between Major Medd and himself. During their ten years of partnership their relations had always been of the most amicable character.

Mr. Hall considered that the saying of good-bye to Major Medd was an important occasion in the history of the Peterborough Law Association. He touched briefly upon the present European conflict, between freedom on one side, and despotism and tyranny on the other. Major Medd was courageously making a great sacrifice but he was doing it for freedom and for the Motherland. His beloved partner in life was however making an equally splendid sacrifice, and was equally entitled to the honor. Before sitting down he presented Major Medd with the silver tray bearing the above inscription.

'Twas Hard to Say Good-bye.

Major Medd in replying expressed how difficult it was for him to sever his connection with the association. He assured them of the thanks of Mrs. Medd and himself and for the many things said. He felt that the members of the bar association could largely direct and mould public feeling and public sentiment, and they should endeavor to foster the ultimate—the spirit of loyalty and patriotism to the Motherland. Upon resuming his seat three hearty cheers and a tiger were given with great gusto by all present, followed by three for Mrs. Medd and three for the King.

Previous to the presentation the association transacted regular business, the meeting being their annual one. All of last year's officers were re-elected. Secretary Jos. Wearing read the following report which sums up the activities of the Association during the past year.

The annual report of the Peterborough Law Association for the year 1914.

To the members of the Association:

The Executive Committee beg leave to present the following report for 1914.

Owing to pressure of business Mr. E. L. Goodwill found it necessary to resign from the position of Secretary and Librarian of the Association and Mr. Joseph Wearing was appointed in his place. During his term of office Mr. Goodwill did a great deal of excellent work in connection with the library and was also at all times assiduous in the discharge of his duties as secretary.

During the year the Association lost two of its members. In the early part of the year Mr. L. M. Hayes was appointed Senior Judge of the County of Wellington and while the members of the Association greatly regretted losing Mr. Hayes from their midst they felt very greatly honoured that one of the members of this Association should be chosen for this position. In September Mr. R. E. Wood who was Crown Attorney and Clerk of the Peace, died after a long illness. Mr. Wood was Crown Attorney and Clerk of the Peace for about thirty years and at the time of his death many bore testimony to the fact that during his term of office he had discharged his duties with diligence and justice as befitted an officer of the Crown.

During the year Mr. O. A. Langley of Lakefield was appointed Police Magistrate for the County of Peterborough and it is the unanimous opinion of the Associtaion that Mr. Langley will fill this position with credit both to himself and the Association.

Mr. C. R. Widdifield, son of Judge Widdifield of Owen Sound, entered into partnership with Mr. G. N. Gordon in May last and the Association is glad to welcome him as a new member.

Arrangements have been made to make some radical changes in the library. The Law Reports will be placed in alphabetical order instead of chronological order and the new catalogue will be completed and printed before the end of the coming year. A number of new books have been added to the library during the year and it is the intention of the Executive to thoroughly overhaul the library and make it as convenient and up-to-date as possible. We have again, however, to call attention to the fact that too many members of the Association transfer books from the library to their offices or homes without giving any notice to the librarian of their removal. This practice should be discontinued.

Respectfully submitted.

W. F. JOHNSTON,
President.

JOSEPH WEARING,
Secretary.

STREET LIGHTS ARE DISCUSSED

Ald. Duffus Claims Hydro Engineers Experimented at Expense of City

Manager H. O. Fisk of the Utilities Commission was present at the meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee last evening and explained "that the city's till was not tapped for $1,250 by the Hydro-Commission of Ontario" as many citizens believed. The Hydro Commission was supplying the power for the street lights and from December, 1913, till October, 1914, the total cost of the current was $1,250. During the ten months, however, half the lights were turned off but as both transformers are operated a full reduction of the power was not realized, thus resulting in a loss to the city. The loss to the city was some $30 per month while against that was the saving of the carbons and the globes of the lights not lighted.

The committee voiced regrets that the lights were placed as they are on the main street and Ald. Duffus took occasion to remark that while he thought the hydro electric scheme was "the" thing for any city he also thought that the hydro engineers performed work for Peterborough for which they cannot be forgiven. In his mind they experimented at the expense of Peterborough.

A Mistake Made.

Mr. Fisk remarked that at present the hydro officials have too much work to do. As to the work performed in Peterborough he remarked that the placing of the cables underground was a mistake. They should be aerial. The difference the aerial lines make to the appearance of the street would hardly be noticed and yet it would be much easier to repair.

Ald. Duffus asked Mr. Fisk if he was working on plans for extending the lighting system of George St. to Smith St. and Romaine St. The manager of the commission said he was working on plans for a complete lighting system for the whole city.

Asked whether he thought the fact that the Radial Railway Co.'s guy wires were placed on the city's poles affected the lighting system. Mr. Fisk stated that he did not think the presence of the wires on the poles would affect the system. He could not state whether the vibration would affect the lamps or carbons. One light had been broken near the C.P.R. depot by a trolley pole jumping from the wire.

The committee discussed the advisability of having all the lights on George Street lighted and Ald. Green remarked that the Commission would not have to pay any more for the power to light all the lamps but the city would have to pay more as as city pays $50.50 per lamp per year. Chairman Ald. Duffus was asked to secure information on the subject and present a report to a future meeting.

ARGUMENTS ADVANCED FOR GRANTS FROM CITY FATHERS

TOO MUCH HOT AIR IN CITY HALL BUILDING

Trust Commissioners Asked for Better System of Ventilation

THE MARKET TOLLS

At the meeting of the property committee held last night it was decided to call for tenders for the market tolls for the year beginning April 1st.

The City Trust Commissioners will be requested to provide a better ventilation system for the City Hall. The committee room is particularly faulty in this respect. The commissioners will also be asked to install a light in the hall leading to the City Clerk's office.

The matter of cutting down the number of telephones in the City Hall was left to the chairman for a report.

WIRING INSPECTOR IS NOT APPOINTED

The Hydro Electric Commission of Ontario seems very anxious to have the wiring inspector appointed for Peterborough, and seems equally anxious that the man apointed be H. A. Fife. A sheaf of communications was on the fire, water and light committee's fyle in regard to this matter and at last night's meeting the chairman cleared them all away. It was the unanimous opinion of the committee that a wiring inspector would be a good man for the city, but the present condition of the money market hardly warranted the Council making the appointment. It was decided that no action be taken.

TENDERS ON UNDERGROUND WORK FOR THE FIRE ALARM SYSTEM

From all appearances, Ald. J. J. Duffus, chairman of the fire, water and light committee, is exercising all possible care that any work executed by his department this year will be performed in a manner that will in years to come reflect credit upon the 1915 Council. Last evening the tenders for the underground work on the fire alarm system were opened, and believing that few of the members of the committee knew much about that class of work, Ald. Duffus had H. O. Fisk, manager of the Utilities Commission, and Messrs. Doane, Smith and Kellman of the Bell Telephone Company present. These gentlemen very willingly imparted to the committee advice about the proposed underground work and electrical matters in general. When they were about to withdraw, Ald. Duffus thanked them sincerely for their assistance, and Mr. Doane in reply remarked that it was but a pleasure for them as citizens to assist the city officials in discharging their duties.

Tenders Received.

Canadian Independent Telephone Company, of Toronto: 1,200 feet of 6-pair fire alarm cable, approximate weight per 1,000 feet, 1,700 lbs.

3,350 feet 2-pair fire alarm cable, approximate weight per 1,000 feet, 1,420 lbs.

4,100 feet 1-pair fire alarm cable, approximate weight per 1,000 feet, 860 lbs.

Total cost for material necessary machinery and labor, $1410.

Standard Underground Cable Co. of Hamilton

1,200 feet 6-pair fire alarm cable, approximate weight per 1,000 feet, 1,700 lbs.

3,350 feet 2-pair fire alarm cable, approximate weight per 1,000 feet, 1,420 lbs.

4,100 feet 1-pair fire alarm cable, approximate weight per 1,000 feet, 860 lbs.

Total amount, $1074.83.

Canadian General Electric Co., Toronto:

1,200 feet 6-pair fire alarm cable, approximate weight per foot, 2.05 lbs.

3,350 feet 2-pair fire alarm cable, approximate weight per foot 1.16 lbs.

4,100 feet 1-pair fire alarm cable approximate weight per foot .82 lbs.

Total amount, $1034.01.

The Northern Electric Co., Toronto:

1,200 feet 6-pair fire alarm cable approximate weight per foot, 2.05 lbs

3,350 feet 2-pair fire alarm cable approximate weight per foot 1.16 lbs

4,100 feet 1-pair fire alarm cable approximate weight per foot .82 lbs

Total amount, $1045.49.

Considering the fact that the Canadian Independent Telephone Co. of Toronto included labor and the necessary machinery in their specifications, the committee favored their tender. On motion of Ald. Green, their tender was accepted on condition that the chairman be assured that the cable and covering is satisfactory, that the work and workmanship be guaranteed for five years and that the work be completed in sixty days. The City Clerk will write to the Independent Telephone Co. immediately acquainting them with the feeling of the committee.

$700 For Home Guard $300 to Medical Association

The Finance Committee in session yesterday afternoon peeled $1,000 off the city's roll and just spent an hour performing the operation. It did not all go to the same place. The Peterborough Home Guard and Civilian Rifle Association received $700 and the Medical Association received $300.

The members of the Home Guard present were E. L. Goodwill, R. E. Layfield, F. D. Kerr, Col. Miller, F. Linton, E. F. Mason, and W. H. Dunsford. Mr. Layfield acting as spokesman, told the committee that the proposed expenditure of the Home Guard for this year was $2100. Last November they had a deputation wait upon the city council and ask for $1000. The 1914 council did not care to grant so much but did grant $300 and promised that if they represented the people in 1915 the Home Guard's interests would be cared for. Mr. Layfield briefly reviewed the work of the Home Guard and pointed out how the money was required to supply rifles and ammunition. Already some 584 men have taken part in target practice.

Col. Miller, E. L. Goodwill and F. D. Kerr also spoke urging the committee to favorably consider their request. The deputation then withdrew.

Ald. Green opened the discussion by remarking that he moved the resolution at the December sitting of the council by which the Home Guard were given $300 and he felt that the organization was entitled to the request of $700.

Mayor Buller voiced similar feeling pointing out the excellent work the officers of the Home Guard is executing and remarking how the officers are spending their own money quite freely for the cause. He, therefore, thought it was up to the city to grant the $700. Ald. Green's motion, to make such a grant on condition that the Home Guard furnish an agreement that when the organisation passes out of existence the rifles, range equipment, etc., becomes the property of the city, carried.

Medical Men Present.

The members of the medical association who were present were Dr. Greer, Dr. King, Dr. Sutton, Dr. Amys, Dr. Eastwood and Dr. Cameron. The latter acted as spokesman. He explained how the local medical association had been successful in securing the convention of medical men of Ontario and Ontario medical officers of health for Peterborough during the last week of May. The local association had not asked the city council to assist them in bringing the big convention to Peterborough but they did desire asking for $400 to assist defraying the expenses in connection with holding the convention. If the city did not assist it would fall to the lot of the medical men of Peterborough to stand all the expense. Dr. Cameron pointed out the value such a convention would be to the city by way of advertising.

Upon the withdrawal of the physicians Ald. Duffus stated that the convention of medical men of Ontario would mean a big thing for Peterborough and the $400 would be well spent. As the convention would assist mostly by advertising the city he proposed that part of the $400 might be placed in the estimates of the Manufacturers' Committee.

Ald. Green remarked that the presence of five or six hundred men in the city would mean the leaving of five or six thousand dollars in Peterborough. Another point which he brought out was the possibility of Peterborough manufacturers going into the manufacturing of surgical instruments which have previously been imported into Canada. Ald. Green concluded by stating that he was willing to make a grant of $300 to the medical profession.

Mayor Buller took the stand of granting $400 to the convention of medical men because all the delegates were influencial men in their respective communities and words of commendation for Peterborough by them would assist materially in booming this city.

It was decided on motion of Ald. Green and Johnston that a grant of $300 be made. The local medical association are preparing a very attractive circular containing facts about Peterborough. These circulars will be sent to all the delegates.

Municipal Association.

The committee decided to pay the usual fee of $25 and retain the city's membership in the municipal association.

Horticultural Society Grant.

It was decided to recommend to Duffus and Mayor Buller that the grant to the Horticultural Society be the same as last year which was $900.

Salvation Army Grant.

The matter of making a grant to the Salvation Army Band for giving band concerts in Victoria Park during the summer months was laid over till Monday night's council meeting.

$4,300 for Library Board.

The estimates of the Library Board were presented to the meeting. The total amount was $4,300, an increase of $300 over the amount of last year's appropriation. It was resolved to grant the $4,300.

By-law for Debentures.

It was resolved on motion of Ald. the council the passing of a by-law authorizing the issuing of debentures to meet the expenditure of $13,000 for the laying of water mains by the Utilities Commission during the year 1914.

Refund Fine.

An order was made to have the city treasurer refund $19.35, which amount F. Blastorah was recently fined in Police Court. The judgment has since been quashed by Judge Huycke.

Industrial Association.

On motion of Ald. Green and Mayor Buller $150 grant was made to the Peterborough branch of the Ontario Industrial Association. It will enable the local organization to carry on the free employment agency till April 15th. The cheek will be made out to Mr. B. D. Hall, president of the local branch.

$100 FOR TRIP TO CONVENTION OF FIRE CHIEFS

Tie Vote on Original Motion Calling for $200

CHIEF SAYS IT'S A SCHOOL OF LEARNING

At last night's meeting of the fire, water and light committee three items in the estimates which were not decided upon at the last meeting were discussed. The first considered was "installation of new batteries at the fire station, $400." This would do away with an expenditure of $190 per year to the Bell Telephone Company. This company at present supplies the power for the fire alarm system, and the yearly cost could be overcome by installing the batteries. The committee decided, however, to let the matter of installing the batteries remain over till next year.

The next item was the $200 expenses of the Chief and chairman attending the convention of fire chiefs to be held this year in Cincinnati. Chief Howard explained that the convention was a school of learning, and he could not afford to miss it this year. If he were kept away from conventions he would be out of date in a few years, and he was sure the city desired him to be up-to-date. The Chief also was of the opinion that the chairman of the committee should accompany him.

Ald. Stratton asked Chief Howard if he really thought the city should pay $200 to send him to Cincinnati, considering the condition of the money market. The Chief remarked that this year above all others he should be up-to-date.

Ald. Green remarked that he was at New York two years ago, and the convention was a wonderful school of learning. He thought the Council would make a mistake in not sending Chief Howard to the convention, and he also would like to see the chairman of the fire, water and light committee attend.

Speaking as a manufacturer, Ald. Green said the fire brigade is a big asset to Peterborough and he wanted to see it up-to-date. One of the main items of knowledge imparted at the conventions was how to prevent fires, and in that respect Chief Howard has made good. For that reason he moved that the item be left in the estimates.

Ald. Straton spoke of this being a chance to keep down expenses, and therefore moved that the item be struck off. His motion was seconded by Ald. Weir.

Ald. Dobbin expressed himself as being in favour of the Chief and Ald. Duffus going to the convention, and seconded Ald. Green's motion. Ald. Green, Dobbin and Duffus voted for Ald. Green's motion, and Ald. Stratton, Weir and Evans against. Thus both motions were thrown out.

Ald. Green then moved that one hundred dollars be left in the estimates for expenses to the convention. Ald. Dobbin seconded the motion. Ald. Weir and Stratton made an amendment that the item be struck out, but the motion carried, Ald. Evans voting with Ald. Green and Ald. Dobbin.

The item of $200 for re-flooring the fire station was struck off.

This leaves the estimates at $19,976.11, while the appropriation of 1914 was $17,250. By motion of Ald. Green and Dobbin the committee will recommend to the City Council that the appropriation be $19,976.11. The City Clerk and Chief Howard will check over the figures.

LETTERS FROM SOLDIERS.

While the Review has received many interesting letters from friends and relatives of Canadians at the front, which we have published, we still want our friends to let us have others as they are received. Some of these may not appear of public interest to the friends receiving them, but when compared with other letters, may contain much valuable information. The people are interested in all of the Canadians at the front, and it is desirable that their interest should be gratified as much as possible. Any letters sent or handed us will be carefully preserved and returned to their owners.

DECREASE IN BAR RECEIPTS

The report of the chief license officer for Ontario shows that a good deal of trade formerly enjoyed by the hotel bars has been diverted to the liquor shops since the government enactment two years ago prohibiting the bars from selling bottled goods.

This has had a serious effect on the 5 per cent. commission on hotel bar receipts levied by the government, which last year fell off no less than $67,000 from 1913.

The result will probably be an advance in the cost of liquor shop licenses.

GERMAN TROOPS MOVE WITH SOME HESITATION

Fighting is Now Going on Over a Front of 250 Miles. But Little of the Tactics of the Opposing Forces Can be Explained — Germans in West Are Expected to Make a Culminating Attack.

PETROGRAD, Feb. 27.—Fighting is now progressing over an extent of 260 miles, reaching from the Vistula's lower reaches, near Bodzanow, through Przasnysz, Edvando, Ossowiec, Shabin, and away to Olyta and Kovno. This front is already named the left bank of the Niemen front and right bank of the Bobr and Narew front and the fighting with one small exception is all west of the line indicated by these rivers. Over the whole of this section the Germans are moving with deliberation and apparent hesitation, the meaning of which may be discovered later, in strong contrast with the head-long character of the advance on other sections where the Germans apparently hoped to carry everything before them in one magnificent dash, marching in the lightest possible order and except near the Vistula without supports or an organized rear. There are suspicious points about many of the phenomena of this exceptional advance, and they are variously interpreted.

The Austrians have certainly, as proved by orders discovered on prisoners, been told that the Russians were on the run, that no more hard storming of defensive positions were needed, and that the task was now only to pursue and conquer. The Germans have probably been told the same story to induce them to put forth their best efforts on both flanks of the Russian total front. The enemy has been painfully disillusioned already by the steady opposition met with in eastern Galicia and the fierce attacks made by Russians on the Niemen-Bobr Narew front.

Germans Plan Big Effort.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The continued progress which the French are said to be making in the Champagne district and the pressure which the allies, without attempting any great offensive, are declared to be bringing to bear on the German line in the west, have, according to news from Holland, induced the Germans to make another effort in the west before the allied forces reach their maximum strength.

By day and by night, say the Dutch newspapers, big motor cars loaded with German soldiers, are hurrying through Belgium to the western front, and the troops which had been sent to northern Belgium are going back to the trenches. The fact that some of the troops now passing through Belgium came from the eastern front suggests to the military observers that the Germans have decided that they are able to hold the Russians in their present positions, while the Germans are carrying out their new offensive in the west.

The silence of the German general staff, which yesterday simply said that there had been no change on either front, is taken in London as confirmation that some big move such as that suggested is under way. It is declared that the allies are displaying no uneasiness. They believe that the softness of the ground must prove a great disadvantage to the Germans, and although all their new troops are not yet ready that they will be able to repel any new attack.

During the last couple of days the British have slightly improved their positions in the region of La Bassee, while the French report further progress by their troops in the vicinity of Perthes and in the Argonne, and repeated successes by their artillery in destroying German guns and trenches.

FIRST AID FOR WEAK DIGESTION

Like Nearly Every Trouble Afflicting Mankind Indigestion is Due to Poor Blood

Almost everybody experiences times when the organs of digestion show painful signs of weakness. Some slight disturbance of the health starts the trouble; then the patient takes a dislike to food and dull, heavy pains in the abdomen give warning that the stomach is unable to do its proper work. Sometimes a false craving for food arises; if this is satisfied the result is additional torture—flatulence, a drowsy depression, sick headache and nausea are common signs of indigestion. The foolish practice of taking drastic, weakening purgatives at such times should be avoided. Indigestion arises from stomach weakness and the only effectual method of curing the trouble is to strengthen the feeble organs of digestion by supplying them with richer, purer blood. This is the true tonic treatment, by which natural method, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, achieve great results. These pills make the rich, red blood needed to strengthen the stomach, thus imparting a healthy appetite and curing indigestion and other stomach disorders. Mrs. Thos. Johnson, Hemford, N.S., says: "For five years I was a great sufferer from indigestion which wrecked me physically. I suffered so much that for days at a time I could not attend to my business. I had smothering spells so bad at times that I was afraid to lie down. I doctored and tried many medicines but with no benefit. I saw Dr. Williams' Pills advertised to cure the trouble and decided to try them. I had not been taking them long before I found that I had at last hit upon the right medicine. The improvement in my health was constant, and after I had used ten or twelve boxes I could eat and digest all kinds of food, and I felt physically better than I had done for years. I shall never cease to praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for they proved a real blessing to me."

You can get these pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TO TAKE CARE OF WOUNDED

Canadian Clearing Hospital Will be Started in France

SOME CASUALTIES

OTTAWA, Feb. 27.—Advices from London say that Surgeon General Jones, director of the medical services from Canada, has left for France to establish a clearing hospital so that all Canadian wounded may be sent to the Duchess of Connaught Hospital at Cliveden, in Buckinghamshire, as quickly as possible.

Canadian ladies, headed by Lady Drummond, are arranging for a distribution of comforts among the wounded Canadians.

One hundred and fifty out of the five hundred soldiers who recently arrived from Canada have gone to reinforce the Princess Patricias.

A Canadian Associated Press despatch received yesterday says: An officer who has just returned from the front states that the Canadians were in the trenches in the middle of this week, relieving English troops.

The Canadians suffered a loss of three killed and fourteen wounded. There is no confirmation of this in official quarters.

The following casualties among members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force were announced by the Militia Department last night:

BOTHA ADVANCES

South African Troops Land in German Southwest Africa

LONDON, Feb. 27.—A serious invasion of German Southwest Africa by the Union of South Africa forces is now under way. The troops which landed in Walfisch and Luderitz Bays are advancing along the railways from these ports to the main line, which runs north and south through virtually the whole length of the colony, while another force is concentrating in northern Cape Colony to advance from the south.

Gen. Botha himself is leading the forces, which advanced from Walfisch Bay, and is directing their operations. In a speech to his troops, Gen. Botha said the campaign would continue until the German colony was conquered, and he promised them also that the rebellion in the Union was being quelled. He said his troops would be joined by strong reinforcements, which would make their success certain.

ALLIED FLEETS BEGIN TO CLEAR THE DARDANELLES

Bombardment at Long Range is Renewed and Four Forts Are Utterly Destroyed, One of Them Fortified by the Germans — French Cruiser Penetrates the Straits in Safety for an Hour.

PARIS, Feb. 27.—An official communication issued by the French Minister of Marine yesterday confirms the demolition of the forts guarding the entrance to the Dardanelles, and says that mine-dragging operations are now proceeding in the straits. The communication follows:

"The bombardment of the forts at the entrance to the Dardanelles was resumed from a great distance on Thursday at eight o'clock in the morning. This was followed by a bombardment at shorter range. Four forts were completely destroyed, one of them was entirely fortified by the Germans. Mine-dragging in the straits is being affected under the protection of the armored and other cruisers of the combined fleet."

The Athens' correspondent of the Havas Agency sends the following despatch regarding the bombardment of the forts at the entrance to the Dardanelles by the French and British fleets:

"News received from the island of Tenedos Thursday night says that the bombardment of the Dardanelles continued with violence from nine o'clock in the morning until six in the evening. The fire from the forts was intense during part of the day, but diminished and ceased before nightfall.

"Forts Erthogroll, Sedd-el-Bahr and Orbanie suffered a great deal, especially Sedd-el-Bahr, which was on fire, the flames being seen from Tenedos. One of the allies' cruisers entered the strait during the evening and bombarded the forts for an hour. It then withdrew safely.

"The result of the fire of the Turkish forts is not definitely known, but it appears to be established that none of the allies' vessels has been seriously damaged."

An official announcement regarding French naval operations follows:

"The French torpedo-boat destroyer Dague, while escorting a convoy with provisions for Montenegro, struck an Austrian mine off the port of Antivari (Montenegro) on Feb. 24, and sank.

"Thirty-eight of the crew disappeared. The accident did not hinder finishing the work of provisioning and the return of the convoy.

"The French cruiser Desaix made a demonstration against Akabah (Arabia) on Feb. 23. A landing party aided by the ship's cannon, dispersed and put to flight a small band of Turks occupying the village."

The Dague was laid down in 1911. She was a vessel of 720 tons, 256 feet in length.

ALLIES ACCORD

They Have Agreement Regarding Reprisals on Germany

LONDON, Feb. 27.—France, Russia, Great Britain, Serbia and Belgium are said by British officials to be in absolute accord as to reprisals to be made on Germany, Austria and Turkey, in retaliation for the German submarine campaign. Britain was in conference with her allies concerning reprisals before the receipt of the last American note making informal represetnations looking to the discontinuance of submarine activity and to the admission of food to Germany for her civil population.
